Over 30,000 work visas would be issued by the Italian government to the nationals from a few non-EU countries, including Pakistan. Pakistani workers in agriculture, tourism, construction and freight forwarding sectors can avail this opportunity, according to details transmitted by the Pakistan Embassy in Italy to the Board of Investment on Thursday. Pakistan has been included in this category of visas after the lag of two years as a result of sustained efforts by its embassy in Rome. Ambassador Jauhar Saleem said on the occasion that Italy hosts the largest Pakistani diaspora in the European Union following Brexit, which has sent over $142 million in remittances in 2019-2020. He said that the Pakistani community in Italy had been demanding Pakistan's re-inclusion in the list of countries eligible for seasonal workers visa, ever since the facility was withdrawn two years ago. The demand for Pakistani workers in the Italian market is on the rise consistently, especially in the agricultural sector, Ambassador Saleem said. It is expected that under the current scheme, hundreds of Pakistani workers would obtain gainful employment in Italy. Earlier, the Pakistan Embassy also facilitated thousands of undocumented Pakistani workers in Italy to seek legal status through a scheme launched by the Italian government in June 2020 to regularise the undocumented foreign workers. Over 18,000 Pakistanis applied for regularisation under that scheme. Despite the second wave of Covid-19, which has seen a record number of fresh cases in recent days, the Pakistan Embassy has kept its consular section, both in Rome and Milan, fully functional so as to facilitate the community in benefiting from the growing job opportunities in Italy.

India stuck in odd position in IIOJK, says Moeed

The SAPM emphasised that the pre-conditions, set by Pakistan, were the benchmark for any dialogue process with India, if it was serious to hold talks on Kashmir

ISLAMABAD: Special Assistant to the Prime Minister (SAPM) on National Security and Strategic Policy Planning, Dr Moeed Yusuf on Friday said India was stuck in a difficult position in Indian Illegally Occupied Jammu and Kashmir (IIOJK) and “unable to figure out what to do. “Its move of August 5, 2019 had expectedly backfired and it had lost Kashmir for all practical purposes, Dr Moeed said in his exclusive interaction with media.

He said : “The future of Kashmir dispute is that India will have to hold plebiscite as per the United Nations (UN) Resolutions to give Kashmiris their just right to self-determination as there is no other workable solution to the issue.” “There is a list of things (pre-set conditions) that India will have to do by force, due to Kashmiris or do it voluntarily and come to the table and have a conversation so that both countries can move forward.”

The SAPM emphasised that the pre-conditions, set by Pakistan, were the benchmark for any dialogue process with India, if it was serious to hold talks on Kashmir. The first question to any such Indian proposal was that either it was serious or not and if India could fulfill the pre-require.

To a question, he said: “We stand on our principled stance about the 73-years old dispute and no overnight change could be expected on IIOJK. But, we are aggressively countering the narrative that India used to sell to the world which is not being accepted now.”

He said the sort of pressure India is under and the negative publicity it has received in western media had not happened for many decades. “The efforts by Pakistan and Kashmiri diaspora are bearing fruit and things are changing in a propitious way.”

With regard to the domicile issue in IIOJK, Dr Moeed categorically stated that Indian move to provide domicile to non-Kashmiri residents was illegal which the UN framework did not allow, adding, “If a plebiscite is held tomorrow, none of them will be considered and any plebiscite would be carried out on the position when there were no forced demographic changes in IIOJK. The UN is responsible for ensuring free and fair plebiscite.”

In his comments on National Security Threat, he said such issues were based on timelines as they vary from short-term to long-term scenarios. He said :“If the question is of present (in the short-run), then India and lack of peace in Afghanistan are national security threats to Pakistan.” In the long-run while moving forward, climate and security, food and energy and water were the perils to national security, he added.

Dr Moeed Yusuf said that there was a trust deficit in Afghan leadership where Pakistan also remained skeptical at times as there had been issues because Afghans did not pay heed to its narrative. “India has been employing Afghan territories against Pakistan and created misunderstandings but now Pakistan has managed to improve the situation. The Afghan leadership has come to realize that it was only Pakistan that could have helped get the Intra-Afghan Peace process to its present shape and would assist in its meaningful conclusion.”

When asked about issue of firing from Afghan side on Pakistani check posts, the SAPM said the matter was raised at relevant forums from the day one where all parties including the US and interlocutors of peace process were apprised. “It is just a senseless loss of lives that takes place whether there has been any issue or not because only innocent people have been killed.”

