Indonesian ambassador interacts with businessmen

Invites FCCI office-bearers to visit Indonesian embassy and discuss issues related to bilateral trade; assures to take up direct flights issue with the Indonesian authorities

MUHAMMAD TAHIR

FAISALABAD: A steep decline of minus 4% in the Indonesian growth is expected due to COVID-19 and there was dire need to join hands with brotherly countries to revive the national economies immediately.

This was stressed by Iwan Suyudhie Amri, ambassador of Indonesia, while addressing a zoom conference with the office-bearers of the Faisalabad Chamber of Commerce & Industry (FCCI) here on Friday.

He said that Indonesia was closely observing the World Health Organisation (WHO) situation reports on COVID-19 pandemic around the world. He invited the FCCI office-bearers to visit Indonesian embassy and discuss issues related to bilateral trade. About starting direct flights from Jakarta to Lahore or Karachi, he said that he would take up the issue with the ministries concerned.

However, he added, such flights were not viable financially in the prevailing circumstances. Earlier addressing the zoom meeting, FCCI President Rana Sikandar Azam Khan said that Pakistan and Indonesia should transform their cordial relations into enhanced bilateral trade, investment and joint ventures. Appreciating the recent economic rise of Indonesia, he said that both the countries had many similarities in their demographics, and the bilateral trade could easily be enhanced to US$5 billion from its current level of about $2.32 billion in 2019. "Pakistani exports to Indonesia are US$146 million, compared to Indonesia exports to Pakistan of US$222 million," he said and added that thus the balance of trade was in favour of Indonesia.

He said that Pakistan and Indonesia had signed a Preferential Trade Agreement (PTA) in 2012 and as a result of that the bilateral trade improved from $1.58 billion in 2011-12 to $2.32 billion in 2019. "It is good to note that both the countries are heading towards Free Trade Agreement, which needs to be further paced up," he added.

He said Pakistan could help Indonesia expand its trade to the landlocked Central Asian Republics, China, India and Middle East. Similarly Indonesia, being member of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), could provide easy access to Pakistan for over $2 trillion ASEAN market.

He said that Pakistan had palm oil market of US$1.46 billion, out of which 70% share was coming from Indonesia. "It should be equally good that while the Pakistani government had given duty advantage to Indonesia, the Indonesian government might also reciprocate in the same way to enhance the bilateral trade," he hoped.

Experts see Covid-19 as an opportunity to adapt to virtual learning

The technological shift towards the virtual learning was started much before the occurrence of the Covid19. However, the pandemic has just accelerated this process and now it's time to embrace the change to get fully benefitted from it

FARUKH SHAHZAD

ISLAMABAD: To avail the opportunities that After-Covid19 world offers in the field of learning and development, we need to be quickly adaptive to change and pay immediate attention on improving our technological infrastructure accordingly.

The experts on learning and development from various national and international institutions said this while sharing their views with the participants at online dialogue 'Learning and Development in a Virtual World beyond COVID19' organized by the Sustainable Development Policy Institute (SDPI) here on Friday. Regional Head Europe, Institute of International Education (IIE), USA, Dr Cheryl Francisconi, while terming the pandemic time as an incredible opportunity for the learning in the virtual space said that the learning and training now need to be aligned with this newly created space.

"We need to adapt to new reality with the best use of technology," Dr Francisconi said. She added further that a culture of learning from each other needs to be created. Besides, making virtual learning more participatory and interactive and redressing the connectivity issues would be some of the important steps towards this adaptation, she added.

Mr Qaiser A. Raja, from Skills Enhancement Academy, UK, was of view that adaptation to virtual learning would be more challenging to trainers rather than the trainees that always show a better ability to get transformed with the new change.

He said that the technological shift towards the virtual learning was started much before the occurrence of the Covid19.

However, the pandemic has just accelerated this process and now it's time to embrace the change to get fully benefitted from it. "Pakistan needs to pay immediate attention to remove the connectivity barrier for the communities."

Mr Faisal Shafiq, Social, Technology, Business Program and Project Expert, Canada, opined and added further that Pakistan has huge potential to make inroads in virtual learning. However, besides improving infrastructure, the need assessment of the participants would play critical role in the success of virtual learning.

Brig. (R) Mohammad Yasin; Senior Advisor Capacity Building, SDPI, Pakistan, on the occasion shared the overall learning and development context with the participants and said certain steps are now required to make virtual learning really meaningful including finding ways to make such learning more interactive.

He added further that we must prepare ourselves for the technological transformation as the pandemic has become part of the life now. Earlier, Mr Shahid Minhas, Head CLD, SDPI, presented an overall context of the issue and said that the pandemic has posed challenges to every walk of life globally and same is true when we talk about learning and development.

He said that the real question today is how much we are ready to adapt to a complete paradigm shift, especially in the context of virtual learning.

The efforts of the government would change the destiny of people of Pakistan, he assured. — APP

FPCCI opposes withdrawal of power subsidy

The Ministry of Petroleum, through a letter, had already directed the gas companies to reduce UFG losses from 6.3% to 4%, cut profit from 20% to 15%, besides reducing transmission and distribution losses but the directives were not followed, he argued

DNA

KARACHI: The Federation of Pakistan Chambers of Commerce and Industry president Mian Anjum Nisar has opposed the government's move of power subsidies' withdrawal just for the revival of the stalled IMF programme, demanding rather substantial reduction in energy rates in line with the drastic fall in international oil prices. FPCCI President said that the change in subsidies regime, amid increasing financial miseries on account of COVID-19, would hit at least 18 million consumers out of a total 27 million electricity connection holders across the country, as the cost of doing business has already increased manifold, leading to slowdown in economy and unemployment in the country. He called for taking decisions after consultation with the stakeholders in this regard, instead of depending solely on the available fiscal space. Resisting the hike of almost 110% in gas prices, he endorsed the decision of OGRA for rejecting the demand of gas utilities to increase gas prices rather reducing the rates by almost 6% for consumers, which is a good step. He said that the gas companies had recently sought the huge surge in gas tariff by up to Rs622 per mmbtu, putting an additional burden of Rs290 billion on industrial as well as domestic consumers, leading to further jump in cost of production. He said that instead of covering losses and enhancing the efficiencies, the gas utilities of Sui Southern Gas Company and Sui Northern Gas Pipelines Limited were planning to shift their burden to the consumers. The Ministry of Petroleum, through a letter, had already directed the gas companies to reduce UFG losses from 6.3% to 4%, cut profit from 20% to 15%, besides reducing transmission and distribution losses but the directives were not followed, he argued. Mian Anjum Nisar said that exporters and manufacturers are already greatly burdened and crushed due to rising tariffs of electricity, gas, water and other essential sources of power, leading to high costs of doing business in Pakistan as compared to our competing countries. He said that change in subsidies regime would significantly increase burden of Punjab based consumers due to increased theft and losses in other three provinces. According to reports, the government has already cut the power subsidies by 36% in the budget as against last fiscal year's allocation of Rs226 billion because the government has allocated only Rs150 billion for power subsidies this year. The electricity subsidies allocations in the budget are 60% less than the demand made on the basis of current concessional regime of agriculture tube-wells and exporters. FPCCI president called upon the government to take concrete measures and formulate effective policies to reduce the cost of doing business so as to jack up the country's exports. The government should merge all taxes, duties and contribution etc and introduce one-window operation for one-time payment of all dues he suggested. He said that the gas prices were required to be reduced further to pass on the benefit of lower international oil rates to consumers since the producer prices of gas were directly linked to global oil prices. He said that the energy prices were retreating across the world but the gas prices were not being reduced in Pakistan. He said the value-added industry is contributing to its role in national exports in addition to providing jobs to millions of workers. But, increased cost of doing business was hurting industry which must be curtailed to get maximum share for Pakistan economy.

