Pilgrims perform final haj rituals

DNA

MAKKAH: Small groups of pilgrims performed one of the final rites of the hajj on Friday as Muslims worldwide marked the start of the Eid Al-Adha holiday amid a global pandemic that has impacted nearly every aspect of this year's pilgrimage and celebrations. Around 1,000 pilgrims made their final journey to the Jamarat wall to stone the three pillars, before heading to Makkah to perform prayers at the Grand Mosque and complete their hajj. The last days of the annual pilgrimage to Makkah in Saudi Arabia coincided with the four-day Eid al-Adha, or "Feast of Sacrifice," in which Muslims slaughter livestock and distribute the meat to the poor. Pilgrims arrived in Muzdalifah last night to rest after spending the day in Arafat where they had scaled Mount Arafat to pray and repent. This year's pilgrimage is the smallest in modern times after the number of participants was greatly restricted to prevent the spread of the coronavirus. During the last days of hajj, male pilgrims shave their heads and remove the terycloth white garments worn during the pilgrimage. Women cut off a small lock of hair in a sign of spiritual rebirth and renewal. Meanwhile 1.8 billion Muslims around the world celebrate Eid in the age of social distancing amid the pandemic that has so far infected more than 16 million people.

Pak, China win war against COVID-19: Chinese Scholar

DNA

BEIJING: Chinese scholar Prof. Cheng Xizhong said, that Pakistan, China's friendly neighbor will eventually win the war against the pandemic and embark on a path of economic recovery. He said the smart-lock down in Pakistan has brought good result. Recently, Pakistan has set a revenue target of 4.963 trillion Rupees for the fiscal year 2020-2021. There is a prerequisite for this revenue target that is the economy will have basically recovered from COVID-19 by October 1. He quoted the relevant departments of the Federal government as having said that if the pandemic cannot be controlled before the end of September, it will be difficult to achieve the revenue target, and then the budget may have to be adjusted. Cheng Xizhong who is visiting professor at Southwest

University of Political Science and Law, senior fellow of the Charhar Institute was of the opinion that it is quite difficult for Pakistan to achieve this revenue target, unless the federal government and the people of Pakistan have the determination to devote themselves to pandemic prevention and control and economic recovery. He added: "There is an idiom in China, "Nothing is impossible", which means that under certain conditions, whether things can be done mainly depends on how people play their subjective initiative. Pakistan is densely populated, with a high proportion of poor people and a large number of daily-income labors. So, it is difficult to impose a complete lockdown. So, Pakistani Prime Minister Imran Khan has launched the strategy of "smart lockdown", and the relevant government departments have formulated a series of standard operation procedures for pandemetic prevention. Judged from the current situation, this strategy has achieved initial good results. The data show that the growth curve of confirmed cases tends to gradually level off, with more than 81% of confirmed cases recovered. With the advent of the Corban Festival, PM has called on the people to celebrate simply and abide by the standard operating procedures for pandemic prevention. If COVID-19 can be controlled well during the festival, it will help Pakistan rebuild economic growth in an orderly manner, so the economic development will become normal. Due to the appropriate policies of the government to respond COVID-19, the people of all walks of life have been making concerted efforts to overcome various economic difficulties. There is a saying in the investment circle that "Profit and loss are from the same source", which means that the reason for which you make money and lose money is likely to be the same. The catering industry, retail industry and tourism industry are the most hit ones by the COVID-19. These industries will surely take the lead in recovery, once the pandemic is over. The reason is very simple. Due to the COVID-19, many cities have adopted close-off management. If it is over, people may rush out to enjoy delicious food in restaurants, experience offline shopping and travel to other places or foreign countries. The flow of people and logistics will drive the recovery of the transportation industry, so I think the transport industry will also be among the first batch of industries to recover."