Due to Afghanistan's history which for the past four decades remained in war including the Soviet conflict, civil war and the US occupation that turned the situation so fluid, that everyone involved in the Afghan region, tried to take advantage of the situation.

“India's main ambition was to undercut Pakistan which we knew and therefore India seeped into Afghan institutions and started initiating hostile activities against us.”

Since, India was a major country in the region and approached the US against Pakistan and to exploit the Afghan government that gained power after ousting the Taliban regime. “India is still conspiring to harm Pakistan's peace and security and I have given its proofs a day earlier to the Indian journalist Karan Thapar,” he added. – APP

SSGC to meet increased demand

ISLAMABAD: The Sui Southern Gas Company (SSGC), which is mainly responsible for supplying gas in Sindh and Balochistan provinces, has evolved an effective strategy of injecting additional RLNG in its transmission network to meet the increased commodity demand during the upcoming peak winter season.

“This year, around 160 MMCFD (Million Cubic Feet per Day) gas is expected to be short supplied from the fields and the SSGC will face [overall] shortage of around 250-300 MMCFD gas this winter. This shortfall will be met by injecting RLNG in the system,” according to an official document available with APP.

During the last winter, the SSGC was getting an average 1,145 MMCFD gas supply from its 25 operational fields, which has reduced to 985 MMCFD in 2020-21 due to depletion of the hydrocarbon deposits, curtailing the supply by 160 MMCFD gas. Keeping in view the increased gas demand, the company has started implementing its winter plan as 200 MMCFD Regasified Liquefied Natural Gas (RLNG) has already been injected in the system.

Besides, it commenced work on laying a 17-Kilometer pipeline after getting Right of Way (ROW) from the Sindh government, for which the federal government has been requesting for the last one-and-a-half years. The 30-inch dia pipeline would be laid from the Custody Transfer Station (CTS) of RLNG at the Bin Qasim [Qasim Port Karachi] to Sales Meter Station Pakland where the SSGC transmission network is available for injecting the RLNG.

Currently, as many as two LNG terminals were operating in the country and injecting around 1200 MMCFD gas in the national transmission system, which greatly helped in bridging the gap between demand and supply of the gas.

Pakistan's indigenous gas production is around 3.7 Billion Cubic Feet per Day (BCFD) against the demand of 6 BCFD, while the existing reserves are depleting at the rate of 9.5 percent annually and unfortunately oil and gas Exploration & Production companies made no significant discovery since long.

Realizing the present and future needs of gas, the government is encouraging private sector players in the LNG business under its ease-of-doing-business plan. – APP

Pakistan's NUST to locally produce cardiac stents

PM Khan said that the federal government is making maximum efforts to bring investment and businesses to Pakistan for improving the economy

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Prime Minister Imran Khan has inaugurated the cardiac stent manufacturing unit at the National University of Sciences and Technology (NUST) which will turn Pakistan becoming the 18th global state for locally manufacturing stents. PM Imran Khan paid a visit to the National University of Sciences and Technology (NUST) Islamabad where he has inaugurated the cardiac stent manufacturing unit,

N-Ovative Health Technology Facility. Pakistan becomes the second country among Muslim states for being capable of locally manufacture cardiac stents. While addressing the ceremony, PM Imran Khan said that the mortality rate of cardiac diseases is very high in Pakistan and it is a praiseworthy decision to locally manufacture stents. The establishment of a facility for stents' manufacturing is major progress, said Khan. The premier said that there was a lack of direction and role of the past governments in different fields which are very important to put a country on a path of development. The trade deficit is a big burden on the national economy and no country could survive the crisis and reduce inflation until improving its income. He highlighted that there was also a lack of coordination among institutions as compared to the 60's era when the country was moving ahead in a good direction and its exports were gradually increasing. It is important to set the direction and mindset of the country, he urged. A few countries around the world are manufacturing cardiac stents and its local production will visibly reduce the medical treatment cost of patients in Pakistan, said Imran Khan. PM Khan said that the federal government is making maximum efforts to bring investment and businesses to Pakistan for improving the economy. Regarding overseas nationals, he said that the Pakistanis residing in foreign countries could serve the country by their skills. "We have to make a pleasant environment for overseas Pakistanis here in the country as they are our precious asset. Our major issue is about being unaware of our capabilities and a vision is needed to explore the potentialities. Being just an Asian Tiger is not a vision, we can be anything as the human capabilities are unlimited." Among South Asian countries, cardiac stents will be manufactured in Pakistan after India. In March 2020, the Drugs Regulatory Authority of Pakistan (DRAP) had allowed the National University of Sciences and Technology (NUST) to produce heart stents locally. The DRAP had issued a license to the NUST to produce heart stents domestically.