justice to the taxpayers. He assured his support to the institution in the discharge of its duties and functions. Federal Tax Ombudsman Mushtaq Ahmad Sukhera presented report on performance of FTO office during

Flying fiasco

THE massive issue of licences obtained by Pakistan pilots, has taken a new twist. Weeks after Aviation Minister Ghulam Sarwar Khan told parliament that 40 percent of the licences held by Pakistani pilots were fake (later changed to 'dubious') and had been wrongfully acquired, the director general of the CAA has written to senior officials in Oman's aviation department stating that all licences were in fact genuine. This puts matters in a further state of uncertainty. After all, who are we expected to believe? The damage done by the aviation minister's remarks has already been considerable with the European Union air safety body banning PIA's planes from landing at airports within the EU. IATA has also expressed concerns over the safety of Pakistani licences as has the US which has banned Pakistani charter planes and said it is displeased with the safety records of pilots. The DG of the CAA has now said in the letter obtained by the media that 94 out of 104 licences have already been checked and found to be valid and authentic. He has also said the CAA has confirmed this to the aviation authorities in several countries, especially those whose airlines employed Pakistani pilots. It is difficult to understand what went wrong and why the aviation minister chose to make a dramatic announcement in parliament without first verifying the facts. All that this has caused is massive disarray and a global loss of trust in the safety and reliability of PIA. The action taken by the EU and also several UK airports will undoubtedly damage the revenue of PIA, which is already struggling to remain afloat, and could bring it to its final downfall. There has been some conjecture over social media that the real purpose is to privatize PIA.

PALPA, the union of Pakistani pilots, has also said that the letter from the CAA confirms its own position that all commercial and transport licences belonging to pilots are in fact in good order and that these persons have cleared the required examination. While some questions still need to be answered, the most significant is why Ghulam Sarwar made his statement without prior discussions within the cabinet or with the CAA. The problem is that no matter how many letters are now written, the shadow over PIA will continue to hang. The airline can regain at least some of its former prestige only if this shadow is lifted and the aviation minister is able to explain on what he based the information threatening the jobs of scores of pilots that he gave out in public.

Demographic change

ACCORDING to a study published in the journal 'The Lancet', the world may look like a considerably changed place by the year 2100. The study has utilized data from the Global Burden of Disease Study 2017 and applied it to 183 countries to predict future trends based on mortality, fertility and migration. First off, it notes that the current pandemic will have no significant impact on the global population's size. The scientists expect that Pakistan's already massive population may reach about 314 million in 2062 and then decline to 248 million by 2100. This is based on what we already know about patterns of disease, population growth and death rates. The study says that the largest country in the world by 2100 will be India with 1.09 billion people, followed by Nigeria with 791 million and China with 732 million. The US and then Pakistan will follow with considerably smaller population sizes.

What this change will mean for the world in terms of politics, economics and the ongoing global struggle for power is difficult to predict. India's vastly expanded population may not however give it any increase in influence over the world given that it is expected to have the lowest life expectancy among the top 10 large countries. This indicates that the poor socio-economic statistics for South Asia will not change. Scientists also believe that India and China may see a huge decline in working age populations which would hamper their economic growth. This factor could lead to a shift in global power with nations possessing bigger populations who are working gaining the edge. The increased age of population had generally meant for the world a growth in healthcare costs and other dynamics which have an impact on the development and growth of that particular country. The study predicts that by the end of the century India, Nigeria, China and the US could emerge as dominant powers. This is of interest given that while India and China are predicted to emerge as global economic powerhouses, the same is currently not true of Nigeria which struggles with internal unrest and also poor development. At the moment, the Covid-19 pandemic may have affected local healthcare systems throughout the world. However, scientists who have analyzed the data believe this impact will not last and other factors will come into play – leading to a change in the manner in which countries are ranked on the basis of their power and influence in a changing world. Right now it may be difficult to say how accurate the projections will be. But they are certainly of interest as we try to understand the future of our globe, the demographics which affect it and what it will look like as a global community in the coming years.

Under the auspices of justice

Dr. Obid Khakimov

Most immediately after independence in Uzbekistan, a system of strong social policy was formulated amid the transition to a market economy, providing for effective measures in the field of social protection. The state provides free secondary education, guarantees a basic package of medical services, and social support for particularly vulnerable groups of the population and provides benefits for low-income families. With a new President of Uzbekistan, the social direction in the ongoing reforms has significantly been enhanced.

THE political history of mankind was the endeavor for building a just society. Yet everyone understands justice in their own way, which concerns not only the individual level, but also the level of various social groups connected by common economic and political interests. For this reason, the approaches to the definition of justice and its basic principles are different. The following basic concepts are distinguished.

The first and the oldest is power. «Justice is the advantage of the stronger», the ancient Greek sophist Frasinach formulated. The second is the contractual concept of justice, in which the principles of justice are determined by real or hypothetical agreement between people, has been formed for a long time from Aristotle to Kant and has become dominant in modern conditions. However, in the framework of this model, disputes continue on the basis of principles that are necessary to agree on justice.

George Moore proposed an intuitive model where justice is established in an intuitive way or in an intuitive agreement between all actors in the society. However, since the "intuition" of people is different, it is hardly possible to build a coherent and logically sound system of rules on this model. In connection with the foregoing, it seems important to analyze the social policy of Uzbekistan in the context of the main approaches to determining the justice of the social system.

Social policy in Uzbekistan
Almost immediately after independence in Uzbekistan, a system of strong social policy was formulated amid the transition to a market economy, providing for effective measures in the field of social protection. The state provides free secondary education, guarantees a basic package of medical services, and social support for particularly vulnerable groups of the population and provides benefits for low-income families.

