PM okays action against sugar mafia

Cases being sent to NAB, FIA; recommendation of the inquiry commission to be fully followed

NEHAL MIRAJ / DNA

ISLAMABAD: Prime Minister (PM) Imran Khan on Sunday approved action plan against beneficiaries named in sugar inquiry report. Special Assistant to the Prime Minister on Accountability and Interior Ministry and chief of the Assets Recovery Unit (ARU) Shahzad Akbar said that it is a historic day for the country as no previous government had the courage to form such a commission. Addressing a press conference highlighting contents of Sugar Inquiry Commission report, he said that neither have investigations been conducted over such matters in the past, nor has any government had the courage to make the investigations public.

He said sugar inquiry commission was established to ascertain the reasons of increase in sugar prices in the last few years. Shahzad Akbar went on to say that the sugar inquiry commission was set up because there has been a cycle of sugar price increases from December 2018 to August 2019, where prices were hiked up to 33%, which, in rupee terms, translates to Rs17 per kilogram. He said the report explicitly says that sugar mill owners pay an amount to sugarcane growers even lower than the support price. In addition, all sugar mills make cuts in the weight of sugarcane of 15 to 30 percent. Shahzad Akbar said the Commission also found irregularities in the form of giving advance payments to farmers in the form of cash or commodity, which is akin to unregulated banking.

ISLAMABAD: Barrsiter Shahzad Akbar called on Prime Minister Imran Khan on Sunday. He briefed him about sugar case. - DNA

PTV MD's direct contact with PM office irk Info Ministry

The letter chides the MD by stating that the contents of his letter to the Prime minister were "derogatory to the Prime Minister's office and in a way an attempt at eroding the authority of the Ministry"

NEHAL MIRAJ

ISLAMABAD: Ministry of Information has taken a dim view of Managing Director PTV, communicating with the Prime Minister's office directly and had asked the official to explain his position. A letter sent to Managing Director PTV Amir Manzoor, on May 29th, pointed out that the ministry had asked all the departments and corporation on May 14th, to follow rules of business which require that all communication with the Prime Minister's office has to be routed through the ministry. The letter points out that the Managing Director PTV had continued to communicate with the Prime Minister's office directly. The letter chides the MD by stating that the contents of his letter to the Prime minister were "derogatory to the Prime Minister's office and in a way an attempt at eroding the authority of the Ministry". He has been asked to explain his position to the ministry. Moreover, the petals are not merely designed as separate pieces of construction rather emerge in the shape of a blooming flower representing Pakistan's progress as a rapidly developing country. ## Justice needed

THE brutal killing of a woman in the Dannuk area of Turbat in Balochistan last week has created a wave of anger among Baloch people. While news from Balochistan itself is thin on the ground, gatherings of protesters, most of them Baloch, from areas of Karachi such as Lyari and Malir, have drawn attention to the incident. Malika Naz, who was sleeping outside her house as is the custom in summer months, was killed while resisting a robbery attempt on her house (in Dannuk). Her four-year-old daughter Bramsh was severely injured with bullet wounds. The people of Turbat have been complaining for long that their lives and properties are constantly under threat at the hands of criminal gangs roaming around in that area. They have been trying to invite the attention of the authorities to do something about it, but to no avail. Two of the gang members have reportedly been arrested but the head of the gang is still at large. Kech district is not new to such reports. Locals have been saying that the ruling party has been unable to control rampant crimes of such nature in Balochistan generally, and in Kech particularly. The recent incident has sparked a series of protests across the province and must be tackled with respect and responsibility that can assuage the concerns of not only the victims of this crime but also of the local people who need to be assured that the government and the state institutions are there to protect the people from such criminals. Such inhuman acts of brutality must be stopped and the criminals brought to book. The wave of deaths in Balochistan has become more and more widespread over the years, with ethnic, criminal, nationalist and sectarian factors all involved. The violence simply adds to the feelings of unrest in Balochistan and the sense of insecurity amongst its people. The Turbat incident must be investigated properly and peaceful protests be allowed so that people can vent their anger. Balochistan badly needs law and order, created by beginning a dialogue with all stakeholders and winning them over to the idea of a peaceful province which forms an important part of the federation of Pakistan. We need to do more for the people of a province whose voices are rarely heard and too often ignored. The government needs to devise a policy to ensure that the country's biggest province in terms of territory can find the potential it holds to contribute to the wellbeing of Pakistan and its people do not suffer the almost constant bouts of violence that have killed so many from various backgrounds.