ing economic shocks," Malik Amin stressed. United in protest

A Number of groups came together in Islamabad on Wednesday to protest various issues that affect their livelihoods and their lives. From the All Pakistan Labor Unions to the Young Doctors Association to the Punjab Teachers Union to the very overworked and under-appreciated Lady Health Workers to the Goods and Transporters Group to the All Pakistan Clerks Association, D-Chowk saw another kind of protest – the kind that just cannot be dismissed by the government under the pretext of ‘political agendas’ and ‘foreign narratives’. The demands may vary but they are all connected in one way or the other with either apathy by the government or a lack of understanding of just what the working and middle classes are going through in this time of crippling inflation. For example, the huge protest by lady health workers is only demanding what in any other world should not even be up for debate: proper service structure, pensions and due payment for additional duties. The lady health workers have been told that they come under the provincial government and should therefore return and stage their protests in their provinces. The LHWs however say that the federal government is in charge of polio vaccination and other similar campaigns, and should take control of their fate. They have also said that without a decrease in food prices they will not be able to survive – much like the rest of the working and professional class. These protests are a very real gauge of just how desperate the times are for the people of the country that they are ready to take to the streets themselves even when policemen in full riot gear and shields stand before them, and when they have no political clout at all. The government has brought up the Covid factor, but that doesn’t go down well when the same government has been holding large gatherings itself. All this is happening as the opposition’s first large combined rally is set for today. The fact is that the government cannot and should not ignore the Islamabad protests. It would be an unwise move to try and do that because the anger is palpable and sentiment of betrayal and helplessness strong. The demands of the people – whether they are trade unionists or lady health workers of medical and nursing staff – have to be heard with the respect and seriousness they have earned.. These are citizens of the country. Without many – in fact, all – of them and their work, we would all be much the poorer.

Digital surveillance

THE stage is steadily being set for increased internet surveillance in the country. The government has a clear target for which it is silently laying the groundwork, but the preparations are all taking place without the input of key stakeholders from the tech industry. A report published in this paper yesterday revealed that this lack of transparency has set off alarm bells for the big technology companies who will be the direct targets of this regulation and surveillance. Represented by the Asia Internet Coalition, major social media platforms including Google, Facebook, Twitter and Apple have published a letter written to Prime Minister Imran Khan expressing deep concern about the lack of consultation in drafting the Removal and Blocking of Unlawful Content (Procedure, Oversight and Safeguards) Rules, 2020. The letter goes so far as to say that the companies have lost trust in the “non-transparent and abbreviated” consultation process. While this has been said publicly, in private and on condition of anonymity, top executives at these tech companies are said to have revealed even more startling developments which indicate that there is far more at stake than is made public. It was also revealed that the government wants to further restrict and control what is published on social media, with a demand to block and regulate content. The rules, under which these sweeping powers would be legalised, have so far been kept secret, with the coalition even stating that, despite multiple requests, no draft of the revised rules has been shared with industry stakeholders for input or feedback. That the government is diligently laying the foundation for the large-scale digital surveillance of citizens is deeply unsettling. What is more disturbing is the secrecy with which all of this is being done, with even the tech companies complaining that they have been left in the dark. The clandestine nature of these rules and the key demands of the government to these tech companies suggest that something sinister is at play. That the authorities want citizen data to be stored in Pakistan so that they can access it without going through a legal process speaks volumes for the state’s desperation to monitor citizens’ movements online. Such a hawkish approach to digital companies makes a mockery of both the prime minister’s dream of a ‘digital Pakistan’ and his claim of “I am democracy”. The dogged tracking of citizens, the eagerness to access their data and the desire to proactively block certain kinds of content reeks of paranoia and is shameful behaviour in a democracy.

