Pakistan MPs thank China for support

The Senate of Pakistan also commended the government and people of China, led by President Xi Jinping, who showed leadership in this crisis through clarity of vision by taking decisive and timely measures to combat the Coronavirus effectively in China

A.M. BHATTI

ISLAMABAD: The Senate on Thursday passed a resolution unanimously by expressing its deep appreciation to the Chinese government and people for their unflinching role and timely assistance to Pakistan in the current coronavirus crisis. "The Senate of Pakistan, taking note of China's strong support and timely assistance to Pakistan during the current Coronavirus Crisis, expresses its deep appreciation to the Chinese government and people for their unflinching role as 'all weather friends' of Pakistan," said the resolution moved by the leader of the opposition Raja Zafarul Haq on behalf of all parties in the house. The resolution said China's support to Pakistan has helped combat COVID-19 by protecting our people and saving lives as well as providing our health workers with testing kits, protective gear and ventilators at a time when these were badly needed plus sending medical teams. "The Senate of Pakistan also commends the government and people of China, led by President Xi Jinping, who showed leadership in this crisis through clarity of vision by taking decisive and timely measures to combat the Coronavirus effectively in China. As 'Iron Brothers', both Pakistan and China are collectively confronting this 'common enemy', the coronavirus, which is a threat to humanity, irrespective of country, race or religion." In this context, the Senate of Pakistan rejects the baseless propaganda against China from certain quarters, which stems from geopolitical rivalry and is more an attempt to divert attention from their own internal failings as it has no factual basis. "The Senate feels that this resolution, just prior to May 21, which marks the 69th Anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between Pakistan and China on May 21, 1951, is an auspicious occasion to celebrate the resilience of our time-tested friendship, which is evident from China's consistent support to Pakistan on Kashmir, on CPEC and now on COVID-19," the resolution further said.

Corona may never go away, says WHO

DNA

GENEVA: The new coronavirus may never go away and populations around the world will have to learn to live with it, the World Health Organisation warned Wednesday. As some countries around the world begin gradually easing lockdown restrictions imposed in a bid to stop the novel coronavirus from spreading, the WHO said it may never be wiped out entirely. The virus first emerged in Wuhan in China late last year and has since infected more than 4.2 million people and killed nearly 300,000 worldwide. "We have a new virus entering the human population for the first time and therefore it is very hard to predict when we will prevail over it," said Michael Ryan, the WHO's emergencies director. "This virus may become just another endemic virus in our communities and this virus may never go away," he told a virtual press conference in Geneva. "HIV has not gone away – but we have come to terms with the virus." More than half of humanity has been put under some form of lockdown since the coronavirus crisis began.

Latest assistance by the Government of Japan would support Pakistan's efforts towards defeating this lethal virus pandemic

DNA

ISLAMABAD: The Government of Japan has decided to provide fifth cache of assistance worth USD 4,000,320 to the Government of Pakistan through the United Nations Office for Project Services (UNOPS) to support its efforts in combating the Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) disease. Prior to this grant assistance, the Government of Japan has provided a total assistance of USD 3,410,000 to Pakistan through UNICEF, IOM, IFRC and UNHCR for a similar support. ## Hindutva and rising extremism in India

COMMENT

By Justice ® Ali Nawaz Chowhan

THE Indo-Aryans who came from the north like other invaders settled along river Indus. The word Hindu was coined for them by the Greeks and the Arabs. This word was not derived from the vedas or the upnashads. Or any religion. Hinduism was later crafted for describing the specific belief. Nahru in his classic ' the discovery of India ' advocated Indian nationalism rather than Hindu nationalism. Gandhi however used all the symbols of Hindu society in his personal and collective life and thus brought religion into politics. In the khalafat movement the existence of Hindu Muslim unity was a proud reference. For several hundred years the Muslims ruled in India. But they did not interfere in matters of beliefs. They treated the Hindus well. The best case is of Moguls. Aurangzeb was harsh in matter of governance only. Despite this harmony for so long Hindus did not mix-up socially with the believers in Islam . They created a society believing in castes. Muslims or those 61 to Islam were treated untouchables. Alburuni observed so, a long time back. Except for landlord classes and Nawabs Muslims were kept poor and exploited. Muslim poverty was the main issue raised by Al-lamah Iqbal in his letters to the Quaid. Yes the British too exploited the disharmony. But there were still hope for existence.