With a new President of Uzbekistan, the social direction in the ongoing reforms has significantly been enhanced. In the Strategy of Action on five priority areas for the development of the Republic of Uzbekistan in 2017-2021, approved on February 7, 2017, the development of the social sphere is one of the key priorities. In this direction, the Strategy provides: a consistent increase in real incomes and employment; improving the system of social protection and health protection; implementation of targeted programs for the construction of affordable housing, the development of social infrastructure, providing improved living conditions; development of education and science; improvement of state youth policy. Large-scale tasks for the development of the social sphere this year were set in the Message of the President to the Parliament on January 14 of this year. "We will accelerate the continuation of large-scale social reforms to radically improve the lives of people, which over the past three years have been carried out on the basis of the principle "Human interests are above all", the President noted in the Message.

Among the tasks set were the development of the State Poverty Reduction Program, the formation of modern entrepreneurial skills among the population, on which it was supposed to spend $700 million. As part of current year's state program, aim of the government was to create 500 thousand new job places. It was planned to create an effective system of work with elderly, especially with those who are alone, increasing the amount of social benefits allocated to them, and development of social adaption program for children from orphanages providing them with jobs and later with apartments. It was envisaged to increase wages, pensions, scholarships and allowances ahead of inflation and to expand the coverage of benefits to low-income families.

Social measures during pandemic
However, the solution of the tasks was significantly complicated by force majeure- the COVID-19 pandemic and the quarantine restrictions associated with it. Production volumes decreased in 196 thousand enterprises, about 95 thousand individual entrepreneurs suspended their activities. 13 thousand food enterprises, 45 thousand trade enterprises, 19 thousand service enterprises, 7 thousand transport enterprises were especially hard hit. As a result, the number of unemployed has grown significantly. The number of calls to employment centers increased to 150 thousand, which is three times more in comparison with January and February months of the current year. So now much more people require government social support because of the coronavirus pandemic. And this support was immediately provided, for which almost immediately the anti-crisis fund was created amounting 10 trillion sums.

In Uzbekistan, there is an existence of informal sector in the economy and labor migration. Part of population engaged in these sectors also found themselves in a very tough situation due to the COVID-19. However, it is very difficult for the government to provide direct support to them due to the lack of transparency in their income. Nevertheless, in the direction of supporting this group of individuals, which are essentially self-employed, the state is making significant efforts. Self-employed were allowed all types of entrepreneurial activities not prohibited by law, and a mechanism for their registration notification was introduced. Representatives of more than 60 self-employed professions are exempted from income tax. In addition, another option was investigated to support those whom it is difficult to provide direct assistance. The state began to stimulate businesses to provide appropriate support to citizens, compensating for its costs in this direction through various benefits and preferences for taxes, leasing, loans, and access to necessary recourses that is by reducing budget revenues.

The social responsibility of the state also manifested itself in relation to citizens of Uzbekistan who work and find themselves abroad during quarantine. At the expense of the government, 39 thousand compatriots have already been returned to Uzbekistan. Measures are being taken to return another 12 000 who find themselves in a difficult situation abroad. Extreme circumstances are usually a kind of test for the strength of both people and government. In this regard, the pandemic clearly confirmed Uzbekistan's commitment to a strong social policy. Social support amid a reduction in state budget revenues due to the pandemic not only did not weaken, but, on the contrary, was significantly strengthened, and in relation to those categories of the population that were most affected by the pandemic.

On the principles of justice
It is noteworthy that since the beginning of independence, Uzbekistan has been pursuing a strong social policy, regardless of the ideological and political changes in the world over the past thirty years, and despite the pandemic. Strong social policy means that state institutions carry out a certain redistribution of the social product in favor of the least protected and most vulnerable members of society. That is, our government fully meets the criteria of justice, built on a fair attitude of people in relation to other individuals.

At the same time, in Uzbekistan over all these years, unlike in many other countries, the need for a strong social policy has not been questioned. The utilitarian concept of justice, popular in the modern world, has never taken much public attention in our country. That is, it can be stated that Uzbekistan initially chose a model of state policy corresponding to the concept of fair justice. Why did it happen?

In Uzbekistan for thousands of years over which a traditional worldview has been formed that people should help each other, and the poor and weak, who are in difficult situations should receive support from those who can provide it, from neighbors, from society, from relatives. These principles of public morality have widely influenced the structure of social justice, which is based on the protection of the most vulnerable members of society.

Based on this, it can be concluded that in Uzbekistan the formation of social policy has been determined precisely by the worldview features of the nation, their ideas about justice. And that is why social priorities are especially popular. The social policy pursued by Uzbekistan combines intuitive perceptions of the people about justice with Rawls ideas about the social justice of government institutions. This can be interpreted as the fact that a consensus reached in Uzbekistan between the government and society regarding this issue, that is, a real agreement regarding the principles of justice in the public consciousness of Uzbekistan, which Rawls insist on. And it is precisely the fact that state policy that is built on the basis of people's beliefs is the key to its success and effectiveness.

A Heart-wrenching Image of Innocent Kashmiris

ZakirUllah

Despite killing civilians, the Indian forces accused the Kashmiri people, whether they're civilians or freedom fighters, for state terrorism. In a recent tragic incident, they have blamed Kashmiri fighters for instigating people to assault Indian forces; but, these allegations are explicitly despicable and baseless. The image of a 3-year child along with slain grandfather exposed a fascist and real face of the Indian government, the wide-spread human rights violations and deliberate killings of Kashmiris acknowledged the viciousness of RSS Ideology backed by Indian central govt

AFTER repealing Article 350 in Indian Occupied Kashmir (IOK), a free hand had been given to Indian armed forces to arrest, torture, persecute and kill any civilian. The Indian atrocities are increasing day-by-day, and Kashmir has been witnessing the brutalities, restrictions, curfews, and killing of innocent civilians in front of their families. To subdue the Kashmiri voices, the Indian central government introduced several draconian laws, including; Public Safety Act, Armed Forces Special Power Act, Official Secrets Act, and the National Security Act, etc.

Most recently, the world has seen a toddler sitting on the chest of his dead grandfather's body and was inconsolably crying for help; this tragic event caused outrage in residents living in Indian-held Kashmir. The heart-wrenching pictures of a small child sitting on his slain grandfather's chest in the Indian Occupied Kashmir have sparked a new debate about rampant Indian violence. It's not the first time of such a dreadful incident; the Kashmiri people are resisting against Indian oppression for the last seven decades, and their resistance would be continued till their independence from Indian occupation.

This week, thousands of people in IOK have orchestrated a massive protest, denouncing the Indian forces for brutally killing a 65-year old innocent person named Bashir Ahmad, in front of his little grandson without any specific reason. Besides, the security forces stated that Kashmiri fighters had opened fire on them, which led to a gun-fire battle resultantly killing civilians.

According to the deceased person's family members, Bashir was dragged and stretched out from his car by Indian forces and killed him brutally during the relentless onslaught. The Indian forces always tried to overcome their aggression by killing and hurting Kashmiris in IOK. This incident reminds us of the continuous exercise of Indian's cruel and ruthless violence, but who cares about these innocent Kashmiris? The picture of this child and his helplessness, suppression, and blood of innocent civilians demonstrate a lot about the pseudo champions of International human rights.