COVID-19 impact on Pakistan’s hotel industry

Munaza Kazmi

Coronavirus attacked Pakistan in late February 2020, from there onwards its hotel industry has confronted with damaging consequences from mainly lockdowns & quarantine. These results have affected each & every stakeholder in the hotel chain. Starting from the travel bans & prolonged quarantine, it ended with the cancelation of bookings & tourist’s unwillingness to travel due to the fear of virus. These cancelations have eventually led to cut their costs even to the risk of survival. It was reported that many of the small & medium hotels went to complete shutdown & closure of business which affected the bread & butter of many poor people

DUE to the COVID-19 outbreak, industries have been troubled by ambiguities & uncertainties & this scenario is quite evident in the tourism & hotel industry, which is based on human interaction. It can be said the hotel & tourism industry is the main receiver of the catastrophe & its consequences. The Impact of COVID-19 on Pakistan’s Hotel Industry: Coronavirus attacked Pakistan in late February 2020, from there onwards its hotel industry has confronted with damaging consequences from mainly lockdowns & quarantine. These results have affected each & every stakeholder in the hotel chain. Starting from the travel bans & prolonged quarantine, it ended with the cancelation of bookings & tourist’s unwillingness to travel due to the fear of virus. These cancelations have eventually led to cut their costs even to the risk of survival. It was reported that many of the small & medium hotels went to complete shutdown & closure of business which affected the bread & butter of many poor people. There are approximately 12,000 hotels in Pakistan that directly & indirectly employ 2.5 million families, moreover tourism & hospitality is Pakistan’s second largest contributor in economy & foreign reserves. Furthermore, this scenario resulted sharp decline in the market value in the stock exchange. As reported by Asian Development Bank in the worst-case scenario, Pakistan Hotels may face loss of $ 253.7 million whereas in the moderate case, the loss would be around $ 0.67 million. I would say Pakistan is under the era of slow recovery & lies between moderate to worst case since hotels still have not started operating as before, moreover the influx of international tourist is still near to zero, though Prime Minister Imran Khan has lifted the restrictions on tourism industry, but almost more than half of the nations are still under border restrictions. The scenario will persist, since the loss has not just incurred on the economy only but to the physical as well mental health of the people, it raised numerous fears & anxiety issues, the concerns for infection, these concerns can have negative impact on the industry, though the industry will revive slowly & for that Pakistan must gear up for tomorrow. Preparing for tomorrow: It was observed that the industry of tourism & hospitality has been under a persistent crisis & disaster since the beginning of 21st century. The pandemic of coronavirus comes under the same category, as it is neither predictable nor avoidable & effecting the working & operations of entities round the globe. COVID-19 Disaster Management Framework for Hotels: PHASE Pre-event

Why is Bint-e-Hawa deprived of protection?

Attiya Munawer

The present govt makes a lot of claims to provide security to the people, there is talk of legislation, but the ground realities are just the opposite. If we look at the number of sexual assaults from Zainab to the motorway incident, the administration looks completely inactive. The highest rate of cases across the country is in Punjab and KPK

FOR the last thirty years, the unstoppable chain of abduction and murder of innocent girls has been going on for a long time. At the same time, incidents of collective and individual abuse of women are also on the rise. Some incidents are reported, but most do not even register an FIR for the sake of their family’s honor and dignity. These young girls and women who are victims of brutality get rid of their lives by committing suicide. Such incidents that happen on a daily basis have frightened girls and women. Poor and middle class women are being called under the pretext of employment and their dignity is being tarnished while somewhere on public highways, they are being sexually abused after looting. In the state of Medina, Bint-e-Hawa is nowhere safe and rulers are merely consoling the people with rhetoric claims of making criminals a warning sign. Pakistan is an Islamic country;where things can get better if the perpetrators of child and women abuse are punished according to Islamic principles. We have to set an exemplary hanging such beasts in public without coming under the pressure of the West; otherwise, our fate will be the same as that of the people of Lut. There is no denying the fact that it is the responsibility of the government to protect the lives, property, honor and dignity of the people. Cruel beasts in human form are carrying out fearless and dangerous incidents, but the government has not taken any serious, drastic and immediate steps for effective prevention. Whenever a new tragedy in the country occurs, members of the government, the opposition getsilenced by making strong condemnatory statements and the traditional rhetoric of bringing the accused to justice. No effective legislation has been enacted in this regard nor a common strategy is being worked out to protect the people. For so many years, the so-called democrats have been in power, yet women are not secure and innocent children are being killed after being abused. The present government makes a lot of claims to provide security to the people, there is talk of legislation, but the ground realities are just the opposite. If we look at the number of sexual assaults from Zainab to the motorway incident, the administration looks completely inactive. The highest rate of cases across the country is in Punjab and KPK, while these two provinces have PTI governments. The government has issued an alert in the name of Zainab, the innocent daughter of Kasur, but it has not been of any use. Has such showy measures ever eradicated crime? All this is nothing but a ploy to throw dust in the eyes of the people.