Inquiry committee formed to investigate deaths of Zoo animals

"A high level inquiry committee, to be chaired by the additional secretary of the climate change ministry Joudat Ayaz, will look into the causes of the recent deaths of zoo animals, including lions, ostriches and other animals"

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Adviser to the Prime Minister on Climate Change Malik Amin Aslam has formed an inquiry committee to investigate the deaths of animals from the Marghazar Zoo. A lioness died upon arrival at a lion breeding sanctuary two days ago, after which the lion, which was also seriously ill, also died, a senior official from the Ministry of Climate Change told media. The animals died on the way to the sanctuary in Kasur. A video shows handlers at the Islamabad zoo poking the lion with sticks to force it out of its enclosure, and when that failed the handlers lit fires to smoke it out and into special fabricated cages. Ministry officials said it was ill-advised to move animals during extreme weather conditions. They said the stress of the journey was compounded by the extreme weather and suffocation from the fire, killing both lions. Ostriches, a hog deer and pheasants have also died while being moved to sanctuaries. "A high level inquiry committee, to be chaired by the additional secretary of the climate change ministry Joudat Ayaz, will look into the causes of the recent deaths of zoo animals, including lions, ostriches and other animals," the ministry's media focal person and deputy director Mohammad Saleem said. The Islamabad Wildlife Management Board the responsibility of safely moving zoo animals to wildlife sanctuaries. "It has been brought into notice of the ministry that deaths have occurred due to bad management regarding the shifting of zoo animals and poor feeding arrangements, with which the ministry is seriously concerned, terming it intolerable and inhumane," Mr Saleem said. He added that the inquiry committee has been tasked with determining who is responsible for the deaths of the animals and proposing disciplinary action against those responsible. In a statement, the World Wildlife Fund (WWF) Pakistan condemned the mistreatment of the lions at the zoo and expressed "grave" concerns over videos circulating on social media. "It is absolutely abhorrent and unacceptable to treat any animal this way. WWF-Pakistan has expressed its disappointment to the IWMB and hopes that those who are responsible will be brought to justice for this repulsive act. In the wake of this incident, as a protest, WWF-Pakistan has also stepped down from the board of the IWMB, of which it has been a member for several years," the statement said. It added that WWF-Pakistan is aware that there are risks when moving a wild animal from one facility to another, but there "is absolutely no excuse for the treatment of an animal as seen in the videos." The statement added that WWF-Pakistan has offered support to improve the condition of zoos in the country and has lobbied for zoo standards and legislation, promoting cooperation and capacity building for an overall improved environment for the animals.

Lockdown restrictions and effects in conflict zones

Sumaira Khan, a correspondent for Indus World television was full of praise for the Pakistani government for its handling of the pandemic

ISLAMABAD: An international non-governmental organization, YFK-International Kashmir Lobby Group, based in Islamabad, Pakistan, which works with the United Nations mechanisms and human rights organizations, brought together international journalists to talk about the future of journalism and human rights. Journalists from several countries Thursday came together in a webinar to discuss the lockdown restrictions and future of journalism in varied countries and conflict zones, including Iraq, Israel and Palestinian territories, Azerbaijan, and Indian Illegally Occupied Jammu Kashmir (IIOJK). The webinar was also a rare occasion to have journalists working in different conflict zones to sit on one table and learn from each other's perspectives and experiences. Award-winning Iraqi photojournalist Ali Arkady, the whistleblower who uncovered torture cells run by security forces in Iraq, joined Nelofer Abdullah, a journalist who lives and works under the world's longest lockdown in IIOJK, and Daniela Donges, who works with journalists and activists as Country Director Israel and Palestinian territories for German Voices for Peace. Journalist Efsane Elesgerli, a correspondent for the Voice of Karabakh newspaper, described to the participants the circumstances under which journalists and civilians are coping with renewed clashes with Armenia over the Karabakh region, where residents are opposed Armenian presence.

Nelofer Abdullah described incidents where Indian occupation soldiers harassed her at checkpoints during her normal media coverage work. She explained in detail how Kashmiris are coping with the ban on fast-speed internet and are adjusting their lives around 2G speed. Kashmir has around eight million people who have to live with 2G. This has affected IT industry, online education, and some medical services. Daniela Donges, Country Director Israel and Palestinian territories for German Voices for Peace, just completed her two-year stay at the city of Bethlehem, which is part of occupied Palestinian lands in dispute between Israel and the Palestinians. She described how the health emergency, the lockdowns, and the occupation have combined to create an economic crisis that could explode in the face of both Palestinian and Israeli authorities. To one question, Ali Arkady declined to reveal where he is living in asylum in Europe due to security and safety reasons. Arkady said some security officials in Iraq have affiliations to extremist militias and are covertly working for other countries. He said he is optimistic that the coverage his work has received in international media will act as an instrument of accountability for everyone involved in human rights violations in Iraq. Sumaira Khan, a correspondent for Indus World television was full of praise for the Pakistani government for its handling of the pandemic.

