'FBR harassing people who availed amnesty scheme'

ISLAMABAD: Leader of the business community and former President ICCI Shahid Rasheed Butt on Wednesday said mafia gangs have become a threat to the system and masses which must be controlled. Government should stop taking notice on every move of mafia and take stern action to stop them from fleecing masses, he said. Shahid Rasheed Butt said that poultry products have become more expensive in summer as compared to the last winter; therefore, its exports should be banned and smuggling should be stopped to stabilize prices in the market.

He noted that poultry lords have manipulated the market to bankrupt small poultry farmers and started looting masses. Eggs which were available at Rs80 and 90 per dozen in the last winter are now being sold for Rs130 to 150 per dozen while the chicken is being sold at Rs230 to Rs260 which was almost Rs110 few months back. He said that inaction against wheat, sugar, pharma, IPP, LPG, petroleum and other mafia groups have emboldened the poultry mafia that has added to the problems of masses facing high inflation. Others mafias are also initiated their activities as they are sure that they will evade any meaningful administrative and legal action which is evident from shortage of wheat, flour and tomatoes in different cities. The business leader said that some FBR officials have started harassing people who declared their hidden assets in the tax amnesty scheme announced in 2018 which is a violation of Voluntary Declaration of Domestic Assets Act of 2018. The government should step in immediately and restore order before further erosion of its credibility takes place, he demanded. ## Sindh CM slams Ali Zaidi

ISLAMABAD: The war of words between the Pakistan Peoples Party and the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf over Uzair Baloch's JIT report continues as Sindh Chief Minister Murad Ali Shah has hit out at the 'irresponsible' behaviour of a federal minister over the report. "There was a lot of irresponsible behaviour on the part of [PTI MNA] Ali Zaidi, who himself is admitting that the current report is missing the required signatures," said Shah. CM Murad was responding to questions put to him by media persons outside the National Accountability Bureau (NAB) office in Islamabad, where he appeared before a combined investigation team of the bureau for questioning in a graft case. The Sindh CM also questioned the authenticity of the report. "He claims that someone dropped off the report at his house on a motorcycle," he said with a chuckle. "I think, and this is my opinion, that they want to help the culprits." Shah seemed almost in disbelief at the whole situation. "Nobody shows such irresponsible behaviour in normal circumstances, let alone in such an important case," added the Sindh CM. "He said yesterday that there are six signatures even though there are seven needed. It does not suit a federal minister, an MNA, someone who is a political and sensible man, to be acting in such an irresponsible manner," said Murad. He scoffed at the manner in which Zaidi received the report and said if he had told everyone how he got it from a random man on a motorcycle initially, no one would have taken him seriously.

India continues to follow its aggressive policy: President CGSS

It is clear that China is no longer reluctant to act militarily if its core interests are threatened; Webinar on "China-India border standoff"

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Center for Global & Strategic Studies (CGSS), Islamabad organized a Webinar "China-India Border Standoff & Strategic Implications for Islamabad". The aim of the Webinar was to discuss the recent border tensions between China-India and its impact on regional security and stability. Maj Gen Syed Khalid Amir Jaffery (Retd), President CGSS commenced the webinar and stated that China has never been an expansionist state and has never followed an aggressive policy. However, India has continued to follow its traditional policy of absorbing territory gradually. They have been doing this to Pakistan and now China. It is clear that China is no longer reluctant to act militarily if its core interests are threatened. Ambassador Riaz Khokhar, Former Foreign Secretary of Pakistan stated that India came up with new maps, thereby prompting the whole crisis. It has been vocal about not only recovering Azad Kashmir but GB and Aksai Chin as well. India is now projecting itself as a victim and seeks attention from western powers especially the US, as in US there is mounting anti-China sentiment and China is seen as a challenger to its global status.

Mr. Victor Zhikai GAO, Chair Professor Soochow University & Vice President, Center for China & Globalization, Beijing, China mentioned the Tonya-Harding syndrome in China-US relations. He stated that the goal of whacking Chinese kneecaps to prevent China's steady rise, is a futile attempt by US. China will be significantly larger and more impactful than US in next few years and US will have to accept this reality. He further said that war is against China's fundamental interests of peace and mutual peaceful coexistence, and India's fundamental interest of industrialization. Moreover, any military escalation will be a drain on resources for both the countries, though more detrimental for India.

Lt Gen Tariq Waseem Ghazi, HI (M), (Retd), Former Defence Secretary of Pakistan stated that China has the capability to respond to India's aggression both diplomatically and militarily but it has refrained from doing so, keeping in view its diplomatic and strategic domain in the region. India has been falsely propagating against China. Pakistan and China need to further strengthen and build a greater collation, partnership and mutual relations. Ambassador Zamir Akram, Former Permanent Representative to the UN, stated that a new cold war has been initiated hinting towards a tri-polar world. America has been promoting and supporting Indian aggression in the region causing a threat to regional peace. He stated that the immediate trigger to re-surface the issue was Modi Government's decision to change the status of Jammu and Kashmir. The danger of standoff escalating into wider confrontation cannot be ruled out. Prof. Huang Yunsong, Associate Dean, School of International Studies, Sichuan University, Chengdu, China stated that India has over estimated their military strength imagining that China will succumb to its tactics but our message to India is very clear.