There is no doubt about the intention of Prime Minister Imran Khan, he wants to set a precedent for criminals by preventing crime, but in practice the government seems to have completely failed to protect the lives, property, honor and dignity of the people. It is the major responsibility of the federal and provincial governments to curb the rising crime and sexual abuse of women in the country, but the extent to which this responsibility is being met can be gauged from the growing proportion of incidents.

Unless the concept of crime and punishment is put into practice in this country, such incidents will not be prevented. Hearings will be postponed due to weak police investigation in police stations, absence of lawyers and accused in the courts leading to an increase in crime. Such incidents can be greatly reduced if law enforcement agencies carry out their duties with due diligence and do not delay the delivery of judicial decisions. There is no doubt that the government is facing many challenges, but the nation has not been tolerant in tolerating such incidents, by justifying the situation in the country. The incidents with women and girls are proof that there is a lack of justice in the society. The lack of justice in society occurs only when the government starts supporting the oppressor instead of the oppressed. Not providing justice is the biggest injustice of the government. Hazrat Ali (R.A.) says that “society can survive with kufr (infidelity), but not injustice”. PTI government should ensure the delivery of justice; improve the police system and its efficiency. The hearing of cases of abuse of children and women should be expedited and those involved should be hung in public squares as a warning sign. We have to follow the Islamic laws and make the best possible legislation, If the rulers who wanted to make Pakistan a state of Medina, need to come out of the pressure of the major world powers and move towards the implementation of real Sharia law in Pakistan, then not only Bint-e-Hawa will get full rights with protection, but also our entire society will improve.

release contaminated water into sea'

MONITORING DESK

TOKYO: Japan is to release treated radioactive water from the destroyed Fukushima nuclear plant into the sea, media reports say.

It follows years of debate over how to dispose of the liquid, which includes water used to cool the power station hit by a massive tsunami in 2011. Environmental and fishing groups oppose the idea but many scientists say the risk it would pose is low. The government says no final decision has been made. The release of more than a million tonnes of water, which has been filtered to reduce radioactivity, would start in 2022 at the earliest, according to Japanese media outlets including national dailies the Nikkei and the Yomiuri Shimbun. The water would be diluted inside the plant before release so it is 40 times less concentrated, the Yomiuri Shimbun said, with the whole process taking 30 years. An official decision could emerge by the end of this month, said Kyodo news agency. There has been growing urgency over what to do with the water as space to store the liquid - which includes groundwater and rain that seeps daily into the plant - is running out. Most of the radioactive isotopes have been removed using a complex filtration process. But one isotope, tritium, cannot be removed so the water has been stored in huge tanks which will fill up by 2022.

UK ready to walk away without
'fundamental change' from EU

The summit outcome appeared to rule out a comprehensive, Canada-style free trade agreement between the EU and Britain, Johnson said, accusing the 27-nation bloc of failing "to negotiate seriously" in recent months

DNA

LONDON: Prime Minister Boris Johnson on Friday kept the door open to more Brexit talks but insisted Britain was ready to slam it shut unless the EU offers "fundamental change" in its tactics, as the clock ticks down to a potentially messy divorce.

Johnson was responding after the European Union at summit talks Thursday demanded he give ground on key stumbling blocks while also proposing a fresh round of talks next week in London. The summit outcome appeared to rule out a comprehensive, Canada-style free trade agreement between the EU and Britain, Johnson said, accusing the 27-nation bloc of failing "to negotiate seriously" in recent months.

"They want the continued ability to control our legislative freedom, our fisheries, in a way that is obviously unacceptable to an independent country," he said in a broadcast interview. He said that "unless there is some fundamental change of approach" from the EU, Britain's favoured approach for an all-encompassing deal was out. "And so with high hearts and complete confidence we will prepare to embrace the alternative," Johnson said. He said Britain should "get ready" to operate on stripped-down World Trade Organization rules from January akin to Australia's relationship with the EU.

"And we can do it, because we always knew that there would be change on January 1 whatever type of relationship we had," he said, pointing to sector-by-sector arrangements in areas such as social security, aviation and nuclear cooperation. "And we will prosper mightily as an independent free-trading nation, controlling our own borders, our fisheries, and setting our own laws."