Despite killing civilians, the Indian forces accused the Kashmiri people, whether they're civilians or freedom fighters, for state terrorism. In a recent tragic incident, they have blamed Kashmiri fighters for instigating people to assault Indian forces; but, these allegations are explicitly despicable and baseless. The image of a 3-year child along with slain grandfather exposed a fascist and real face of the Indian government, the wide-spread human rights violations and deliberate killings of Kashmiris acknowledged the viciousness of RSS Ideology backed by Indian central government.

Another young boy was killed in the Kulgam area by Indian forces last week mercilessly, and unfortunately, he was portrayed as a terrorist to hide the Indian atrocities. On the one side, the Kashmiri people accelerated their vigorous efforts for independence movement since the imposition of Covid-19 lockdown; contrarily, the central Indian forces have also intensified their so-called counterinsurgency operations against innocent civilians.

According to the Coalition of Civil Society, during this lockdown period, the Indian army conducted more than a hundred military operations in Indian-held Kashmir, killing at least 250 Kashmiri innocent people. The world doesn't have words to explain the grievances and subjugation of the Kashmiri people.

More specifically, after Indian unilaterally attempt to illegally annexed and seize the identity of Kashmiri people, the Indian forces have unleashed and launched a new wave of atrocities upon innocent civilians. On the so-called militancy pretext, hundreds of young civilians had been tortured and killed to disparage the legitimate right of self-determination of Kashmiris but, it should be cleared that their blood wouldn't go in vain. For the last seventy-two years, the Kashmiris have been consistently opposing illegal Indian occupation, and now, this resistance had been altered into several new strategies.

The young Kashmiris have been becoming a new face of independence movement; they're getting assistance from social media to expose the savaged and ferocious face of Indian forces that threatened and caused fear for the Indian government. Consequently, the Indian administration imposed severe restrictions in the already tormented and oppressed area to suppress the voices of Kashmiris. The Kashmir valley is like a powder keg in the whole South Asian region; almost three wars had been fought between two nuclear power states.

The Indian oppression over Kashmiris people is worsening day-by-day, and recently, obliterating the identity of Kashmiri people by repealing the Article 350 and 35A further damaged the freedom struggle of these suppressed people. The extensive magnitude of Indian brutalities, unilateral withdrawal of special status, the subjugation of Kashmir Identity, violent suppression, human rights abuses, massacre and persecution of innocent civilians, and curbing-off the demonstrations have a detrimental impact on regional peace and stability.

The Indian government's unconstitutional attempt to snatch the identity of Kashmir is a deliberate provocation of waging another war in the region, which would ultimately destabilize the regional peace. The International community should reconsider the nitty-gritty of escalating situations; otherwise, it would become too late. Besides these atrocities in IOK, the abrogation of special status also sabotage the Ladakh territorial status, and it could provoke China to take legal action against India, as they previously did.

Additionally, the perpetual threat of armed conflict between three regional nuclear powers is also vivid, and India must think below the nuclear latency before taking any dismissive step.

Indian forces couldn't overwhelmingly subjugate and oppressed the freedom struggle, and they have witnessed Kashmir's intensive resistance for the last seventy years. Kashmiri shall not dislodge their resilient struggle against coercive strategies imposed by Indian forces and will keep resisting and countering utopian Indian hegemony.

Substantially, the Kashmiri people sacrificed thousands for lives on the name of freedom, and it would be continued till their last breath. Considering the viciousness and restricted policies of Indian government vis-vis resilient resistance of Kashmiri civilians, the International community must utilize available resources against the extremist regime of India for peaceful resolutions of Kashmir dispute.

Albeit, the combined vigorous efforts of the International community would save humanity from this on-going pandemic. Still, it's uncertain whether the International community would discern its sheer responsibility to protect the suppressed people of Kashmir for a permanent epidemic of Indian aggression.

Let the world must know that the blood and killing of innocent Kashmiri people wouldn't be futile and worthless; they shall keep opposing and resisting the Indian fanatical, fascist ideology, and silence of the International community till their last breath.

72 NFL players positive for coronavirus

LOS ANGELES: Seventy-two NFL players have tested positive for COVID-19, the league's players union confirmed. In the first major announcement of coronavirus results concerning the NFL, the NFL Players Association said dozens of players had tested positive as of July 10. The tally was revealed in a database described as a "one-stop shop of information" for players.

It was unclear, however, how many of the league's roughly 2,900 rostered players had been tested or how often. The test results come as the NFL and NFLPA are locked in negotiations over the terms and conditions of pre-season training and exhibition games. Players have requested more time to address fitness concerns and want no pre-season games in August.

NFLPA president J.C. Tretter, a center for the Cleveland Browns, accused the NFL last week of failing to prioritize player safety in the face of the pandemic. The league rejected a 48-day training camp recommendation from a joint NFL-NFLPA committee in favor of a 23-day session before the first of two pre-season games, down from four in prior years. However Tretter said league chiefs were risking the entire season if they failed to fully address concerns over the virus. — APP

Father wanted me to play for Pakistan: Usman Qadir

ISLAMABAD: Pakistani spinner Usman Qadir, has expressed disappointment for being dropped from the national squad, saying his father late legendary spin-wizard Abdul Qadir wanted him to play for Pakistan.

Usman opened up on being dropped from the Pakistan squad without featuring in a single match. The 26-year-old was part of the Men in Green squad during Australia tour, last year, and the T20I series against Bangladesh earlier in 2020. "I was disappointed and hurt after being dropped from the side without playing a single match. I have achieved my goals in U19 cricket and Big Bash League and will continue to put in the hard yards, in order to ensure that I can go on to play for Pakistan," website quoted him as saying. Usman, who left Pakistan in order to pursue his ambitions in Australia during 2018, also spoke about the lack of chances in domestic cricket. "I had moved to Australia, because of lack of chances in domestic cricket, but my father wanted me to play for Pakistan which is why I came back," he said. "The same thing has started happening again (lack of chances) but it will create a controversy if I speak more on this," he said. — APP

Spain's medics demand job security

MADRID: Spain hailed its medic heroes during the coronavirus crisis, but as infections fall many front-line staff have been left depressed and traumatised by their experience, fearful of an insecure future.

With 36.3 percent of public healthcare workers without a permanent contract, according to one survey, demonstrations calling for change are growing.

"We have to end this low-budget health system," says Patricia Calvo, a 40-year-old doctor, who made her own protective gear out of bin bags at the height of the pandemic.

"I finished specialising in 2010 but I'm still on a temporary contract," says the doctor from the southern city of Granada where she works with 14 other medics, most of whom are in the same situation.