Nehru accuses the Quaid for leaving the congress because he wanted to keep the non elite out. This is an insinuation. The Quaid became a member of the trade union and worked for human rights ,that is rights of the poor. The person who laid the foundation of Hinduism was a Gujarati Brahmin Dayan sarasvati. According to him Vedas are the only source of Truth. He negated idolatry and asked for propagation of Sanskrit and Hindi. He launched the movement called Arya Samaj . Hate speeches started by Yogi Adityanath in 2015 before becoming chief minister of UP. He started politics of extremism against minorities and promoted the ranks of Goraknath mutt. The irony is that the place for their temple was granted by Nawab Asaf ud din Daula . Initially this was a non political unorthodox movement turned extremism Digvijay Nath transformed himself. The glaring examples of the extremists' inter-alia were taking over of the Bahri majid, Gujarat killings when Modi was the chief minister. The burning of Christians alive, the atrocities being perpetrated on the helpless Kashmiris and the Genocide. This is a disputed territory. And the recent wave of violence ethnic cleaning encourage by the government is a smear on the biggest democracy. Who is allowing Genocide of its own people and delivering hate speeches. The freedom of religion USA in its recent report has condemned India's atrocities against the Muslims. The Muslim nations owe a duty under the UN charter of human rights to raise this issue and pressurize India to stop the madness. The rationale for the creation of our homeland has proved correct time and again. Thanks to the founding father. Justice R Alinawaz chowhan Former chair national commission for Human rights pakistan Chief Justice of The Gambia Intl judge of the UN at The Hague Co-chair Unesco judicial board Paris

Jones. Speaking at the Online Policy Dialogue Series on 'Pakistan-United States Cooperation amid COVID19' organized by the Sustainable Development Policy Institutes (SDPI) , the ambassador said that the coronavirus has hit hard the U.S. and still it is impacting huge number of people. Pakistan is also facing a grave crisis due to the pandemic. ic, the potential U.S. support to Pakistan's plea for debt rescheduling and impact of COVID on Afghan peace process. Responding to these questions, Ambassador Jones said the United States is closely connected to Pakistani leadership since the pandemic broke. President Donald Trump has spoken to Prime Minister Imran Khan and expressed the support for Pakistan's actions to fight against the pandemic. The ambassador said the U.S. leadership believes that expansion in commercial and political relations between the two countries should emerge stronger amid current situation. He also talked about the issue of debt rescheduling request by Pakistan, and support of USA. Moreover, U.S. also has supported extending loans and grants to Pakistan like IMF US$ 1.4 billion and support by

World Bank and other financial institutions. The Ambassador Jones said we have now entered in health partnership with Pakistan on a long-term basis and stepped up cooperation. Pakistan is among top priority countries in terms of the U.S. health partnership on pandemic. Within 48 hours of the request, the USAID has come to support National Disaster Management Authority (NDMA) and others government agencies. The U.S. has allocated millions of dollars in a new funding for Pakistan for testing of virus in badly hit areas. The U.S. health support also includes technical training and assistance. We are upgrading health emergency centers in provinces in the country, he added. The best part is that Americans are not supporting only through government to government cooperation but the U.S. private sector companies operating in Pakistan are also spending huge sums from their Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) and humanitarian support funds to provide humanitarian assistance to low income families. On Afghanistan, the ambassador said that the U.S. provides support to the Afghan refugees and their host communities in Pakistan. DNA

ISLAMABAD: A major Chinese Media House, the China Economic Net will host a seminar on Pakistan-China joint efforts to control locust. Pakistan has once again been plagued with the problem of locusts, which inflicted substantial damage to farmlands thus threatening food security of the country and prompting the government to seek help from Chinese experts to tackle the issue. Sugar robbery