The British pound slid below $1.29 in response to Johnson's comments but pushed the London stock market up 1.3 percent, as the weak pound lifts multinationals earning in dollars.

Johnson had set the EU summit as a deadline for a deal, but is under pressure after fresh warnings that British companies are nowhere near ready for the consequences of a cliff-edge divorce when a post-Brexit transition periods ends on December 31.

Britain wants to reassert sovereignty over its waters and refuse EU legal oversight over any deal, insisting it wants an overarching trade deal of the kind the EU adopted with Canada in 2017.

Brussels in turn stresses that Britain's economy is far more integrated with the EU's than Canada's, and that its single market must be protected from British backsliding. At their Brussels summit, EU leaders demanded Britain compromise on fair trade rules to unblock the stalled post-Brexit talks. Chief negotiator Michel Barnier also proposed more meetings in London next week and the EU confirmed it would be in the British capital to intensify negotiations from Monday.

BISHKEK: The presidential elections in Kyrgyzstan should be held no later than Jan. 10, Prime Minister Sadyr Zhaparov said Friday. Consultations on the date for the elections will be held, Zhaparov said at an extraordinary session of the parliament. Both presidential and parliamentary elections will be held within the framework of the law, he said, adding that parliamentary elections should be held according to the party system. Zhap-arov proposed lowering the threshold to enter parliament up to 5 percent, and reducing the electoral deposit from 5 million Kyrgyz soms (62,000 U.S. dollars) to 1 million soms (12,000 dollars) as well as the number of deputies from 120 to 90 or 70. "When such a parliament comes, then we will be able to go for constitutional reform," he said. Zhaparov on Thursday declared himself acting president of the country after President Sooronbai Jeenbekov resigned hours earlier amid ongoing protests in Bishkek.

EU condemns
Turkey 'provocations'
in eastern Med

BRUSSELS: EU leaders on Friday condemned "unilateral actions and provocations" by Turkey in the Mediterranean where it is locked in a standoff over energy resources with Greece and Cyprus.

European leaders discussed the dispute at a summit in Brussels, after Turkey sent a research ship back to contested waters in defiance of international calls to withdraw. The European Union "deplores renewed unilateral and provocative actions by Turkey in the Eastern Mediterranean, including recent exploratory activities," the 27 leaders said in their summit communique. They urged Turkey to reverse its recent activity and reiterated their "full solidarity" for EU members Greece and Cyprus. EU leaders had a lengthy discussion of their relations with Ankara at a summit just two weeks ago, but Athens and Nicosia put grievances over Turkish energy exploration in the eastern Mediterranean back on the agenda. After a similar row in August, Ankara has redeployed the research ship Oruc Reis to strategic waters between Cyprus and the Greek islands of Crete and Kastellorizo. – APP

MOSCOW: Belarus and Russia have added opposition leader Sviatlana Tsikhanouskaya to their wanted lists on charges of attempting to overthrow the constitutional order.

Belarus put opposition leader Sviatlana Tsikhanouskaya on its most-wanted list for alleged calls to overthrow the constitutional order, the Russian interior minister told RIA news on Friday.

In accordance with a regional bloc agreement, Tsikhanouskaya later also appeared on Russia's wanted list. The opposition leader fled to neighboring Lithuania shortly after the disputed election in Belarus on August 9. She has since met with European leaders and called for President Alexander Lukashenko to step down. On Tuesday she set a deadline of October 25, threatening nationwide strikes if it was not met.

Anna Krasulina, a spokeswoman for Tsikhanouskaya, said that the move by Belarus "doesn't surprise anyone. It's clear the regime has no legal ways of retaining power."

Tsikhanouskaya stepped forward as the leader of the opposition challenging the president in the last elections after her husband, who had originally intended to take that role, was arrested and charged with taking part in an unauthorized demonstration. When her husband was formally disqualified from running, she took up the mantle and quickly got the 100,000 signatures required to be on the ballot. Protests erupted following the election which the president claimed to have won, but which have been disputed by other groups. Other opposition leaders have been arrested or left the country.

Around 13,000 people were arrested during the crackdown against protests, some were later released.

2 Thai
protesters arrested

BANGKOK: Thai police arrested two activists Friday under a rarely-used law banning violence against the queen, after thousands of pro-democracy protesters defied an emergency decree to rally on the streets of Bangkok.