She called for regulation to stem disinformation in a health crisis. The situation for the media in the Gulf region is different in that there is a mushrooming of modern digital and broadcast media but not as much difficulties for journalists under lockdown "thanks to the availability of high-speed internet," said Shahad Al-Matrouk, the Kuwait correspondent for the Dubai-based Al-Arabiya. She explained in detail her experience working under lockdown. YFK-International Kashmir Lobby Group (Youth Forum For Kashmir) is a non-partisan International NGO, working for the peaceful resolution of Kashmir Conflict in accordance with United Nations Security Council (UNSC) resolutions. - APP

A case of murder

THE smuggling of a pistol into a courtroom at a local court in Peshawar raises a number of key questions about security at our courts. In this case, it also raises some very old and unresolved questions of where Pakistani society stands. The pistol could have been used to shoot even a judge. Instead it was used by a man identified as Khalid to kill a person standing trial for blasphemy. The accused had been charged in April 2018. We still do not know the full details.

A case of murder has been lodged against Khalid by police. Some reports on social media suggest that the accused may have belonged to the Ahmadi community, while other reports say he later changed his religion. Some reports also say that he was psychologically unwell. The question of how a pistol was brought in the court is still being investigated.

The case, which will need to be pursued by the state as the victim appears to have no immediate relatives to stand for him, is a reminder of the increasingly frequent misuse of the blasphemy law in our country. No individual has the right to murder another without a hearing and without a fair and free trial. Such incidents have become increasingly commonplace. According to some media reports, over the last decades scores of murders on similar grounds have taken place. Most of us will remember the brutal killing of student Mashal Khan. While the police have started taking a slightly stronger stance in the matter, the fact remains that it is extremely easy to bring a blasphemy charge against another individual and by doing so put his/her life at risk.

Blasphemy accusations have also been used as a weapon by politicians and certain sections of the media. And on social media, anonymous accounts routinely level charges of blasphemy. The only way to prevent this is by not only aggressively pursuing those who use blasphemy to commit violence but by taking on everyone who falsely accuses others of blasphemy. The key issue is that of violence and the willingness to take lives over accusations that have not been proven in a court of law.

Constant chaos

SINCE it came to power in 2018, the PTI government has undergone an almost constant series of upheavals and crises of various kinds – within the party. These have ranged from accusations that senior members of the party with close links to the PM have been involved in major scandals to other kinds of confusion concerning the day-to-day governmental affairs. We now have the latest upheaval. Two special assistants to the prime minister – SAPMs – Tania Aidrus and Dr Zafar Mirza have suddenly stepped down from their posts, leaving behind only short messages concerning their reasons for doing so.

This comes soon after the prime minister followed demands that the assets, tax returns and nationality of the large number of SAPMs that play a prominent role in his government be made public. In her brief resignation letter Tania Aidrus, who is also a Canadian national, has said she is and always will be a loyal Pakistani. The rumours that are inevitably swirling around Islamabad say that the real problem arose after Aidrus, who was in charge of Digital Pakistan, set up a firm of her own which she said was funded by money from overseas Pakistanis. To many observers, this was a quite obvious conflict of interest.

There have also been questions over whether Aidrus had obtained the PM's approval to set up her organization. The case of Dr Zafar Mirza who holds Pakistani nationality is different. He has said in his tweet that he chose to resign because he had left a senior position within the WHO to serve Pakistan and tried to do so to the best of his abilities helping bring Covid-19 under control and was saddened by the fierce criticism directed against SAPMs. Other sources in Islamabad say Dr Mirza had come under scrutiny initially for bringing in drugs from India, violating a ban and later when questioned about the recent increase in the prices of essential medicines saying that he had no idea about this. Political observers and senior journalists have also said that both the SAPMs were asked to step down – and that this was not entirely their own choice.

There is conjecture that more resignations and more internal party turmoil may follow. This would not be good for a government that has already developed a reputation for mismanagement and mishandling of affairs. It is also unusual for a government to be run with so many unelected members in key positions. The absence of a health minister, a ministry held by the PM himself during the Covid-19 pandemic, is also unusual. This is also why there have been serious concerns over the timing of Dr Mirza's resignation, and how the Covid-19 challenge will fare. It is difficult to predict where things will go from now and if the PTI can smoothen out the waters its ship sails on.