PTDC issues

THE Pakistan Tourism Development Corporation (PTDC) has been in the news for all the wrong reasons lately. The latest is that the PTDC has reportedly shut down the operations of 36 of its motels and fired as many as 450 employees. The reason given is the financial losses aggravated by the Covid-19 pandemic. Some of these PTDC units had already been declared unfit and closed for over a year now. This is despite the PM's announcement about his vision to revive the tourism sector in the country. Ever since changes at the National Tourism Coordination Board (NTCB), we have been hearing about plans to attract millions of tourists to Pakistan. There has been grand talk about facilitating visas and providing first-class reception to foreigners visiting Pakistan, and now suddenly we hear that the government has had another U-turn with its promises.

Government representatives have repeatedly rubbished rumours of the PTDC shutting down and have even promised that a restructuring is underway to transform the corporation into a vibrant organization with a better workforce and improved policymaking. In the latest development, the Pakistan Hotels Association (PHA) has offered the federal government its partnership to prevent the closure of the PTDC motels especially in northern areas.

It is true that the PTDC had been facing a financial crunch even before Covid-19 hit the country, but the way it is being handled is pretty unfortunate. While the intentions of the PHA cannot be doubted, there are certain points that must be raised before a final decision is taken in this regard. First, the PTI-led government has been blaming the previous governments for failing to revive the public sector, and it assumed power with a promise to improve the lot of the state-owned enterprises.

Second, so-called public-private partnership usually ends up in the usurpation of precious government assets by the private sector with the connivance of bureaucrats and public officials. The governments make public organizations dysfunctional and become keen on partnering with the private sector, which is even more eager to lap up the assets that essentially belong to the public.

Let it be clear that the private sector has an essential motive of profit-making while the public sector has at its roots the public interest first. We have seen privatization of banks, educational institutions, K-Electric, PTCL, and many others which have resulted in a huge bonanza for the buyers and exploitation of public land and other assets. What the government needs to do is rehabilitate the PTDC with efficient planning and management which has been the weakest point of the present government.

In two-years' time, the government should have come up with a thorough planning process resulting in a viable strategy, but be it PIA, Pakistan Railways, Pak Steel, and now the PTDC, no revival is in sight, no plans ready and no strategy developed. What we have had is just talk and more talk.

Electronic waste

HUMAN beings around the world discarded 53 million tonnes of electronic waste in 2019, an amount that weighs as much as all the humans of Europe put together. The e-waste means more precious minerals including gold have to be mined to meet the demand for replacement products while some of the waste which includes tossed away smartphones, computers and electronic car parts also present a potential threat to the environment and human health as they degrade. The UN has said that materials worth more than $55 billion are being wasted each year and there has been a 20 percent increase in just five years. This makes e-waste one of the biggest waste issues in the world. One of the problems is that devices are being replaced more quickly than ever before, often because of their shorter lifespans or the pressures of consumerism.

There is also a lack of infrastructure for the e-waste problem. Asia generated the largest volume of e-waste in 2019, with 24.9 million tonnes, followed by the Americas and then Europe. The problem is one that seems likely to continue to grow. A global mechanism to recycle e-waste could possibly help, but would need to be set in place quickly and in a fashion that would encourage consumers of these goods to utilize it.

At present, people simply feel there is no option but to discard used products including refrigerators, washing machines and other appliances as well as computers or phones. The number of these devices is growing rapidly around the world. This means the problem of disposal will increase too and become a further source of pressure on the planet and its systems as human demand pushes it towards destruction.

It is notable that compared to Europe and the Americas, waste from Africa and Oceania is negligible. The problem then is one linked also to wealth and purchasing power. In the past, there have been reports of dumped computers deposited in areas that include the coasts of Pakistan leaking radioactive waste.

The problem is an immense one. In poorer countries, many of these items are recycled far more commonly than is the case in the West.

Perhaps in this case, the West could learn from the poorer nations of the world and develop systems where discarded phones or other devices could be recycled and used by those unable to buy their own and computers put to use at underprivileged schools and zones where children from low-income groups acquire their education.

It is likely that the full economic situation resulting from the virus has not yet materialized. Some of the world's greatest destabilizers, such as Russia, are still in the midst of their outbreak – so who knows how it will end for them. Even the Chinese, who were the first to suffer from the virus, are not yet out of the woods.

Even though there are many uncertainties pertaining to the geopolitical impact of the virus, policymakers can make assumptions on which to base and develop policy. In terms of the long-term impact of COVID-19 in international affairs, there are three assumptions that foreign policy practitioners should base their assessments on.

The first is that many of the challenges that existed before the pandemic will continue to be a problem well into the future. Russia will still be a revisionist power eager to exert its influence on the Eurasian landmass and beyond. China will not stop its predatory investment practices in places like Africa and Central Asia. In fact, it is likely to take advantage of the terrible economic situation in these regions to do so. Iran will continue to export terrorism across the Middle East. These pre-existing challenges will be made more difficult by the fact that the world will likely face economic recession for the foreseeable future. The drop in the price of oil will put even more pressure on those countries relying on the export of hydrocarbons to balance their budgets.

The second assumption is that rogue and autocratic regimes will become even more desperate as their struggle against COVID-19 becomes harder. Unfortunately, autocratic leaders know that one of the fastest, albeit short-term, ways to restore legitimacy and faith in the ruling elite is to get a desperate population to rally round the flag.