Forgetting the front line

NEARLY every day we hear about more doctors and paramedical staff succumbing to Covid-19 in their battle to save patients suffering from the disease. It is surprising that there is no regular update exclusively on the medical staff and if you want to find out how many of them in total have died or have been infected you don't have a single portal for such information, in fact you end up with the combined tally covering all the people without a separate dataset for medical staff in Pakistan. Moreover, the guard of honour and salutes presented to healthcare professionals in March have also evaporated in thin air and now practically nobody is talking about them anymore, apart from reports of their individual deaths or infections. Healthcare staff are fighting at the frontlines of the Covid-19 outbreak and they must be properly respected and rewarded for their services that are now beyond their normal call of duty. It is distressing not only for the healthcare staff but also for their relatives that in many hospitals across the country they are forced to work long hours and that too without personal protective equipment. We have seen protests by healthcare staff in cities such as Dera Ismail Khan, Quetta, and Sukkur, where they complained about lack of PPEs and N-95 masks. In the absence of a regular supply of new PPEs and N-95 masks they are forced to work with used ones that are already exposed, and this may even be causing an increasing number of deaths and infections among the healthcare community. A recent report from the health department in Lahore revealed that quite a few doctors and nurses are already infected with coronavirus across Punjab. The case may not be different in other parts of the country because healthcare staff get the most exposure to the virus. We have an alarming rate of infection among healthcare professionals and the trend must be contained. We suggest that everyday the number of deaths and infections among the healthcare community including the janitorial staff be made public and special allowances be announced for them and their security – in the face of the violence they face from a confused public. They are our frontline warriors and we need to protect and support them as much as we can.

Kashmir is a victim of Nehru - Mountbatten conspiracy

Justice (R) Ali Nawaz Chowhan

In the end I supplicate the people and the government of Great Britain to mitigate the great wrong done to the people of Kashmir by Mountbatten and his team by using its influence in stopping Indian aggression against civilian population in Kashmir, altering its disputed status, and by addressing the UN using the norm of Respect 2protection

THE red onyx clad room (khooni Kumra) where we judges met at tea break was a frequent reminder of the dishonest partition award for Punjab given by Radcliffe. Gurdaspur district a Muslim majority area adjoins Jammu And Kashmir southern border was among the districts-listed in the Indian Independence Act in Pakistan Punjab. But the 16th August Award 1947 changed this by giving Muslim majority thesils to India. These were Gurdaspur, Batala, Ajnala, Jullundur, Nakodar, Ferozpur and Zira and part of Kasur. This led to riots, huge exodus and massive killings of over a million people. While Radcliffe was flying back he was seeing below the bloodshed caused by the last minute dishonest changes he made in the award. The book freedom at night gives us a factual picture of the consequences. Why the award was altered so suddenly in favour of India? According to Radcliffe to save the railways and the canal system. This argument was never convincing neither did he ever give better reasons for taking an excursion from the principle of contagious communal majority used for partition. Before leaving Radcliffe destroyed all his notes. Who influenced him? All records and opinions point towards Mountbatten and Nehru who was influencing him although Mountbatten already had a Kashmir policy. Beaumont secretary to Mountbatten in a written statement he deposited in 1989 at the All Souls College Oxford had said that "Radcliffe had in fact allocated Ferozepore and Zira tehsils to Pakistan" That learning of this Mountbatten arranged lunch for Radcliffe and persuaded him to alter this position in favour of India under pressure from Nehru. And this was done. According to Beaumont the viceroy was manipulating from behind the boundary award. Alastair Lamb in his book the Kashmir dispute 1991 argues that the so called accession to India on 27th Oct 1947 was the end result of deliberate planning, begun well before independence and that it was orchestrated to a considerable extent by Mountbatten. It is argued that origins of the dispute have to be sought in the strategic outlook that the British acquired in regards to India's vulnerable northern frontier. So changing the boundary award meant giving strategic access to India for Kashmir.