"There was a major outbreak at our medical centre, people died and (at the start) we had to deal with everything on our own." When the virus hit, costing more than 28,400 lives, Calvo and her husband, who is also a doctor, spent months without hugging their children for fear of infecting them. — APP

Boris Johnson hopes for return to normality by Christmas

"It is my strong and sincere hope that we will be able to review the outstanding restrictions and allow a more significant return to normality from November, at the earliest, possibly in time for Christmas"

LONDON: Britain could return to normality from the coronavirus outbreak by Christmas, Prime Minister Boris Johnson said on Friday, despite fears of a second wave of cases over winter. Johnson sketched out a timetable for easing the remaining lockdown measures in England, including lifting homeworking guidance and reopening sports stadiums and live theatre. "It is my strong and sincere hope that we will be able to review the outstanding restrictions and allow a more significant return to normality from November, at the earliest, possibly in time for Christmas," he said. Current government guidance is for employees to work from home where they can.

But under the latest proposals, Johnson said employers can have "more discretion" and discuss with workers whether it is safe to return to the office from August 1. Asked if that was at odds with his own government's advice, Johnson also said people could still continue to work from home.

From the same date, most remaining leisure venues, including skating rinks and casinos could also reopen, subject to social distancing regulations. Wedding receptions with up to 30 guests would also be allowed. Johnson also said the state-run National Health Service

(NHS) would receive an extra £3 billion ($3.8 billion, 3.3 million euros) to prepare for a possible winter spike in cases.

"Even as we plan for the worst, I strongly believe we should also hope for the best," he added. Fears of a second wave of infections were raised this week when scientists said nearly 120,000 people could die in hospitals alone from September to June next year.

The warning was put forward as a "reasonable worst-case scenario" if no counter-measures were put in place. Johnson acknowledged the risks of reopening, particularly for winter when the NHS is often under greater strain because of seasonal flu outbreaks.

But he said councils across England would be given new powers to impose local restrictions quickly in the case of outbreaks, instead of a renewed nationwide lockdown. Leicester, a city in central England, has been under local lockdown for the last two weeks because of a spike in cases. Johnson gave sports fans something to cheer about by announcing the intention to allow crowds to return to stadiums, subject to successful test events, from October.

Mass gatherings have been banned since March, and the showpiece English Premier League has been played behind closed doors, without fans, since it resumed.

Among the pilot events will be the World Snooker Championship, the Glorious Goodwood horseracing festival and two county cricket friendly matches later this month. Britain has seen more than 45,000 deaths in the outbreak - the worst in Europe - leading to criticism about the government approach to tackle the crisis.

On Friday, the health ministry ordered an urgent review into how death tolls are counted, after a study claimed an overestimation because figures included people who died long after recovering from the virus. — APP

Manchester United aiming for top 4 finish

DNA

MANCHESTER: Manchester United have "earned the right" to challenge for a top-four finish in the Premier League after a "fantastic" spell of post-lockdown form, says boss Ole Gunnar Solskjaer. United maintained their relentless pursuit of a place in the Champions League with a hard-fought win against Crystal Palace at Selhurst Park. Solskjaer's side were under pressure after Leicester City's earlier victory over Sheffield United and responded with a victory that keeps them in fifth place, level on points with the Foxes but with an inferior goal difference.

It extended United's unbeaten run to 19 games in all competitions, and Solskjaer believes United, who are still in the FA Cup and Europa League, have set themselves up for a thrilling end to the season.

"No-one thought in January that we would be in with a shout for top four," he said. "We have done fantastic since the restart. These are the games that matter. That is the thing at Manchester United, you have to step up and show your personality."

United were made to work for their victory, Marcus Rashford breaking the deadlock with a stylish finish in first-half stoppage time before playing his part in a sweet move involving Bruno Fernandes that was rounded off by Anthony Martial in the 78th minute.

Palace felt a real sense of injustice, furious that they were denied a penalty just before United took the lead when Wilfried Zaha tangled with Victor Lindelof, and then seeing a potential 55th-minute equaliser from Jordan Ayew ruled out by VAR for a very marginal offside.

It meant Roy Hodgson's side slumped to their sixth consecutive league loss and their night was made worse when defender Patrick van Aanholt suffered a dislocated shoulder after trying to prevent Martial scoring United's second.

NZ want SA, Argentina out of Super Rugby

WELLINGTON: New Zealand Rugby on Friday outlined plans for a Super Rugby competition next year that drops South African teams and Argentina's Jaguares, in what could herald a major shake-up. NZR said the planned revamp to the flagship southern hemisphere competition would contain New Zealand's five existing teams, one from the Pacific and two to four from Australia.

"We want teams that are competitive and that fans will want to watch go head-to-head, week-in, week-out," chief executive Mark Robinson said. — APP

Round-the-world Race postponed

PARIS: The Ocean Race, a crewed round-the-world sailing race, scheduled to take place in the autumn of 2021, has been postponed to October 2022, the organisers announced on Thursday. The postponement of the race, formerly known as the Volvo Ocean Race, was a result of the coronavirus pandemic, organisers said. It is now due to start from Alicante in Spain in October 2022, circumnavigate the globe in nine stages over nine months and finish in Genoa in the summer of 2023.

"We now find ourselves in unprecedented times and our first priority is with all those who have been and continue to be affected by the pandemic," said Richard Brisius, the Race Chairman of The Ocean Race on the competition website. This decision was welcomed by the skippers of the Imoca class, the flagship boats in another quadrennial race, the Vendee Globe, a single-handed non-stop round-the-world race, which will start on November 8, and who can now take part in The Ocean Race.

"These changes are positive, as they mean that The Ocean Race becomes a real possibility as a new challenge between now and the next Vendee Globe," said German skipper Boris Herrmann who is competing in the Vendee in Team Malizia. "It's a completely different kind of event, more international, crewed, but extremely interesting for me as a sailor."

The last edition, in 2017-18, was won by Team Dongfeng (China), led by French skipper Charles Caudrelier, after 126 days of racing. — APP

US Open: Kvitova says some players will not go

NEW YORK: Two-time Wimbledon champion Petra Kvitová says some players will not go to the US Open if current coronavirus restrictions continue.

The US Open is due to be played without fans in New York from 31 August. The country is still reporting tens of thousands of new coronavirus cases daily and possible quarantine rules for players are unclear.

"I know a few players will definitely not go if the restrictions are like they are now," Kvitová told BBC 5 Live. The 30-year-old Czech added: "I'm still thinking of what everything will look like, what the restrictions will be, how many people we can take and if they quarantine us." World number one Novak Djokovic has previously said he is "not sure" whether he will play, while defending men's champion Rafael Nadal has also expressed reservations.

The US has reported more than 3.4 million cases of coronavirus, and more than 136,000 deaths nationwide, according to Johns Hopkins University.