As the inquiry into the notorious sugar scam is coming to its logical conclusion, startling revelations are being reported about the amounts that the sugar barons allegedly extorted from the public exchequer in the shape of subsidies and from unsuspecting consumers who were forced to pay higher prices. According to some estimates, as much as over Rs100 billion may have been pocketed by sugar-mill owners. This wind-fall appears to be the result of an increase in sugar prices due to the scarcity of sugar in the market, which itself was the result of an inappropriate decision by the PTI-led government to allow exports that many of its own ministers had opposed. The Economic Coordination Committee had recommended to the cabinet the decision to export sugar, without considering the likelihood of its shortage in the domestic market which became a primary cause of its higher prices. As the opposition and the ruling party are hurling accusations at each other, it is the people of Pakistan who need an explanation. The FIA is conducting an inquiry and has conducted interviews of sugar-mill directors, as many owners didn't turn up at the FIA's call. The inquiry commission had summoned eight groups of sugar mills for investigations. A detailed forensic audit has also been conducted after the initial report was submitted to the prime minister. The All Pakistan Sugar Mills Association (APSMSA) has also participated in the investigation. In the last week of April, the federal government had given additional three weeks to the Sugar Forensic Commission to complete its detailed report on the scandal. It is noteworthy that on April 4, 2020, a high-level inquiry report made the headlines giving details of the sugar and wheat crises that hit the country in January this year. The report had revealed that PTI leader Jahangir Tareen, a brother of Food Minister Khusró Bakhtiar, and PML-Q leader Moonis Elahi were among the prime beneficiaries of the sugar crisis that hit the poor of this country in a big way. Now a couple of questions still remain unanswered. First, what action has been taken against those who recommended the export of sugar when the country itself was likely to face its shortage, which ultimately happened? Second, why were such huge amounts of subsidies awarded to sugar barons who were already wallowing in their sugar molasses? And finally, when the first report was loud and clear why was there a need to delay punitive action? It has been over four months since the sugar and wheat crises targeted the people of this country. They were not a result of a natural calamity, rather they were deliberate and manmade scourges unleashed on people. The people of Pakistan don't simply need answers to these questions, they also expect justice done to those who commit such robberies in broad daylight, no matter which party they belong to.

Carnage in Afghanistan

BABIES and mothers who have recently given birth are easy targets for gunmen who shoot point blank at them. It is unthinkable that any human being would commit such an act of heinous violence. In Kabul on Tuesday, gunmen stormed a maternity hospital and after a stand-off with security guards attacked nurses, women and babies present there. The maternity centre was run by the Paris-based Medecin Sans Frontiers. The reason for choosing the target is unclear. But the impact it has left on people who saw the scenes after the crime is not. They saw mothers hugging babies in attempts to save their lives. A few succeeded but died themselves. They saw nurses try to smuggle babies away and after the attack was over they saw the splashes of blood and the 16 corpses, two of them of newborns which lay there after the shooting was over. We hope the US, which is attempting to broker a peace deal in Afghanistan, is watching the visuals. Surely they cannot be left unmoved by what they see on television screens. The Taliban, with whom the US is engaged in dialogue, have not claimed responsibility for the hospital attack. However, two previous attacks in Kabul, one only a few hours before the hospital siege and another series of coordinated bomb blasts in Kabul on Monday have been claimed by the IS. Allegations surfacing on social media suggest these were facilitated by the Taliban. One of the clauses of the deal with the US is that the Taliban, which control most of the territory of Afghanistan, will not allow the country's soil to be used for purposes of violence. Prior to the hospital attack, the funeral of a police chief in the Nangarhar province was literally blown apart by a suicide bomber who detonated his vest at the site. Around 24 people are believed to have died, bringing the death toll in Afghanistan through deadly terrorist attacks to 40. A day before this on Tuesday, bombs were placed in various parts of the city, sometimes in waste bins, injuring citizens including at least one child. It is obvious that Afghanistan is not moving towards peace. The persons responsible for this, the world leaders who sat in Doha for talks with the Taliban for months, need to step up and take responsibility. The people of Afghanistan cannot be allowed to suffer indefinitely. It is clear that the weak Afghan security forces are not able to deal with deadly terrorism such as that unleashed by the IS. Some kind of action is needed. Some kind of responsibility has to be attached. A country which has bled for decades, since 1979, cannot live if such violence continues. It cannot live if its babies are shot down even before they begin their journey of life. The situation is one that requires serious thought among all stakeholders. Suggestions and strategies are needed. But whatever these are, the killings must stop.