Too often, these regimes resort to military adventurism to accomplish this. This is what Russian President Vladimir Putin did in Georgia in 2008 and Ukraine in 2014. Iran does this in places like Syria or with its aggression in the Gulf. So it's only logical to assume that, as the global pandemic makes such regimes more desperate, they are likely to become more belligerent in response. The third assumption is that the international community will have to do more with less to confront these challenges. Huge amounts of national resources have been devoted to confronting the virus.

Trillions of dollars have been spent on bailing out and propping up economies. Billions of dollars have been allocated to fight the virus and search for a vaccine. In some cases, militaries have been used for domestic responses to the crisis. Put simply, the economic fallout from the pandemic still has not been fully felt. Adding to the problem is that hundreds of millions of workers are without a job, people are having trouble paying their bills, and a global recession is looming. Even though many of the same geopolitical challenges that were around before the pandemic will remain, there will be less money and fewer resources to confront them.

The wildcard in all of this is China. A month ago, one could assume that China would benefit greatly in the aftermath of the COVID-19 pandemic.

It was able to stockpile its strategic reserves of crude oil at dirt-cheap prices. It was coming out of its lockdown and reopening its economy at a time when many across the world were just starting theirs. China was also gaining a considerable amount of goodwill by sending personal protective equipment (PPE) and ventilators to countries struggling to cope with the pandemic. And Beijing was running a very smooth and sophisticated disinformation campaign on the origins and history of COVID-19 to divert any culpability it might have had over the spread of the virus.

But already the cracks are beginning to show. Beijing this month canceled 1,200 flights and closed schools due to a sharp increase in cases. A lot of the PPE support that was given by China to struggling countries has now been proven to be faulty and useless. Few are buying Chinese claims that the US is responsible for the spread of the virus. Places where China had been building reservoirs of goodwill and influence in recent years, like in Central and Eastern Europe, have become increasingly skeptical of Beijing's motives.

Perhaps the one thing that is made certain by the pandemic is that the era of big power competition is alive and well – and that this is not going to change soon. So, as policymakers develop national strategies to navigate the post-COVID-19 world, they should prepare for the worst and not even bother hoping for the best.

Whether it is in day-to-day life, the global economy or geopolitical challenges and threats, the world has fundamentally changed in ways we still do not fully understand.

Uzbekistan efforts for managing economic challenges

Dr. Ulugbek Saydiev

The social protection measures have been undertaken by the government to support the groups of the population whose wellbeing is affected by the pandemic. The people quarantined with infection and suspected with infection, as well as persons with children under the age of 14, are paid temporary disability benefits in the amount of their average salary. A simplified procedure for issuing the document on a temporary disability is set. The allowances to families with children and childcare benefits, which terms ended in March-June, are extended by six months

FOR the last three years, Uzbekistan is progressively implementing its new development strategy, initiated by President Shavkat Mirziyoyev. The strategy embraces five priority areas: public administration and civil society, rule of law, economy, social issues, and international relations.

The global pandemic crisis led to a situation where the Uzbekistan government had to align the strategic development plan with the emergency measures to mitigate the pandemic effect on the health and wellbeing of people and the economy as a whole.

The first cases of infections with COVID-19 emerged in the country in mid-March. In response to the challenges associated with the spread of the pandemic, in March 19, the President signed a decree on priority measures to mitigate the negative impact of the pandemic and global economic crisis. A special state commission headed by the Prime Minister Abdulla Aripov and Anti-Crisis Fund of 10 trillion UZS were created by the decree.

The first measures included:

- financing the measures to combat the spread of coronavirus infection;
- supporting entrepreneurship and employment;
- expansion of social support for the population;
- ensuring the sustainable functioning of the economy.

To avoid panic among the population, all necessary measures have been undertaken to prevent the dissemination of false and inaccurate information in media. Since March 16, Uzbekistan closed all its transport connections with foreign countries except cargo transportation. All incoming vehicles are treated with special disinfectants. Charter flights are arranged for citizens who want to return home from abroad. All mass events, including sport, cultural and religious, have been suspended. Wedding events have to be held observing the necessary sanitary measures. Most public organizations and all educational establishments were recommended to transfer their work and external connections into the on-line mode.

More than 5,5 thousand specially trained health care professionals are mobilized to combat the spread of infection. Two national level, 14 regional hospitals, and 216 sanitary and epidemiological establishments provide health care measures to combat the pandemic.

The epidemical situation is being assessed based on hourly and daily data.

The social protection measures have been undertaken by the government to support the groups of the population whose wellbeing is affected by the pandemic. The people quarantined with infection and suspected with infection, as well as persons with children under the age of 14, are paid temporary disability benefits in the amount of their average salary. A simplified procedure for issuing the document on a temporary disability is set. The allowances to families with children and childcare benefits, which terms ended in March-June, are extended by six months. The number of beneficiaries who receive financial support is increased by 10 percent, up to 60 000. Employees of budgetary organizations who suspended their activity get their salaries in time. The basic foodstuffs and hygiene products (masks, antiseptics, etc.) are delivered to lonely elderly and disabled people. Extraordinary interventions have been undertaken to ensure the stability of prices in the foodstuffs market.