The kingdom's political elite has been jolted by a youth-led movement that has demanded the resignation of Prime Minister Prayut Chan-O-cha and issued a once-taboo call for reforms to Thailand's powerful monarchy. Ekachai Hongkangwan and Bunkueanun Paotthong were among activists who crowded around a royal motorcade carrying Queen Suthida on Wednesday during a large demonstration near the capital's government house.

Bunkueanun said during a Friday morning Facebook broadcast that he was surrendering himself to police.

"I am accused of trying to harm the queen," he said. "I am innocent. That was not my intention." Ekachai told media by phone he had also been charged and police later confirmed he was in their custody. Both men could face life in prison under a law that has not been used for decades and punishes any "act of violence against the queen or her liberty". It is not clear why the pair were singled out. This is the first time such a serious charge has been levelled against pro-democracy activists, many of whom have already been hit with lesser charges, including sedition and breaking coronavirus rules on gatherings. Their movement's demands include the abolition of a strict royal defamation law - which shields the monarchy from criticism - and for the royal family to stay out of politics.

Uzbekistan expands the list of offshore zones

TASHKENT: Uzbekistan has expanded the list of offshore zones. Corresponding changes were made to the Regulation on the procedure for monitoring the validity of the conduct of foreign exchange transactions by legal entities and individuals. American Samoa, Aruba, Guatemala, Dominica, Kiribati, Monaco, Alderney Channel Island, Pitcairn,

San Marino, Saint Martin (Sint Maarten), Uruguay and the Philippines were included to the list of offshore zones, foreign exchange transactions with which are subject to monitoring. The document clarified the tax authorities, which receive information from the branches of banks and territorial departments of customs authorities, - territorial state tax departments and the Interregional State Tax Inspectorate for Large

Taxpayers. According to the document, banks must report if during a calendar year the amount of transfer of a resident individual abroad to the accounts of individuals exceeds 100 million soms (previously equivalent to US$10,000). Now the customs authorities must report on the revealed facts of unreasonable overstatement and understatement of the invoice value of goods, both during their import and export. According to Norma.uz, the document introduced a new monitoring mechanism. When studying the information received, tax authorities rely on information from electronic information databases and other information available to them. If violations of the procedure for conducting foreign exchange transactions are detected, a request is sent to an economic entity: in electronic form to the taxpayer's personal account - it is considered received after reading, but not later than 3 days from the date of departure; by registered mail, if the subject does not have a personal account, it is considered received 5 days after it was sent. The requested documents and information must be submitted to the tax authority within 5 working days after receiving the request. In some cases, additional information is requested from banks and customs. In the course of monitoring, measures of legal influence are not applied, the activities of the economic entity are not suspended. If monitoring confirms the fact: committing an offense - the tax office takes measures within its powers or transfers materials to law enforcement agencies; money laundering, terrorist financing or proliferation of weapons of mass destruction - the tax authorities shall notify the Department for Combating Economic Crimes under the General Prosecutor's Office within 3 days.

Sarkozy charged over Libyan financing

MONITORING DESK

PARIS: Former French President Nicolas Sarkozy has been charged over claims he used Libyan cash for his 2007 election campaign, financial crimes prosecutors told the AFP news agency on Friday. The charge for "membership in a criminal conspiracy" was brought on Monday, and adds to charges in 2018 of "passive corruption", "benefitting from embezzled public funds" and "illegal campaign financing" against Sarkozy, who has denied any wrongdoing. On his Facebook page, Sarkozy on Friday again said he was innocent. The 65-year-old denies accusations by former members of Muammar Gaddafi's leadership that he took millions from the slain Libyan ruler, some of it delivered in cash-stuffed suitcases, in his successful presidential run. The scandal came to light in 2012, when investigative website Mediapart published a document purporting to show that Gaddafi agreed to give Sarkozy up to 50 million euros ($58m or $67.6m at today's rates). In 2011, as NATO-backed forces were driving Gaddafi out of power, the longtime Libyan leader's youngest son Saif al-Islam, told the Euronews network: "Sarkozy must first give back the money he took from Libya to finance his electoral campaign."