International Friendship Day is a celebration of all people of SCO

Vladimir Norov

The pandemic has shown that no one can fight the virus alone. Coronavirus is by no means the latest global test. I think that all countries should understand this fact and make efforts for cooperation on the principles of mutual support, joint development, and the creation of common goods. I believe that in the current conditions of humanity's struggle against the pandemic of coronavirus, the principles of multilateralism are becoming more relevant

ON 27 April 2011, the 65th Session of the UN General Assembly adopted a resolution on the International Day of Friendship, which has since been celebrated annually around the world on 30th July.

The International Day of Friendship aims to strengthen friendly relations not only between individuals, but also between peoples, countries, continents, and different communities. The main idea of the holiday is to recognize the relevance and importance of friendship as a manifestation of a noble feeling common to all people.

The world is facing challenges ranging from poverty and hunger to intolerance of some people to others. That is why there is the International Day of Friendship, which encourages people from all over the world to unite against social and other problems and to be tolerant of each other. On the International Day of Friendship, the UN called on states, international organizations, and international public opinion to hold events and initiatives aimed at promoting dialogue and solidarity among civilizations.

This holiday is very relevant for the SCO family countries. For the peoples of the SCO space, its main meaning is to develop tolerance and promote friendship between countries and peoples.

One of the founding documents of the SCO, the Treaty on Neighbourhood Friendship and Cooperation signed in 2007, notes that strengthening and deepening relations of good neighborliness, friendship, and cooperation among the SCO Member States is in the fundamental interests of their peoples and contributes to the cause of peace and development in the SCO space and around the world.

In the same sense the SCO Member States', focus on building joint efforts to prevent common challenges and threats, and to preserve the diversity of forms of socio-economic, and cultural development, is of particular importance.

Formed in the process of creation of the SCO - the "Shanghai Spirit" characterized by mutual trust, mutual benefit, equality, mutual consultations, respect for multiculturalism, desire for joint development, has become a key norm of the SCO model of multilateral cooperation.

Over the past 19 years, United in the Shanghai spirit, Member States have presented to the world a new model of genuine partnership, the important elements of which are mutual understanding, equality, and coordination.

The modern world is becoming more multifaceted, and the processes taking place in it are becoming more complicated. However, one thing is becoming increasingly clear: modern humanity is united by a common destiny and the abandonment of dividing lines can become a powerful impetus of the new stage of the development of world civilization.

In this regard, the rapprochement of countries and peoples requires not just their constant dialogue, but mutual knowledge of cultures and traditions, a deep mutual understanding of civilizational characteristics in the name of universal progress and prosperity, for the sake of peace and stability in the world.

The Shanghai Cooperation Organization now unites 18 countries with a population of about 44% of the world's population. The palette of ethnic groups, nations, religions, and civilizations of SCO countries gives a particularly bright multicultural facet.

The SCO Development Strategy to 2025 states that the SCO countries, being multi-ethnic and multi-religious societies, are interested in ensuring an internal inter-ethnic and inter-religious peace, strengthening centuries-old traditions of harmonious co-existence of different nationalities and religions, and the development of inter-civilizational dialogue.

The humanitarian heritage of the SCO relates to the names of the greatest thinkers, outstanding discoverers who have made an invaluable contribution to the development of human civilization. One in nine UNESCO World Heritage Sites is in the SCO space.

The SCO consistently and purposefully implements its main civilizational mission - promotes mutual understanding between peoples, mutual knowledge, penetration, enrichment, and rapprochement of cultures and civilizations, promotes the traditions and customs of peoples.

Only through familiarity with ancient history, rich and unique cultural traditions and heritage, the customs of each other can form mutual respect and trust between states and peoples, as well as ensure the education of the younger generation in the spirit of friendship, respect for the cultural characteristics of other peoples.

The SCO Member States, because of their enormous potential for humanitarian cooperation, have active bilateral and multilateral cultural ties on a regular basis. Their main goal is to practically promote the strengthening of friendly ties and rapprochement of the peoples of the SCO countries.