The stability of the banking and payment systems has been provided by means of monetary policy instruments. By October 1, 2020, commercial banks deferred a total sum of 5 trillion UZS loan repayments for tour operators, hotel business entities, transport and logistics firms, and other enterprises, including those who are experiencing difficulties due to restrictions on trade. Also, tax holidays were granted to these business entities. Recently, due to the relaxation of quarantine measures, 17 thousand manufacturing and 10 thousand construction enterprises resumed their activity. In most of them, cash flows decreased by 3 times compared to the period before the quarantine regime. The Government and Central Bank of Uzbekistan make the appropriate measures to provide these enterprises with liquidity.

According to the preliminary estimates, the pandemic affected on the level of unemployment in the country and led to reduction of the income of about 450 thousand families. Appropriate measures are being undertaken to mitigate these challenges on the national and regional levels. An additional 1 trillion UZS were allocated for the implementation of the state family business program. In total, 4 trillion UZS to be allocated for the family business programs this year. To date, 540 thousand families got support from the nationwide charity fund "Generosity and Support" in the amount of 307 billion UZS. In Uzbekistan more than 5.5 thousand medical staff were involved to stop pandemic situation. It was entrusted to provide them with extra 120 percent of salary.

The Ministry of Internal Affairs and the National Guard are monitoring the observance of quarantine by citizens. There were defined special tasks of providing tax holidays and preferences for credit debt, the allocation of budget loans to sectors most exposed to coronavirus. For example, there are growing risks of non-repayment of loans in the amount of 90 billion UZS in the hotel business, in 650 billion UZS in the transport and logistics sector, by 180 billion UZS in the catering sector, by 3.6 trillion UZS in foreign trade enterprises. Travel agencies and hotels continue to pay a tourist fee of $ 2-3 per day.

In this regard, an instruction was given to extend the maturity of loans of these enterprises, temporarily suspend the collection of tourist fees.

In the regions the governors are authorized to provide deferred enterprises with payment of local taxes for up to 6 months. Along with this, tax rates on personal income for individual entrepreneurs and tax on the use of water resources for farmers are reduced by 50 percent. In this case, the loss of local budgets will be reimbursed from the republican budget.

A moratorium on tax audits will be announced before the end of the year, accrual of interest on tax debt of enterprises are suspended.

Given the situation in international trade, it was instructed not to apply fines in connection with overdue debts on export-import operations, to increase the product pass through the "green corridors", and to promptly solve the problems associated with cargo transportation.

Solving the tasks set in this direction will not only significantly mitigate the social consequences of the global economic crisis but will also help expand the country's economic potential by creating new jobs and increasing output, which in the long run will increase incomes and living standards of the population.

'US has not sought meeting with N Korea'

SEOUL: US Deputy Secretary of State and North Korea envoy Stephen Biegun on Wednesday poured cold water on reports Washington had sought a meeting with Pyongyang officials, with nuclear discussions at a standstill. Biegun is on a four-day trip to Seoul and Tokyo to discuss North Korea's denuclearisation. The visit triggered speculation in the South that Washington was trying to rekindle diplomacy with Pyongyang ahead of the US presidential election in November, even though the North has repeatedly said it had no interest in talks. "I've seen some press comments that the North Koreans are not prepared to meet with me on this visit," Biegun told reporters after talks with his South Korean counterpart.

Milan stun Juventus in a 4-2 win

DNA

MILAN: Zlatan Ibrahimovic's penalty sparked a remarkable AC Milan comeback victory against title-chasing Juventus at the San Siro. After an uneventful first half, Milan scored four unanswered second-half goals having gone 2-0 down to Juve strikes from Adrien Rabiot and Cristiano Ronaldo.

Ibrahimovic's 62nd-minute penalty offered hope, before Franck Kessie and Rafael Leao completed a five-minute turnaround. Ante Rebic added a fourth to secure a memorable victory with 10 minutes remaining.

Defeat sees Maurizio Sarri's side miss the chance to move 10 points clear of second-placed Lazio, who lost 2-1 to relegation-threatened Lecce earlier on Tuesday. It took Maurizio Sarri's visitors until first-half injury time to register their first shot on target, but Rabiot's spectacular finish from the edge of the box - after running with the ball from his own half - sparked the contest into life.

Ronaldo, who became the first player to reach 25 Serie A goals in a season for the club since 1961 on Saturday, met Juan Cuadrado's pass to score for a fifth successive game and leave Juve in control. However, Ibrahimovic's spot-kick, which was awarded after Leonardo Bonucci was penalised for handball, flipped the momentum.

Milan were soon level after Kessie wriggled through the Juventus defence unchallenged, while Leao beat Wojciech Szczesny at his near post from a tight angle.

A fired-up Milan continued to attack Sarri's shell-shocked side and were rewarded as Rebic swept home to seal three points which send a resurgent Milan up to fifth.

Dutch police discover secret torture site

AMSTERDAM: Authorities in the Netherlands have discovered an apparent torture site hidden inside shipping containers, which were lined with sound-proofing material and filled with assumed torture devices, the country's National Prosecutor's Office has said.

Officers raided the site at Wouwe Plantage on the Dutch-Belgian border on June 22, arresting six men suspected of kidnapping and hostage taking.

They found six shipping containers which had been converted to what are believed to be "prison cells," as well as a stash of weaponry including pruning shears and loppers. "In each of the cells, handcuffs were attached to the ceiling and floor, in order to be able to chain someone standing up with their arms raised," the statement said. "The rooms were finished with noise isolating panels and heat-insulating foil."