Kvitová - who is ranked 12th in the world - is one of several top players competing in front of fans at the Bett1 Aces exhibition tournament in Berlin. It is the first sporting event in Germany to take place with spectators, who have to socially distance in the stands. — DNA

US reports record 77,000 cases

DNA

WASHINGTON: The United States on Thursday broke the daily record for the highest confirmed COVID-19 cases as a staggering 77,000 reported they had contracted the virus, as per a Reuters tally. The hardest-hit areas in Texas and Arizona are running out of places to store bodies as their morgues fill up and are bringing in coolers and refrigerated trailers. US deaths peaked in April, when the country lost on average 2,000 people a day. Fatalities have steadily fallen, averaging 1,300 a day in May and under 800 a day in June before rising again in July, according to a Reuters tally. Americans have become increasingly divided on issues such as the reopening of schools and businesses and wearing face masks in public, hindering the fight against the virus. The current tally of 77,217 cases surpasses the previous record set on Friday when cases rose by 69,070. In June, cases rose by an average of 28,000 a day, according to a Reuters tally. In July, they have risen by an average of 57,625 a day.

Canada: man shot over mask incident

MONTREAL: A 73-year-old man was killed by police in Canada just hours after refusing to wear a face mask in a grocery store, the country's public broadcaster the CBC reported Thursday. The man allegedly assaulted a grocery store employee Wednesday after he was asked to follow laws about wearing face coverings to slow the spread of the coronavirus, the CBC said, citing Ontario police. The man refused, according to an employee at the store in Minden, about 120 miles (200 kilometers) north of Toronto, and fled after the incident. Police were called but did not stop the suspect's car "in the interest of public safety," they said. Instead, they used his license plate to find his house. — APP

Williams set to play inaugural Kentucky tournament

LOS ANGELES: Serena Williams will make her return to the WTA tour at a new hardcourt tournament in Kentucky in August, organizers said Friday.

The Top Seed Open said 23-time Grand Slam champion Williams and 2017 US Open winner Sloane Stephens will be in the field when play begins on August 10.

Williams hasn't played since representing the United States in the Fed Cup in February, before the WTA tour along with most of global sport shut down amid the coronavirus pandemic.

Both the WTA tour and the men's ATP tour are scheduled to resume in August. Williams has already said she plans to enter the next scheduled Grand Slam tournament, the US Open, which is slated to begin in New York on August 31.

The Kentucky tournament was one of two new events confirmed by WTA chief executive Steve Simon last week as additions to the tour's revamped calendar. WTA action is scheduled to resume with the Palermo Open in Italy starting on August 3. — APP

Real Madrid crowned La Liga champions

DNA

MADRID: Zinedine Zidane says sealing a first La Liga title with Real Madrid in three years has made him happier than winning the Champions League.

Real wrapped up the title with a game to spare as they edged past Villarreal at an empty Alfredo Di Stefano Stadium. Karim Benzema fired between the legs of Sergio Asenjo and added a controversial second from a retaken penalty.

In bizarre fashion, Sergio Ramos had rolled the first attempt for Benzema to smash in but the effort was disallowed. Vicente Iborra pulled one back but it mattered little to Real as the club wrapped up their 34th Spanish title. Zidane's side have won all 10 of their matches since Spanish football restarted in June. They head into the final day of the season with an unassailable seven-point lead over second-placed Barcelona.

"This is better than anything. It takes a tremendous effort to win La Liga," said the Real Madrid boss. "After 38 matches, you have more points than anyone else. After lockdown and everything, it's astonishing."

President lifts lifetime ban on weightlifters imposed by PWF

ISLAMABAD: President Dr Arif Alvi Friday lifted the lifetime ban on 12 weightlifters imposed by the Pakistan Weightlifting Federation (PWL) in 2016 on charges of forming a parallel federation.

The president took the decision while disposing of representation filed by weightlifters Hafiz Zafar Iqbal, Khizar Hayat and Shuja-ud-Din Malik against the Wafaqi Mohtasib's finding in December 2019.

The PWLF had imposed lifetime ban on Hafiz Zafar Iqbal, Khizar Hayat, and Shuja-ud-Din and nine others in January 2016 for forming a parallel federation.

The aggrieved weightlifters approached the Wafaqi Mohtasib against the Federation's decision which closed the case on December 11, 2019, in terms of Regulation 23 (1) (1) of the Wafaqi Mohtasib (Investigation and Disposal of Complaints) Regulations, 2013 in view of the fact that the matter had taken place way back in 2015-16.

The weightlifters filed representation with the President of Pakistan on December 30, 2019, against the decision of Wafaqi Mohtasib. The president modified the impugned closure findings of the Wafaqi Mohtasib and disposed of the representation of complainants by lifting the ban imposed by Pakistan Weightlifting Federation. — APP

UAE Mars probe launch rescheduled for July 20

TOKYO: A Japanese rocket carrying the first Arab mission to Mars will blast into space on Monday, after being delayed by bad weather, the launch company said Friday. The lift-off of the United Arab Emirates' "Hope" probe, originally planned for Wednesday, is now set for 6:58am Monday (21:58 GMT Sunday) from Tanegashima Space Centre in southern Japan, Mitsubishi Heavy Industries said. The UAE, made up of seven emirates, is set to be the first Arab nation to send a probe to Mars. The probe is one of three racing to the Red Planet, with Chinese and US rockets also taking advantage of the Earth and Mars being unusually close: a mere hop of 55 million kilometres (34 million miles). "Hope" - "Al-Amal" in Arabic - is expected to start orbiting Mars by February 2021, marking the 50th anniversary of the unification of the UAE. Once there, it will loop the planet for a whole Martian year of 687 Earth days. The goal is to provide a comprehensive image of weather dynamics in the Red Planet's atmosphere. - APP

'UK virus death toll overestimated'

LONDON: Britain has suffered the deadliest outbreak of coronavirus in Europe but a new study suggests the health authorities are overestimating the toll by including people who died long after they recovered. More than 45,000 deaths have been recorded in patients who tested positive for coronavirus, a grim figure that has sparked accusations that Prime Minister Boris Johnson's government bungled its response. But an article for the Centre for Evidence-Based Medicine published Thursday reveals a statistical anomaly in the way data is gathered by the public health agency in England. They say that in compiling its daily coronavirus toll, Public Health England (PHE) simply checks its list of lab-confirmed cases to see whether they are still alive. "A patient who has tested positive, but successfully treated and discharged from hospital, will still be counted as a COVID death even if they had a heart attack or were run over by a bus three months later," they write. They suggest this could explain variations in the English daily toll, and why deaths there have not fallen in the same way they have in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, which collect their own data. - APP

Yemeni govt rejects UN peace plan

"The problem is that the UN Yemen envoy is sometimes not a mediator. He supports the demand of the Houthis," the third official said