The SCO Secretariat is working to strengthen the friendly contacts of the SCO countries. As part of the complex cultural and humanitarian project "SCO our common home" held various activities that are aimed at bringing cultures closer together and promoting the dialogue of civilizations. Within the framework of this project, from September 2016 to the present, the Days of Culture of China, Kazakhstan, Tajikistan, Belarus, Afghanistan, Azerbaijan, Uzbekistan, Moscow Day, an Evening dedicated to the 90th anniversary of Kyrgyz writer C.Aitmatov, exhibitions of paintings and children's paintings had been held, including a series of classical concerts "Nine Magic Notes" with the participation of pianists of SCO countries.

These events were held at a high level and has contributed to strengthening the "Shanghai Spirit" and the positive image of the SCO, as well as helped to popularize the culture, history, traditions, and customs of the peoples of the SCO countries.

Events of this format provide many opportunities to bring together the creative teams of all SCO countries on one platform, demonstrating achievements reflecting the unique national flavor of each country.

Also, every year the SCO Secretariat together with the embassies of member states widely celebrates the holiday of Nowruz, which is accompanied by the presentation of national musical art and clothing, the exhibition of objects of applied art and tasting of the national cuisine of the peoples of the SCO countries.

It is safe to say that an additional incentive for the dissemination of the rich historical and cultural heritage of the SCO Member States is the SCO Secretariat's project of "Eight Wonders of the SCO" which aims to demonstrate the cultural diversity of the SCO Member States and its tourism potential.

Youth is an important factor in strengthening friendship between peoples. One of the objectives of the International Friendship Festival is to involve young people in social activities aimed at respecting different cultures.

In the 21st century, when the world is changing at a fantastic rate, young people demonstrate the originality and freshness of ideas, act as an initial part of society, offers innovative solutions for a better life. Our task, therefore, is to teach young people to be friends and to serve the ideals of world peace. The SCO youth policy is aimed at actively involving young men and women in the creation of a decent future, promoting the physical, mental, and spiritual development of the younger generation, ensuring their active participation in the political, economic, and cultural life of the SCO countries.

The SCO sees a huge intellectual potential in the younger generation, capable of mastering modern knowledge; science and technology, art, and literature, with high legal culture and a strong immunity against extremism and fanaticism, striving for peace and development.

The most important task today is to overcome political confrontation, protectionism on a global and regional scale, and to resist attempts to divide humanity by politicizing the problem of the coronavirus pandemic.

The pandemic has shown that no one can fight the virus alone. Coronavirus is by no means the latest global test. I think that all countries should understand this fact and make efforts for cooperation on the principles of mutual support, joint development, and the creation of common goods. I believe that in the current conditions of humanity's struggle against the pandemic of coronavirus, the principles of multilateralism are becoming more relevant.

All States and international organizations are now closely linked to each other and the key to defeating this invisible enemy, which knows no borders, is global solidarity and international cooperation.

It should be noted that the coronavirus pandemic not only poses challenges and threats to peace but also creates new opportunities and perspectives.

In this sense, it is important to analyze the experience of cooperation in an emergency. In particular, we are talking about the positive factors of interaction, solidarity, moral and material support between our countries, not only at the official level but also between representatives of different sectors of society, business circles, the cultural and scientific community and young people, which demonstrates the great potential of friendship between ordinary peoples and people's diplomacy in the SCO countries as a whole.

In general, the joint fight against the coronavirus strengthens the "Shanghai Spirit" and brings the SCO Member States together. Working closely with each other, they reaffirm their commitment to a philosophy of open development and a community based on shared responsibility.

Battling the 'hunger virus'

Shahzad Waseem

The complete lockdown policy, as we have also seen in India and other parts of the world, did not turn out to be socio-economically viable or sustainable. The New York Times, in an article, outlined the failure of Prime Minister Narendra Modi's govt in dealing with the Covid-19 pandemic

THE deadly and disruptive Covid-19 pandemic has brought to the fore the fragility of human life as well as the fissures and weaknesses in the global economic, trade and healthcare systems, social fabric and disaster response mechanisms.

The pandemic also spawned socio-economic ramifications as the 'hunger virus'. A significant proportion of the world's population living close, on or below the poverty line struggled even to get food, let alone other necessities. This view is also supported by a July 9 Oxfam publication, 'The hunger virus: how Covid-19 is fuelling hunger in a hungry world', which says that Covid-19 is deepening the hunger crisis in the world's hunger hotspots and creating new epicenters of hunger across the globe.