One of the units also contained a dental chair, with straps for feet and arms. "The sea container with the dental chair contained bags with objects that were presumably intended to torture or at least put pressure on victims," the statement added. "The police found, among other things, pruning shears, loppers, a branch saw, scalpels, pliers, extra handcuffs, fingercuffs, tape, balaclavas, and black cotton bags that can be pulled over the head. During a search at a home in Rotterdam, 24 kilos of MDMA was also found."

NASA hits Boeing with 80 proposals

WASHINGTON: NASA has drawn up a list of 80 recommendations that US aerospace giant Boeing will have to address before attempting to re-fly its Starliner space capsule, following the failure of an uncrewed test last year.

The recommendations primarily concern the on-board software, which was the main problem with the flight test last December. The capsule could not be placed in the correct orbit, due to a clock error, and a had to return to Earth after two days instead of docking with the International Space Station as planned.

Boeing subsequently learned that other software problems could have caused the capsule and the rocket to collide at the time of separation, a potentially very dangerous event if the flight had been crewed.

Most of the problems identified run deep and are organizational, for example NASA's verification procedures. The space agency has been a client of Boeing's for decades, but seems to have placed too much faith in its historic partner.

"Perhaps we were a little more focused on SpaceX," said Steve Stich, manager of NASA's Commercial Crew Program, in a call with reporters. — APP

US sees record 60,000 cases as tally crosses 3M

DNA

HOUSTON: The US reported a record of more than 60,000 daily confirmed cases of coronavirus on Tuesday, according to Johns Hopkins University.

The previous highest tally was 55,220, which the US recorded on 2 July. Earlier, The United States passed the grim milestone of over three million confirmed coronavirus cases as several states reported record numbers of new infections.

Authorities have reported alarming upswings of daily caseloads in roughly two dozen states over the past two weeks, a sign that efforts to control transmission of the novel coronavirus have failed in large swaths of the country. California, Hawaii, Idaho, Missouri, Montana, Oklahoma and Texas on Tuesday shattered their previous daily record highs for new cases.

The biggest jumps occurred in Texas and California, the two largest US states, with more than 10,000 each. About 24 states have reported disturbingly high infection rates as a percentage of diagnostic tests conducted over the past week.

In Texas alone, the number of hospitalized patients more than doubled in just two weeks.

France rules out 'total lockdown'

PARIS: The French government said Wednesday it is preparing for a second wave of COVID-19 cases that could emerge in the coming months, but will not respond with another nationwide lockdown to contain the outbreak.

"My aim is to prepare France for an eventual second wave, while preserving our daily life, our economic and social life," new Prime Minister Jean Castex said in an interview on RTL television.

"But we're not going to impose a lockdown like the one we did last March, because we've learned... that the economic and human consequences from a total lockdown are disastrous," he said.

Instead any business closures or stay-at-home orders would be "targeted" to specific areas, he said. "The coronavirus is still here," Castex warned, adding that he would travel Sunday to France's South American territory of French Guiana, which is reeling from a surge in cases.

Officials reported 124 new cases in the territory on Tuesday, bringing the total to nearly 5,200, and the government has dispatched dozens of health workers from the mainland to reinforce hospital staff. — APP

US begins formal process of withdrawing from WHO

Letters sent to US Congress and the UN trigger a formal one-year process of withdrawing from the international agency

DNA

WASHINGTON: Following through on a threat he made in May, the Trump administration on Tuesday notified the United States Congress that it is formally withdrawing from the World Health Organization (WHO).

Democratic Senator Bob Menendez, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, announced the move on Twitter.

"Congress received notification that POTUS officially withdrew the U.S. from the '@WHO' in the midst of a pandemic. To call Trump's response to COVID chaotic & incoherent doesn't do it justice. This won't protect American lives or interests - it leaves Americans sick & America alone," he wrote.

A State Department official confirmed to CNN that the administration has also sent a notice to the secretary-general of the United Nations stating its intention to withdraw effective July 6, 2021. The letter triggers a one-year timeline for the move.

US President Donald Trump has repeatedly criticised the WHO, claiming that China has "total control" over the organisation and allowed itself to be misled during the early days of the coronavirus pandemic. The virus first emerged in the Wuhan province of China.

"Because they have failed to make the requested and greatly needed reforms, we will be today terminating our relationship with the World Health Organization," Trump said in late May. He said the US contributes about $450m to the WHO while China provides about $40m, adding that the US will be "redirecting those funds to other worldwide and deserving urgent global public health needs".

In a May letter to WHO chief Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, Trump threatened to halt funding altogether if it does not commit to reforms within 30 days.

The WHO has since bowed to calls from most of its member states to launch an independent probe into how it managed the international response to the pandemic, a probe that is expected to shed light on the origins of the virus and China's early handling of the outbreak. Observers noted that because the process takes one year to complete, a successor to Trump could conceivably reverse the decision if he is not re-elected in the November general election in the US.

'KOICA contribution to social initiatives significant'

DNA

TASHKENT: The Deputy Prime Minister, Minister of Investments and Foreign Trade of the Republic of Uzbekistan, Sardor Umurzakov, discussed issues of financial and technical cooperation and its expansion in the near future with the President of Korea International Cooperation Agency (KOICA), Lee Mi-kyung, in Seoul.