DNA

AL-MUKALLA: The internationally recognized government of Yemen claims that the latest draft of a peace plan submitted by the UN Special Envoy for Yemen Martin Griffiths is biased toward the Iran-backed Houthis and "undermines" the government's legitimacy, three government officials told Arab News on Thursday. "The proposal suggests accepting the current situation and the changes on the ground including Houthis as an armed group," one Cabinet minister, speaking on condition of anonymity, told Arab News. The minister said the main "bone of contention" is "three references that the UN envoy wants to convince everyone are irrelevant" - namely the GCC Initiative, the outcomes of the National Dialogue Conference, and Security Council Resolution 2216. Another government official said the latest draft of the peace plan includes a nationwide truce and demands that the government pays public servants. The official said that the government believes those items contradict the "three references" that oblige the Houthis to hand over their weapons, leave Sana'a and other areas under their control, and allow the government to return to the capital. "The plan gives legitimacy to the coup that Houthis plotted in late 2014. The fait-accompli policy cannot give international legitimacy to the putschists," the second government official said. The government also believes that the Houthis should share the cost of paying government salaries, claiming the Iran-backed militia has taken large sums of money from seaports, banks and telecom companies. A third senior government official told Arab News that the Houthis should be required to stop executing their opponents and seizing their properties in Sana'a, to release detainees, and to open Sana'a airport and Hodeida port. "The problem is that the UN Yemen envoy is sometimes not a mediator. He supports the demand of the Houthis," the third official said. Yemen's Foreign Minister Mohammed Al-Hadrami said on Wednesday that the government rejected the latest draft of the peace plan and would abide by the previous draft, which did not include the controversial points. Griffiths refutes the government's accusations, saying the proposed peace plan asks all parties to cease hostilities and immediately engage in talks based on the three references, which he described in an interview with UN News as "the only way to break with the violence of the past and end this conflict comprehensively and sustainably." Griffiths recognized that major issues between the two sides remain, but said: "There are always points of convergence that a mediation process can build on. Yemen is no different. We will continue to work with the parties to find a consensual path forward to achieve these mutual goals and pave the way for bringing this conflict to a sustainable end." Without specifically naming the Houthis, Griffiths called for rebels to immediately halt offensives in the provinces of Jawf and Marib. "The continued assault on Marib is unacceptable. I am afraid this assault could seriously undermine the prospects of peace in Yemen," he said. Several previous rounds of peace talks between the government and Houthis in Geneva, Biel and Kuwait have failed. The government insists that the Houthis must disarm before they can share power, while the Houthis wish to discuss power-sharing and other political arrangements before withdrawing from cities under their control.

British Airways retires Boeing 747s

LONDON: British Airways has said it will retire all of its Boeing 747s as it suffers from the sharp travel downturn. Airlines across the world have been hit hard by coronavirus-related travel restrictions. "It is with great sadness that we can confirm we are proposing to retire our entire 747 fleet with immediate effect," a BA spokesman told the BBC. The UK airline is the world's largest operator of the jumbo jets, with 31 in the fleet. "It is unlikely our magnificent 'queen of the skies' will ever operate commercial services for British Airways again due to the downturn in travel caused by the Covid-19 global pandemic," the spokesman added.

Spain orders culling of almost 100,000 mink

WEB DESK

MADRID: Almost 100,000 mink at a farm in north-eastern Spain are to be culled after many of them tested positive for coronavirus, health authorities say. The outbreak in Aragon province was discovered after a farm employee's wife contracted the virus in May. Her husband and six other farm workers have since tested positive for the disease. The mink, bred for their prized fur, were isolated and monitored closely after the workers became infected. But when tests on 13 July showed that 87% of the mink were infected, health authorities ordered for all 92,700 of the semi-aquatic animals to be culled. Authorities said financial compensation will be given to the company that runs the farm, based in a village 200 km (125 miles) east of Madrid. Along with Madrid and Catalonia, Aragon is one of the coronavirus hotspots in Spain, where more than 250,000 infections and 28,000 deaths have been recorded since the start of the pandemic. Joaquin Olona, Aragon's minister of agriculture, told reporters on Thursday that the decision to cull the mink was taken "to avoid the risk of human transmission". Mr Olona stressed that it was not clear if "transmission was possible from animals to humans and vice versa". But one possibility, he said, was that an infected farm worker unwittingly transmitted the disease to the animals. Another unsubstantiated theory was that the animals passed on the disease to workers, he said.

Trump niece's memoir makes sales record

NEW YORK: A new book on Donald Trump written by his niece sold nearly a million copies on the first day it went on sale in the United States, its publisher said. Mary Trump's "Too Much and Never Enough: How My Family Created the World's Most Dangerous Man" is billed as the first unflattering portrayal of the US president by a family insider. Mary, a psychologist whose father was Trump's oldest brother Fred, accuses the president of hubris and ignorance, and says he fits the clinical criteria for being a narcissist. The 950,000 copies sold Tuesday, including pre-orders as well as audio and digital versions, "is a company record" for the Simon & Schuster publishing house, it said in a statement. The White House has dismissed the memoir as a "book of falsehoods". The president's younger brother Robert Trump went to court to try to block publication, arguing that Mary was violating a non-disclosure agreement signed in 2001 after the settlement of her grandfather's estate, but to no avail. - APP

EU's 'moment of truth' as the leaders seek funding deal

BRUSSELS: EU leaders are meeting in their first face-to-face summit since the coronavirus crisis, with low expectations of BRUSSELS: EU leaders are meeting in their first face-to-face summit since the coronavirus crisis, with low expectations of a deal on a 750bn

(€670bn) post-Covid stimulus package. French President Emmanuel Macron said it was a "moment of truth" for Europe and the next hours would be decisive. The main issue is how much of the recovery fund will be handed out in grants and how much in loans. They also need to agree on a seven-year budget worth another 1.07 trillion. Arriving for the talks, German Chancellor Angela Merkel said "the differences are very very big and I cannot say if we will find a solution this time". It would be desirable, she said, but people had to remain realistic. The Brussels meeting is due to continue on Saturday but EU leaders may need longer to reach a deal. European Council President Charles Michel acknowledged that the talks would be "very difficult", but Greek Prime Minister Kyriakos Mitsotakis said nobody should lose sight of the big picture - "we're faced with the biggest economic depression since the Second World War". Estonian Prime Minister Juri Ratas said "we need a fast, strong and united response to the pandemic to kick-start the European economy".