Role of the SCO in Ensuring Regional Security Cooperation

Lt. Col. Khalid Taimur Akram (Retd)

The Shanghai Cooperation Organization was established in the year 2001 and ever since it has become an active regional player by attaining significance in the overall strategic and security architecture of Asia. Eradication of Extremism, Separatism, and Terrorism is one of the fundamental goals of the SCO

ASIA is the most complicated geostrategic region of the world and the Asian countries have numerous security, economic, and political issues to resolve. Even though various international and regional organizations have been approached by the Asian states, the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) has managed to emerge as the most successful institution. The combined efforts of Russia and China to promote regional peace, security, and stability led to the formation of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO). In 1996, the Heads of States and their delegates from Russia, China, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, and Tajikistan came together to promote trust among the member states, disarmament of border regions, and facilitate regional peace and cooperation through the platform of "Shanghai Five". The regional and global developments and the widening scope led to the evolution of Shanghai Five into the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) in the year 2001. The Shanghai Cooperation Organization was established in the year 2001 and ever since it has become an active regional player by attaining significance in the overall strategic and security architecture of Asia.

Eradication of Extremism, Separatism, and Terrorism is one of the fundamental goals of the SCO. With the changing strategic and security trends, Russia and China are now more focused on the prevailing security issues and energy potentials. Presently, SCO has eight permanent members which include China, Russia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Uzbekistan, Tajikistan, Pakistan, and India. It also has four observer states. They are Afghanistan, Belarus, Iran, and Mongolia. While Azerbaijan, Armenia, Cambodia, Nepal, Turkey, and Sri Lanka are the six dialogue partners. Shanghai Cooperation Organization & Enhanced Regional Security The continuous efforts have been made by SCO to counter the common security threats and challenges, promote dialogue, enhance security by combating terrorism, separatism, extremism, and even cyberterrorism. SCO has also actively worked for the enhancement of international information security. Recognizing the increased number of terrorist attacks in the world, SCO plans to use advanced methods to combat terrorism and extremism related activities. Moreover, SCO encourages its member states to join forces in their mutual fight against terrorism and the international community to collaborate for an anti-terrorist coalition to counter this global threat. In this regard, Regional Anti-Terrorist Structure (RATS), a permanent organ of SCO, has been established to maintain and promote cooperation among the member states against the three fundamental evils that are Separatism, Extremism, and Terrorism. Furthermore, it focused on collecting and exchanging information regarding terrorist activities, counter-terrorism policy drafting, and to maintain cooperative relations between the SCO member states and the institutions working towards similar objectives. RATS, under SCO, proved to be effective in achieving its core objectives. Due to the efficient coordination by RATS, the relevant authorities of the member states successfully managed to prevent 20 terrorist attacks between the years 2011-2015. They also managed to deter 650 crimes of extremism, and 440 terrorist training camps and 1700 members of international terrorist organizations were neutralized. The core objective of RATS i.e. eradication of Terrorism, Extremism, and Separatism makes it especially relevant in the case of Afghanistan. Afghanistan shares its border with four of the SCO member states (China, Uzbekistan, Pakistan, and Tajikistan). Hence, the instability and poor security situation of Afghanistan have direct effects on the region mainly South Asia and Central Asia. Instability and Radicalization in Afghanistan have often been discussed in SCO summits. In the year 2013, the leaders from the SCO member states emphasized the idea of a stable Afghanistan. As the peace and security of South Asia and Central Asia depended on how the situation unfolds in Afghanistan. To cater to the Afghan issue, certain measures have been taken by the SCO. In Astana (the year 2005), a protocol on the creation of the Afghanistan-SCO contact group was adopted by SCO. It mainly aimed at increasing the cooperation between the two parties on issues of mutual interest. Moreover, a conference on Afghanistan was organized by SCO in Moscow. The conference mainly focused on the areas of mutual interest between SCO and Afghanistan. In another SCO summit in Astana 2011, the political instability and the unresolved situation of Afghanistan were seen as the fundamental threat to the peace and security of Central Asia. The leaders of SCO member states further agreed that the Afghan crisis could not be resolved through military means. The socio-economic situation of Afghanistan needs to be improved to facilitate