The complete lockdown policy, as we have also seen in India and other parts of the world, did not turn out to be socio-economically viable or sustainable. The New York Times, in an article, outlined the failure of Prime Minister Narendra Modi's government in dealing with the Covid-19 pandemic. Also Tim Sebastian, in one of his 'Conflict Zone' segments on DW TV, severely berated the Indian government for the hasty and ill-planned March 24 lockdown that left millions of workers in cities stranded without jobs, shelter, food and means of transport.

However, Pakistan, as per Prime Minister Imran Khan's vision, quite early on realized that a complete lockdown was not a sustainable and viable solution. Therefore, the PTI government, keeping in view the economic challenges as well as hardships being faced by the common citizen, prioritised providing relief to the common man, labourers, daily-wage earners, poor people, traders and the business community. In this regard, the policy of 'smart lockdown' was strategically implemented, based on real time data and targeting only those localities where a higher incidence of the disease was observed or reported. A 'testing, tracing and quarantining' (TTQ) strategy is being employed as part of the containment strategy.

The 'smart lockdown' was not an easy decision, and proved to be a test of strong leadership and nerves amidst scathing criticism from different quarters. However, as the world also acknowledged later on, it proved to be the most effective and pro-people approach to tackle the pandemic. The Bloomberg news agency also termed the smart lockdown approach the only hope of returning to a more normal life as the world awaits a vaccine. Also, Business Standard, a Bangladesh-based news platform, while lauding Prime Minister Imran Khan's policy of smart lockdown, stated that "But now as the results show that the measure works, many developing nations are also promoting the policy".

Pakistan, despite meager resources and economic difficulties, efficiently handled the pandemic situation through visionary leadership, realistic and futuristic policies, self-reliance and effective coordination between federal and provincial health authorities despite 'health' being a devolved subject post the 18th Amendment.

When the PTI government came to power, the health sector in general, and epidemic and disease surveillance and response mechanisms in particular, were in a shambles. The incumbent government, under the leadership of Prime Minister Imran Khan, made hectic efforts to ameliorate the situation and set right the wrongs of the past. This progressive approach proved very conducive to effectively and efficiently handling the Covid-19 pandemic.

Through tailor-made strategies, the capacities of our healthcare institutions were enhanced along with our testing capabilities and number of laboratories. Indigenous capacities were built, as a result of which Pakistan is now not only manufacturing ventilators and personal protective equipment (PPE), but also exporting the same.

The National Command and Operations Centre

(NCOC) proved to be a nerve centre to synergize and articulate unified national efforts against Covid-19. Taking another step in the right direction, Prime Minister Imran Khan launched the Ehsaas Emergency Cash programme in order to provide cash assistance to millions of poor people who lost their jobs due to the outbreak. The driving idea behind the economic stimulus initiative was to support small businesses and protect the livelihoods labourers and other workers.

The Covid-19 pandemic also proved to be a test of leadership around the world. In the South Asian context, Prime Minister Modi's weak leadership and mishandling of the situation was severely exposed and widely criticized. On the other hand, Prime Minister Imran Khan's visionary leadership, his bold pro-people policies, timely decisions and very apt handling of the situation were well appreciated worldwide.

The key takeaway based on Pakistan's handling of the crisis is that health forms an integral part of a country's national security matrix, and, hence, must be prioritized as such as being done by the PTI government. Strategic implementation of the 'smart lockdown' proved crucial to minimizing disease prevalence, human suffering and the socio-economic impact of the pandemic. However, we must not let our guard down and become complacent. Strict observance of SOPs, maintaining social distancing and adopting precautionary measures as defined by the government will see Pakistan home and dry.

As they say: "The tests we face in life's journey are not to reveal our weaknesses but to help us discover our inner strengths. We can only know how strong we are when we strive and thrive beyond the challenges we face".

While the Covid-19 pandemic has posed many challenges, it has also given us all an opportunity to discover and tap our hidden potentials and strengths.

France sees record 13.8 percent GDP plunge

DNA

PARIS: France's economy contracted by a record 13.8 percent in the second quarter under the impact of coronavirus lockdowns, the national statistics institute INSEE said. The seasonally-adjusted quarter-on-quarter drop in gross domestic product (GDP) was better than forecast but worse than the performance of most of its eurozone peers. "GDP's negative developments in first half of 2020 is linked to the shut-down of 'non-essential' activities in the context of the implementation of the lockdown between mid-March and the beginning of May," INSEE said in a statement.