Russia accused of hacking vaccine trials

MOSCOW: Britain, the United States and Canada accused Russia on Thursday of trying to steal information from researchers seeking a COVID-19 vaccine. The three nations alleged that hacking group APT29, also known as Cozy Bear and said to be part of the Russian intelligence service, is attacking academic and pharmaceutical research institutions involved in coronavirus vaccine development. Britain's National Cyber Security Centre made the announcement, which was coordinated with authorities in the US and Canada. "It is completely unacceptable that the Russian Intelligence Services are targeting those working to combat the coronavirus pandemic," Foreign Secretary Dominic Raab said in a statement. "While others pursue their selfish interests with reckless behaviour, the UK and its allies are getting on with the hard work of finding a vaccine and protecting global health." The persistent and continuing attacks are seen by intelligence officials as an effort to steal intellectual property, rather than to disrupt research. The campaign of "malicious activity" is ongoing and includes attacks "predominantly against government, diplomatic, think-tank, healthcare and energy targets," the National Cyber Security Centre said in a statement. - DNA

Hundreds of flights cancelled in Xinjiang

DNA

XINJIANG: More than 600 flights have been cancelled in Urumqi, the capital of China's Xinjiang province after a case was confirmed there. A 24-year-old woman tested positive on Thursday after displaying symptoms. Three of her close contacts tested positive. However, they were asymptomatic. The cancellations at Urumqi Diwopu International Airport account for more than 80% of the day's total. From Friday, a number of airlines including Juneyao Airlines and Shenzhen Donghai

Airlines require all passengers travelling to and from Urumqi to show a negative nucleic acid test taken within seven days. Passengers must display a "safe to travel" health code, on an app which aims to identify potential virus carriers, the Chinese state-run Global Times says. China Eastern Airlines has already put those restrictions in place. Urumqi also suspended the city's subway services on Thursday. Mainland China confirmed 10 cases on Friday. Nine of those were imported from overseas, the country's health authority said.

BEIJING: China says any US travel ban on members of its Communist Party would be "pathetic", in the latest sharp exchange amid souring bilateral ties. The New York Times had earlier reported the Trump government was considering the move, although it is still in draft form and could be rejected. The Chinese Communist Party has 92 million members and how a ban would be enforced is uncertain. The US this week removed Hong Kong's preferential trade status, after China brought in a controversial new security law for the territory. President Donald Trump has also criticised China over its handling of the coronavirus pandemic as well as its military build-up in the South China Sea, its treatment of Muslim minorities and massive trade surpluses.

ISLAMABAD: Economic experts and business leaders on Friday lauded the PM Imran Khan's move to develop the construction sector but cautioned that focus on only one sector will not revive economic activities. They said all the important sectors deserve attention but the government lacks economic experts who can take timely and correct decisions based on ground realities. Speaking at a seminar organized by FPCCI Central Standing Committee on Insurance, former federal secretary finance Dr. Waqar Masood Khan, former provincial minister, and convenor FPCCI Mian Zahid Hussain, Convenor of the FPCCI committee Dr. Murtaza Mughal, Chartered Accountant Tariq Hussain and others said that the economy is without direction which is hitting almost every sector. They said that the government has disappointed masses while instability, inflation, and anxiety is increasing in the masses. The government seems more interested in bashing the former rulers and less inclined to provide relief to the masses, they added. The participants said that mafia has taken economy and masses as a hostage, the government promise to reduce prices but there is nothing on the ground and nothing has been done to deter the profiteers. The growth rate during 2017-18 was 5.8 percent but the consumption of petrol was less than what was consumed during the last month amid negative growth rate but the issue in which billions were plundered was hushed up. Similarly, the consumption of cement has also raised many eyebrows but to no avail which indicate collusion in mafia and authorities. The speakers said that the wheat crisis has surfaced again and it is engulfing the whole country for which the mafia as well as the inefficiency and mismanagement of the rulers are to be blamed. Coronavirus has not damaged Pakistan as it did in the developed countries which is a blessing otherwise the situation would have been different, they said, adding that the threat of another wave of locust seems not enough to unite federal and provincial governments for a coordinated response. Dr. Murtaza Mughal who chaired the seminar said that coronavirus has brought to limelight the need for health insurance which should be made mandatory by the government. He said that almost eight percent of the vehicles in Pakistan are not insured therefore vehicle insurance should also be mandatory which will benefit masses, and stabilize the insurance industry. Other participants included Makhdoom Taseer, Qazi Asif Sayeed, Muhammad Arif, Sadruddin, and Mr. Ishtiaq.

RIYADH: Saudi Arabia's candidate for the top job at the World Trade Organisation stands out from the other contenders through his more managerial approach to the role. Mohammad Mazaid Al Tuwaijri, the former minister of economy and planning and Saudi air force pilot, believes that there are lessons to be learnt from Saudi Vision 2030. The framework, which he helped produce in 2016, intends to reduce the Kingdom's economic dependence on oil and develop public service sectors in fields including health, education, infrastructure, recreation, and tourism by 2030. "This is the fifth year and I am proud to see this transformation taking place in a very difficult region. The core concepts are economic diversification, empowering the private sector, [having more] women in power," he said. Mr Al Tuwaijri sees the management and leadership aspects of the WTO as similar in nature to the Kingdom's transformation. He is one of eight candidates who appeared before the WTO's General Council - the decision-making body composed of envoys from the 164 member countries - to pitch their suitability for director general this week. This year's shortlist also includes three women and three African candidates, as well as a Brexitier. UN appeals for $10.3bn to fight coronavirus

NEW YORK: The United Nations is making an appeal for $10.3 billion ($8.2 billion) to help fight the coronavirus pandemic, its largest ever fundraising call. The UN says up to 265 million people could face starvation by the end of the year because of the impact of Covid-19. The money will be for used for low income and fragile countries. The UN warned that failure to act could undo decades of development. It initially asked for $2 billion in its first coronavirus appeal in March. The coronavirus pandemic is having a huge impact on the world's poorest, the BBC's Imogen Foulkes reports from Geneva. This revised appeal is a record, but, the UN says, wealthy countries have thrown away the financial rule book to protect their own economies, and must now do the same for poorer nations. If they do not, the UN warns, the world faces a series of crises, with millions pushed into starvation. - DNA

Govt working to ensure smooth supply of electricity: NA told

FAIZ CH.

ISLAMABAD: Minister for Power Division Omar Ayub Khan on Friday informed National Assembly that the government was working to improve the distribution system for the smooth supply of electricity throughout the country. Responding to a question during question hour, he said that it was unfortunate that previous governments did not make any investment for improvement of electricity distribution system. He said the government was establishing grid stations besides reducing distance among feeders for smooth supply. He said at present over 23,000 megawatts was being transmitted by power distribution companies. Some 80 per cent feeders had been cleared of power pilferage and efforts were being made to clear remaining 20 per cent feeders, he added. Responding to another question, he said that the government was providing 290 million cubic feet per day (mmcf) against 190 mmcf quota to K Electric in Karachi to overcome energy shortages in the city. The minister said K-Electric was a private company and its total power demand stood at 3400 megawatts. The government was ready to provide additional power to K-Electric from the national grid but no investment was made in distribution system of the company during the past 10 years, he continued. He said that oil had also been provided to K-Electric for the generation of electricity. The minister said K-Electric and National Transmission and Despatch Company were also being pressed to set up 500 kv grid station and distribution points. At present, there was no shortfall of electricity as sufficient generation was available to meet demand of electricity in the country, he told. Hence no loadshedding was being carried out in the country due to generation shortfall, he added. However, the minister said load management was being carried out by distribution companies (DISCOS) on the basis of aggregate technical and commercial losses recorded on each feeder in compliance of directives of the federal cabinet.