peace and stability in the country. Providing economic and development opportunities will eventually support the stabilization of Afghanistan. For this purpose, initiatives have been taken by the Central Asian states. Kyrgyzstan, Uzbekistan, and Tajikistan enterprises have facilitated in providing electricity to Afghanistan. Afghanistan has also been included in a major energy project i.e. TAPI (Turkmenistan, Afghanistan, Pakistan, and India). Under this project, India and Pakistan will be provided Turkmen gas via Afghanistan. An Afghanistan Action Plan has also been designed by SCO which was announced at a special Afghanistan Conference organized by SCO. The plan intended to align its objectives with the broader strategy formulated and adopted by the US-NATO. The Afghanistan Action Plan by SCO focused on joint counter-terrorism operations, combating drug trafficking, and other related organized crimes. It further called for Afghanistan to be involved (in a phased manner) in SCO collaborations, and invited Afghan State institutions to participate in law-enforcement exercises planned and conducted by SCO. The training of drug agencies, combating drug money laundering, and enhancing border security were also focused. The fact that Afghanistan is yet not politically stabilized faces trans-border threats such as terrorism, Islamic militancy, drug trafficking, etc. and lacks the required forces to maintain internal peace and stability of the country poses serious threats and challenges for the entire region which is likely to experience the spillover effects. The entire situation simultaneously provided an opportunity for SCO to place the Afghanistan issue on its scope area. Despite being eager to play an active role in stabilizing Afghanistan, SCO needed US-NATO cooperation as the space available for SCO to play its role in Afghanistan was limited due to US-NATO presence there. Besides, certain organizational limitations also limited SCO's role. The accession of new members to the organization proves to be beneficial in certain situations but it also has its adverse effects. In the case of the Afghan issue, incorporating new members proved to be beneficial as various regional countries have varying interests in the stabilized Afghanistan. Hence, enhancing the organization's capability to deal with the issue more effectively. On the other hand, it can at times lead to a clash of interest between the new members and the core members of the organization. India and Pakistan were the latest addition to the SCO. The two rivals became the permanent members of the SCO summit in the year 2017. Accepting of India and Pakistan as the permanent members in SCO has broadened the scope of the organization, both in geographic and thematic terms. Their entry into the organization will be providing an opportunity for SCO to encompass the long-standing Kashmir issue. Despite being successful in resolving several disputes among the newly independent (former USSR) states, SCO could not play the role of a dispute resolving body in case of India-Pakistan dispute. India and Pakistan, being arch-rivals, have a long history of disputes and conflicts. One of them being the Kashmir issue. In August 2019, after India imposed curfew in Kashmir, the tensions between India and Pakistan escalated and both the states reached the brink of war. With both states having nuclear weapons, not only the two states were at risk but the stability and security of the entire region were in danger. Even though SCO's Charter Clause 2 mentions the responsibility of the organization to resolve any dispute that arises between the member states, yet it is viewed that SCO may review its non-binding model, so as to play a more assertive role for complex dispute resolutions. Pakistan viewed SCO as the most successful platform in the Eurasian region that is likely to bring and maintain peace and stability in the South Asian region. The inclusion of India and Pakistan has resulted in the expansion of SCO by covering Central Asia, South Asia, and West Asia. This expansion will also support linkage and connectivity between the SCO and BRICS states. SCO, NATO, & UN: Collaboration or Competition in Ensuring Security? Complying with the well-known norms of the International Law and the Principles of the United Nations, SCO firmly believes in Diplomacy being the most effective tool of conflict resolution. SCO in collaboration with the United Nations has initiated several projects which aim at the enhancement of international cooperation against mutual security threats. A few of the notable events include "The United Nations and the Shanghai Cooperation Organization: Jointly Countering Challenges and Threats" organized in the year 2016 in New York, and "The United Nations and Shanghai Cooperation Organization in the Fight Against Drugs: Common Threats and Joint Actions" held in March 2017 in Vienna. The world sees SCO as the future role model and key geostrategic power player among the international community. The SCO secretariat under the guidance of His Excellency Vladimir Norov, Secretary-General of SCO, is striving hard to achieve the desired goals. The present Secretary-General has reached out to all the member states and is likely to take SCO to new heights. The writer is the Executive Director, Center for Global & Strategic Studies (CGSS), Islamabad