During the dialogue, the Uzbek side noted the Agency's significant contribution to the implementation of socially significant initiatives in Uzbekistan. Since the opening of KOICA office in the country, 31 projects worth $107 million have been implemented, more than 2 thousand internships for Uzbekistan specialists in Korea have been organized and a trip has been organized for more than 500 expert volunteers in healthcare, education, information technologies, communal services, agriculture and water resources, energy and transport.

The active nature of the current cooperation was emphasized. Currently, within the framework of the Partnership Strategy for 2016-2020, 7 projects worth $30 million are being implemented in the country, while in the second half of this year it is expected to launch 3 new projects in the amount of $27.5 million in such priority areas as education, healthcare, water management and public administration. In addition, thanks to the consistent joint work on implementation of the medium-term Program for 2020-2022, signed between MIFT and KOICA during the state visit of the President of Korea to Uzbekistan in April last year, 5 projects worth $45.5 million have already been approved.

In this context, a number of issues related to successful and timely implementation of the planned projects were discussed.

Prospects for implementing, together with Korea Foundation for International Healthcare (KOFIH), the Program for comprehensive advanced training of medical workers of Uzbekistan in 2021-2024, which provides for the organization of training programs in quality systems of medical care and ensuring patient safety, were considered.

UK Finance minister wants youth jobs

LONDON: British finance minister Rishi Sunak will announce on Wednesday his next moves to prevent a wave of job cuts from snowballing into a full-blown unemployment crisis in the world's sixth-biggest economy. Sunak is already on course to take the United Kingdom's borrowing to World War II levels as he subsidises nine million jobs - equivalent to more than one-third of private-sector employees - alongside other emergency measures. The 40-year-old former Goldman Sachs analyst, who only became finance minister in February, has won plaudits for setting aside the pro-market instincts of his Conservative Party and putting the state at the heart of the UK's coronavirus response.

Now, with a string of companies announcing redundancies - from the publisher of the Daily Mirror newspaper to jet engine maker Rolls-Royce - he is facing calls to do more, including cuts to employers' social security contributions. Sunak's announcement in parliament - expected around 11:30 GMT - will include a 2 billion-pound ($2.5bn) fund to create six-month work placement jobs for unemployed 16 to 24-year-olds and the largest ever rise in partly government-funded apprenticeships. — DNA

Russia charges space chief's aide with treason

NEWS DESK

MOSCOW: Russian security forces have arrested a former journalist who works as an aide to the head of Russia's space agency on treason charges, accusing him of passing military secrets to an unnamed NATO power. Footage released by the FSB security service on Tuesday showed Ivan Safronov being arrested outside his Moscow flat by armed plain-clothes agents who searched him before putting him into a van. Safronov, who has covered military affairs for two national newspapers, faces up to 20 years in jail if found guilty. His trial is expected to be held behind closed doors because of its sensitive nature. Roscosmos, Russia's space agency, said the case against Safronov was not linked to his work as a media adviser to Dmitry Rogozin, the agency's director-general. Safronov started work there in May. Rogozin told the TASS news agency Safronov did not have access to secret information. The FSB Security Service accused Safronov of working for an unnamed foreign intelligence service. "Safronov, carrying out tasks for one of the NATO countries' intelligence services, gathered and handed over to its representative state secrets and information about military-technical cooperation and about the defence and security of the Russian Federation," the FSB said in a statement.

Victoria coronavirus cases surge

DNA

MELBOURNE: The Australian state of Victoria has confirmed 134 new cases of coronavirus in the past 24 hours, as its borders were closed and it moved to impose a six-week lockdown in Melbourne.

Brazil's President Jair Bolsonaro has tested positive for COVID-19 after months of downplaying the virus as a "little flu".

The United States has officially notified the United Nations secretary-general of the country's withdrawal from the World Health Organization even as it grapples with nearly three million cases of coronavirus.

A group of opposition supporters stormed the Serbian parliament on Tuesday night in a protest against plans to impose a lockdown on the capital this weekend. Nearly 11.8 million people around the world have been diagnosed with COVID-19, and nearly 544,000 have died, according to data compiled by Johns Hopkins University. The US and Brazil have reported the most cases and the highest death tolls.

50 million Africans in extreme poverty risk

ABIDJAN: Nearly 50 million Africans could be driven into extreme poverty in the economic fallout of the coronavirus pandemic, the African Development Bank (AfDB) said Tuesday.

Roughly a third of the continent - 425 million people - was already expected to live below the international poverty line of $1.90 per day in 2020, the AfDB said in its African Economic Outlook, forecasting that the situation would further deteriorate.

After Oceania, Africa is the least affected continent in the pandemic, recording nearly 500,000 infections and almost 11,700 deaths, according to an AFP tally on Tuesday.

But the health crisis and ensuing lockdowns have destroyed jobs, crippled incomes and devastated economies continent-wide.

"Between 28.2 and 49.2 million more Africans could be pushed into extreme poverty" this year and next, the AfDB report said, with the first figure the baseline prediction and the latter the worst-case scenario.

The Abidjan-based institution, one of the world's five largest multilateral development lenders, expects Africa to suffer a major recession, with GDP forecast to contract between 1.7 percent to 3.4 percent this year. — APP

Bank chiefs take measures to eliminate corruption: President Uzbekistan

DNA

TASHKENT: President of the Republic of Uzbekistan Shavkat Mirziyoyev chaired a meeting on implementation of the 2020-2025 Banking System Reform Strategy and acceleration of the process of transforming commercial banks with an eye to uplifting the private sector share in banking assets from 15 to 60 percent. It was noted that a number of key issues have to be addressed in order to achieve the goals.