In his book the agony of Pakistan Sir Ch Zafarulla Khan who represented Pakistan before the commission and later before the UN mentions how Mountbatten had been influencing the British Government and its U.N. representative at the UN against the strong case of Pakistan for self determination in Kashmir. Ziegler the biographer of Mountbatten said there was good evidence that Mountbatten asked Radcliffe to change the award. Mountbatten manipulated political changes by installing Justice Mahjan of Punjab as the Prime Minister removing Mr Kak who was not agreeing to the conspiracy. He gave his own plane to carry Mahjan. The lady Mountbatten was in the plane as well. The Maharaja who was delaying his decision of accession to India too was influenced by Mountbatten and Sh Abdulla a friend of Mr Nehru of the National Congress. I saw Sh. Abdulla at the Liqat gardens Rawalpindi when he visited Pakistan before Nehru's death. Perhaps he was regretful of his past conduct in becoming a part of the conspiracy. But it was too late. Kashmiris had been betrayed by their own leader. Kashmir is bleeding since over seventy years. The world is deaf towards the gross violations of their human rights and state led crimes against humanity. The two nuclear countries were at war three times. Daily there are breaches of the line of control. A lot of wasteful expenditure is being made for armament by both sides instead of amelioration of the teeming millions. So the pre-partition policy based on strategic considerations contemplated before partition and still nourished seem to be the great impediment. Any way legally speaking India is an occupying force, the territory is disputed. Any change in the India constitution has no validity in international law. We have to expose the Indian brutalities before the world. This is the best we can do and keep Pakistan strong united and prosperous. My salute to the Kashmiri martyrs of freedom and our soldiers who laid lives in defence. In the end I supplicate the people and the government of Great Britain to mitigate the great wrong done to the people of Kashmir by Mountbatten and his team by using its influence in stopping Indian aggression against civilian population in Kashmir, altering its disputed status, and by addressing the UN using the norm of Respect 2protection. Justice (R) Ali Nawaz Chowhan Chairman, National Commission for Human Rights, Government of Pakistan. Formerly: Chief Justice Of The Gambia International Judge Of The UN at The Hague. ## Germany providing direct assistance only to Uzbekistan among Central Asian countries

DNA

TASHKENT: Germany will change one of the cooperation directions in foreign policy and suspend active cooperation projects with a number of countries. The Federal Ministry of Economic Cooperation and Development (BMZ) will undergo serious changes: the number of partner countries that Germany has previously assisted will be reduced from 85 to 60.

In particular, Germany is expected to maintain broad economic cooperation only with Uzbekistan in Central Asia.

A final decision on the so-called BMZ-2030 reform has not yet been made. The ministry is still considering a concept that is expected to be approved this summer. Minister Gerd Müller explained the news by saying that Germany wants its support for the development of the countries to be "more effective and substantial".

Closing projects in 25 countries under the BMZ-2030 is explained by the fact that some of these countries are no longer underdeveloped and do not need support, while others are failing to achieve positive results in the fight against corruption, human rights and governance.

According to the ministry, these changes do not necessarily mean that Germany is "no longer a partner state" with these countries - it is just a "change in the form of cooperation."

However, according to the DW, the reform will effectively eliminate direct bilateral relations between Germany and more than 20 countries, mediated by two institutions - the GIZ International Development Association and the KfW State Development Bank. The only partner of BMZ in Central Asia will be Uzbekistan.

"Our cooperation will be strengthened due to the progress made as a result of reforms over the past three years," the ministry said.

It was noted that in 2019, BMZ agreed to support new projects in Tashkent to reform health care, small and medium enterprises and vocational education. The ministry added that the projects launched in cooperation with Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan will be completed.

Kazakhstan and Turkmenistan are also absent on the list. It was explained that "they have never been bilateral partners of BMZ, but were only involved in a number of regional projects."