Vulnerable people deserve equal treatment during crisis

Maha Akeel

The risk of online child sexual exploitation should also be considered, as more children are spending more time connected to the internet

AT times of crisis, the most vulnerable segments of society are the most likely to suffer and the least likely to receive assistance. In the case of the ongoing coronavirus disease (COVID-19) pandemic, this is no different. Whether it is women, children, the elderly and the handicapped, or refugees, minorities and the poor, the difficulties and challenges these groups face usually do not get the same attention as the urgent issues that are addressed immediately. When COVID-19 hit the world – at lightning speed and with such viciousness – it prompted countries to take extreme but necessary measures to prevent and contain its spread, including lockdowns. However, as time slowly crawled by, the virus's effects loomed over people's lives and heightened their panic, uncertainty and stress. Along with the downturn in the economy and the rise of unemployment, the social impact of the pandemic has been palpable. Reports have shown that coronavirus is disproportionately affecting women and girls around the world, including disrupting access to maternal health, jeopardizing care-givers – where women represent 70 percent of the global health care workforce and carry out the majority of unpaid care work – and increasing the risk of domestic violence. In addition, the pandemic has also affected women economically, as many of them work in the sectors that have been the hardest hit, such as travel, tourism, hospitality and retail, while many women work part-time or at home and in the informal economy and have limited savings. In the longer term, women may be disproportionately affected by cuts to social services including health, water and sanitation, and social care. Furthermore, as many daily essential activities, such as work and teaching, moved online, it put women and girls at a disadvantage as the gap in access and knowhow between males and females is wide. School closures also increase the risks of child labor and exploitation, as well as depriving thousands of poor children from getting their main meal at school. Experience from other emergency contexts highlights an increase in child, early and forced marriage as a means for poor and marginalized families to reduce the number of mouths to feed, which increases the chances of girls dropping out of school and also leads to early pregnancy and its associated health risks. While the numbers indicate that COVID-19 hospitalizes and kills more men than women, the overall impact on lives is hurting women and girls the most, especially in poor countries and among those who are displaced, refugees or living in conflict-affected areas. Many experts are warning that, if officials and society do not act now, women and girls will be suffering from the pandemic's fallout for decades to come. The risk of online child sexual exploitation should also be considered, as more children are spending more time connected to the internet. Also, it has been reported in some countries that the take-up of childhood vaccinations has plunged since the pandemic began due to a massive backlog of shipments and the concerns of parents over taking their children to clinics. They fear being infected with the coronavirus, which would also expose children to the risk of other serious diseases like measles, polio, tetanus and other infectious diseases besides COVID-19. Meanwhile, the high rate of COVID-19 fatalities in care facilities for the elderly and people with disabilities in some countries has been shocking, as horrific reports have emerged of neglect during the pandemic. Such discrimination is inhumane, as medical decisions should be based on individualized clinical assessments and medical need, not on age or disability. However, the very high infection rate and rapid spread of the virus has overwhelmed some of the best health care services in the world and put tremendous pressure on health care providers, forcing them to make difficult decisions. Had the pandemic been handled well at the beginning, they wouldn't have found themselves in such a position. – Courtesy Arab News