The need for intensifying the process of transformation of banks was noted. Currently, 6 commercial banks, namely, Ipoteka Bank, Sanoat Qurilish Bank, Turon Bank, Asaka Bank, Aloqabank and Agrobank have begun cooperation with international financial institutions in matters of financial diagnostics, development of long-term strategies and privatization. However, work on the transformation of other commercial banks has barely been progressing well enough, the Head of the state noted. To change the situation, it was entrusted to conduct a stocktaking of functions not inherent to banks, to arrange training programs at the Corporate Retraining Center under the Central Bank to explain the tasks of bank transformation, primarily for local employees of banks. These tasks are assigned to the Central Bank.

Issues of improving the quality of the loan portfolio and bank projects were discussed at the meeting. It was indicated that the share of problem loans, as shown by the results of stress tests, can grow several times, which is a serious challenge for the banking system. In this regard, instructions have been given to analyze problem loans by region and create an effective mechanism to maintain the quality of loan portfolios. It was emphasized that once the banks' loan portfolios undergo stocktaking, the Central Bank should develop specific measures to restore the financial capabilities of each customer in a difficult situation. A separate aspect during the meeting was the discussion of the need for eradicating corruption in the banking sector.

The Head of the state insisted that bank chiefs take tough measures to stamp out corruption, introduce compliance control and other effective mechanisms. The President slammed the fact that the share of public funds is still high in commercial banks with state assets. In particular, the share of such loans is 41 percent in Qishloq Qurilish Bank, and 32 percent in Ipoteka Bank. Last year, credit lines worth about $600 million were attracted under the state guarantee, this year this figure will amount to $570 million.

Meanwhile, the share of individual savings and fixed-term deposits in large banks averages only 5 percent. Taking into account this fact, the Central Bank was instructed to come up with additional proposals for attracting household deposits in banks.

The President noted the need for independent attraction of financial resources by commercial banks without state support.

Heads of the Central Bank and commercial banks provided information on the issues discussed at the meeting.

Beijing security office opens in Hong Kong

DNA

HONG KONG: A new national security office has been officially opened in Hong Kong, placing mainland Chinese agents in the heart of the territory for the first time. The office is one element of a sweeping new law which outlaws criticism of China's government. Hong Kong was, until the law was passed, the only part of China not subject to such policies. The law has caused alarm in Hong Kong but officials say it will restore stability after violent protests. Chief Executive Carrie Lam said on Tuesday that it was "actually relatively mild as far as national security laws are concerned" and would enable Hong Kongers to "exercise their rights and freedoms without being intimidated and attacked". The temporary base of the new office is a hotel in Causeway Bay, the commercial district next to Victoria Park, which had long been the focal point of pro-democracy protest marches and rallies in Hong Kong.

Harvard move to online courses 'ridiculous': Trump

WASHINGTON: US President Donald Trump lashed out at Harvard University, calling its decision to move all its courses online in the fall due to the coronavirus pandemic "ridiculous." "I think it's ridiculous. I think it's an easy way out. And I think they ought to be ashamed of themselves," Trump said at a White House roundtable discussion, during which he called for schools and universities to reopen for the next semester. Trump, who is campaigning for re-election in November, has taken a bullish approach to re-opening the country even as virus infections continue to spike, particularly the south and west. "Everybody wants it. The moms want it. The dads want it. The kids want it. It's time to do it," he said. "We want to get our schools open, we want to get them open quickly, beautifully, in the fall." His administration has said it would not allow foreign students to remain in the country if all of their classes are moved online because of the COVID-19 crisis. A number of schools are looking at a hybrid model of in-person and online instruction but some, including Harvard, have said all classes will be conducted online. - APP

Countries warn Israel over annexation

DNA

GAZA: The foreign ministers of Egypt, France, Germany and Jordan have urged Israel to abandon plans for annexing settlements in the occupied West Bank, warning such action could have "consequences" for relations. The government of Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu had set July 1 as the date when it could begin to annex Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank, as well as in the strategic Jordan Valley. Netanyahu's office made no announcement on July 1, but said talks were continuing with US officials and Israeli security chiefs. "We concur that any annexation of Palestinian territories occupied in 1967 would be a violation of international law and imperil the foundations of the peace process," the ministers said in a statement after a joint video conference on Tuesday. "We would not recognise any changes to the 1967 borders that are not agreed by both parties in the conflict. "We also concur that such a step would have serious consequences for the security and stability of the region, and would constitute a major obstacle to efforts aimed at achieving a comprehensive and just peace.