'Forced decoupling' of economies will hurt both, China warns India

'Beijing was not a strategic threat to New Delhi and that the general structure that we can't live without each other remains unchanged'

DNA

NEW DELHI: Chinese Ambassador Sun Weidong has warned India that a "forced decoupling" of their economies would only lead to a "lose-lose" outcome. The Chinese ambassador said Beijing was not a strategic threat to New Delhi and that the "general structure that we can't live without each other remains unchanged". The statement came after New Delhi's recent moves to ban or sideline Chinese business interests in one of the world's biggest markets, even as the border remains tense with many more troops on the ground than usual. "China advocates win-win cooperation and opposes a zero-sum game," Ambassador Weidong wrote on Twitter. "Our economies are highly complementary, interwoven and interdependent. Forced decoupling is against the trend and will only lead to a 'lose-lose' outcome." Officials of the nuclear-armed neighbours have been talking regularly to de-escalate the border standoff after the June 15 clash in the Galwan Valley of India's Ladakh region when the Indian officials said soldiers were beaten to death with rocks and clubs. Indian officials say Chinese troops have intruded onto its side in the remote western region, while China says it has not breached the disputed border and has asked India to restrain its frontline troops. India's Ministry of External Affairs said in an online briefing that a troops disengagement process as agreed by the two sides had yet to be completed, and that another round of commander-level talks would be held soon. "We expect that the Chinese side will sincerely work with us for complete disengagement and de-escalation and full restoration of peace and tranquility in the border areas at the earliest," spokesman Anurag Srivastava said. Analysts say the worst fighting between the giant countries in decades is likely to push India closer to the United States, both strategically and in trade.

'Opposition welcome to bring no-confidence motion'

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Dr. Shahbaz Gill has said that the opposition can try and bring no-confidence motion against PM Imran Khan if they wish, they will never be successful. The person who banded together with Fazl-ur-Rehman to overthrow the government is giving lectures on democracy, Gill said. In response to Bilawal Zardari's statement, Special Assistant to the Prime Minister Dr Shahbaz Gill said that Bilawal has inherited the politics of protecting looted wealth instead of the national interest. The SAPM said that fiddling with national security for personal gain was nothing new for the Zardari family, democratic values are something Bilawal has no relation with. The Zardari and Sharif families have only used the slogan of democracy to loot the nation, he added.

Xinjiang to enhance ties with Pakistan

"Xinjiang is leading the recovery and return to growth in the whole of China in these difficult times, of pandemic" says Irfan Shahzad Takalvi, founding president of ECI

SPECIAL REPORT

URUMQI: China's Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region bordering Pakistan has registered 3.3% growth in its Gross Domestic Product (GDP) during first half of 2020, despite COVID-19 related impacts all across the world including on Chinese economy. This continuity of positive momentum signals that economic and commercial linkages between Pakistan and Xinjiang are all set for further expansion and betterment in months and years ahead. Islamabad-based Eurasian Century Institute (ECI) researching on Xinjiang and the region's ties with Pakistan sees this growth translating into not only better quality of life for its own people, but also cementing of commercial bonds with regional countries, particularly Pakistan. "Xinjiang is leading the recovery and return to growth in the whole of China in these difficult times, of pandemic" says Irfan Shahzad Takalvi, founding president of ECI. The institute's research finds that Xinjiang's GDP growth in first six months of the calendar year stands at second highest amongst all Chinese provinces and regions, second only to 5.1% of Tibet. However, as overall volume of Xinjiang's GDP is almost six times that of Tibet's - 3.3% growth means Xinjiang is adding much more to China's national GDP. ECI's research also forecasts that volume of trade between Pakistan and Xinjiang is heading fast towards $ 1 billion mark. As CPEC related infrastructure particularly upgradation of Korakoram Highway moves towards completion, a big jump in trade and commerce as well as people-to-people movement between the two sides is around the corner. Further, China's central and region's local authorities are working on a comprehensive plan to enhance Xinjiang's connectivity with the rest of China on one hand and Pakistan, Russia and Central Asian republics on the other hand. This means a lot of new opportunities for Pakistan in China and in the wider region, and also so vice versa. It may be noted here that Xinjiang covers almost 1/6th of total landmass of China, thus making up twice the size of Pakistan.