China is 'greatest threat' to US: FBI director

DNA

WASHINGTON: The director of the FBI has said that acts of espionage and theft by China's government pose the "greatest long-term threat" to the future of the US. Speaking to the Hudson Institute in Washington, Christopher Wray described a multi-pronged disruption campaign. He said China had begun targeting Chinese nationals living abroad, coercing their return, and was working to compromise US coronavirus research. "The stakes could not be higher," Mr Wray said. "China is engaged in a whole-of-state effort to become the world's only superpower by any means necessary," he added. In a nearly hour-long speech on Tuesday, the FBI director outlined a stark picture of Chinese interference, a far-reaching campaign of economic espionage, data and monetary theft and illegal political activities, using bribery and blackmail to influence US policy. "We've now reached a point where the FBI is now opening a new China-related counterintelligence case every 10 hours," Mr Wray said. "Of the nearly 5,000 active counterintelligence cases currently under way across the country, almost half are related to China." The FBI director mentioned a programme called "Fox Hunt", which he said President Xi Jinping had "spearheaded" and he said was geared at Chinese nationals living abroad seen as threats to the Chinese government. "We're talking about political rivals, dissidents, and critics seeking to expose China's extensive human rights violations," he said. "The Chinese government wants to force them to return to China, and China's tactics to accomplish that are shocking." He continued: "When it couldn't locate one Fox Hunt target, the Chinese government sent an emissary to visit the target's family here in the United States. The message they said to pass on? The target had two options: return to China promptly, or commit suicide." The programme was originally begun in 2015 to target people accused of corruption and has reportedly led to the capture of thousands of fugitives.

droelectric power is still the most important resource of renewable energy. China: nuclear talks only if US reduces arsenal

BEIJING: Beijing said Wednesday that US demands for it to join nuclear disarmament talks with Russia are a ruse to sink the negotiations, but it could take part if Washington lowers its arsenals to China's level. US and Russian officials held talks in Vienna last month to discuss a replacement for the New START treaty, which limits each side to 1,550 deployed nuclear warheads but is due to run out in February. US President Donald Trump has insisted China be included in disarmament talks. China has shown no interest in participating. Fu Cong, director general of the Department of Arms Control at China's foreign ministry, said the US pressure is "nothing but a ploy to divert world tension" and "create a pretext under which they can walk away from the New START". "Their real purpose is to get rid of all the restrictions and have a free hand in seeking military superiority over any adversary, real or imagined," Fu said at a news conference. The US and Russia hold more than 90 percent of the world's nuclear weapons, according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute. - APP

COVID-19 situation in Kazakhstan under control

DNA

NUR SULTAN: Despite some progress in certain regions of the world, global experience continues to show that the coronavirus crisis is a long way from being eliminated. New cases are soaring in many countries, perhaps most notably in the United States. The World Health Organisation (WHO) has warned that the spread of the virus has not reached its peak in countries in Central and South America. A number of countries in Europe, including Spain and Germany, had to re-introduce quarantine measures. The government of Kazakhstan has always stated that the country cannot become complacent. And, indeed, the country is currently going through a challenging period. At the same time, there has been some exaggeration of the situation in the world. For example, it was reported in the international media recently that Kazakhstan is one of the countries with the fastest growing rates of COVID-19. Unfortunately this caused some concern and misunderstanding both among the public and the media regarding the epidemiological situation in Kazakhstan. It is indeed true that the number of cases have increased in Kazakhstan. At the same time, a number of points need to be considered. Firstly, since the beginning of July asymptomatic cases of COVID-19 were added to the general statistics of morbidity, thus significantly increasing the infection growth rate. Secondly, Kazakhstan has greatly increased the number of tests carried out. Over 1.6 million people have been tested so far. Currently, the country is carrying out almost 90,000 tests per one million population (almost 14,000 tests per day), which is more than France, Germany, Canada and many other countries. Kazakhstan at the moment ranks 19th in the world in terms of population testing. Naturally, this has increased the number of confirmed cases. Due to these factors, there are just over 50,000 cases of COVID-19 currently registered in Kazakhstan, including just over 25,000 with symptoms, and over 23,000 asymptomatic. Approximately 1,400 new cases are registered per day, an increase of 3.0%. More than half have fully recovered, while over 23,000 patients continue to receive treatment. 260 people have died so far. The rate of the spread of the virus in June was 1.3. There has been a decrease over the past week to 1.05. According to the Johns Hopkins University in the U.S., Kazakhstan ranks 35th globally in terms of the COVID-19 infection rate. The mortality rate in Kazakhstan is 0.5%. In comparison, it is 4.4% and 1.5% in the United States and Russia respectively. Furthermore,

Kazakhstan ranks 54th in terms of the number of infected people per 1 million inhabitants, and 113th in terms of mortality. Ultimately, these statistics demonstrate that the broad epidemiological situation regarding the spread of the coronavirus in Kazakhstan is under control. As soon as cases began to surge in June, the Government took the necessary measures to combat the pandemic in a timely manner, including implementing a second quarantine. The results of the first lockdown from mid-March to mid-May demonstrated that quarantine measures are indeed effective. The number of confirmed cases remained low during that period. It is expected that two-week quarantine will also contribute to the stabilisation of the situation. In addition, three hospitals focusing on infectious diseases were built quickly in the cities of Nur-Sultan, Almaty and Shymkent. Clinics in other regions have been provided with the necessary equipment. The two-week quarantine will last between July 5-19. The measures restrict social and family gatherings limited to outdoor walking of three or less. The facilities including beauty and hair salons, all kind of indoor sport centers, beaches, water parks, culture and entertainment places, religious facilities, kindergartens and children health camps suspend their activities. As before, at least 80 percent of employees in public companies will continue working from home. The restrictions do not apply to construction and industrial plants with a continuous production cycle, open air agricultural and construction sites, as well as health centres, grocery stores and open air markets. Summer patios, auto service and appliance maintenance are continuing working under enhanced sanitary and disinfection measures.