Macron defends fishing rights at Brexit deal debate

WEB DESK

PARIS: French President Emmanuel Macron issued a statement Friday at the EU Council Summit in Brussels on the matter of fishing rights in the English Channel and northern waters between France and England. "Under no circumstance will our fisherman be the ones sacrificed for this Brexit. We did not choose Brexit; it's the choice of the British people," he said to Radio France International upon his arrival at a summit held Thursday and Friday in the Belgian capital. Although Friday's agenda will focus on events in Africa, discussions the prior day had focused on relations with the UK, with the fishing issue being one of great importance. The UK is set to make a hard exit from the single market as of Dec. 31. Macron said as well that France is already making preparations for the deadline. British Prime Minister Boris Johnson says he will decide at the summit's conclusion whether the UK will continue discussions on his self-imposed deadline. Fishing rights is one of the three main issues to be hammered out between the UK and the EU. Top of the list is cross-channel business, with Britain insisting on doling out state aid to UK businesses if it deems it necessary. Governance and regulating future deals and agreements is another hot-button topic.

Floods submerge 350 homes in Indonesia

FOREIGN DESK

JAKARTA: Heavy rains in Tolitoli Regency in Indonesia's Central Sulawesi Province caused flooding Friday in the villages of Silondou and Janja, according to the Indonesian National Board for Disaster Management (BNPB). A total of 350 homes were damaged and a bridge was closed to traffic due to the risk of collapse. Officials said necessary units are working in coordination to meet flood victims' needs. They are currently trying to find out whether other settlements were damaged due to the floods. The meteorology agency warned that there may be floods due to showers in various regions tomorrow, including Palu, Sigi, Donggala, Parimo, Poso, Buol and Morowali. Indonesia is located near the equator, and floods and landslides often occur, especially from October to April.

UN's decolonization agenda must include Kashmir issue

While the international community has continued to reaffirm the principle of self-determination, the free exercise of this right has been denied, so far, in certain cases, such as in Jammu and Kashmir and Palestine

DNA

NEW YORK: Pakistan told the U.N. on Thursday that it's decolonization agenda would remain incomplete without settling the Kashmir dispute on the basis of Security Council resolutions that pledged the right of self-determination to the Kashmiri people. "India has, by obfuscation and oppression, denied the right of self-determination to the people of Jammu and Kashmir for seven decades," Mohammad Aamir Khan, deputy permanent representative of Pakistan to the UN, said in a speech to the General Assembly's Special Political and Decolonization (Fourth) Committee. "The UN's decolonization agenda will remain incomplete without the just resolution of the Jammu and Kashmir dispute," he added. "Negation of the right to self-determination, anywhere, generates anger and discontent, ignites conflicts and threatens peace and security," the said while participating in a general debate. "Sadly," the Pakistani representative said, "South Asia and the Middle East have witnessed and experienced this for decades." "While the international community has continued to reaffirm the principle of self-determination, the free exercise of this right has been denied, so far, in certain cases, such as in Jammu and Kashmir and Palestine,"

Aamir Khan pointed out. The persistence of colonialism and foreign occupations is a "travesty" of the universal principle of political and economic freedom for all peoples, the Pakistani representative said. Referring to India's so-called "final solution" initiated in occupied Jammu and Kashmir on Aug. 5, 2019, that saw elimination of the disputed state's special status, imposition of a siege and changing of its demographic composition., Aamir Khan said those measures constituted flagrant violations of the UN Charter, the relevant Security Council resolutions, and international law, including the Fourth Geneva Convention. During the last fourteen months, he said, India has imprisoned all Kashmiri political leaders, illegally detained 13,000 Kashmiri youth, tortured many of them, summarily executed young boys, put down protest violently, including the use of blinding pellet guns, and imposed collective punishments demolishing and burning entire neighborhoods and villages. "The international community must hold India accountable for egregious violations of human rights of Kashmiris, and ensure the implementation of the Security Council resolutions prescribing a plebiscite to enable the people of Jammu and Kashmir to exercise their right to self-determination," the Pakistani representative said. Dealing with UN peacekeeping operations, he urged the world body to consider ways and means to strengthen the UN Military Observers Group in India and Pakistan (UNMOGIP), and enable it to effectively perform its mandated role for monitoring and reporting ceasefire violations. In this regard, Aamir Khan pointed out that despite the UN Secretary-General and the Security Council call for a global ceasefire, India intensified its violations of the ceasefire along the Line of Control (LoC) in the disputed territory of Jammu and Kashmir. "Due to the intensified Indian ceasefire violations, and threats of aggression against Pakistan, the role and importance of UNMOGIP, has become increasingly important," he emphasized. "As a major troop-contributing country, with a proud history of professionalism, competence and honour, we welcome discussions for improving performance and outcomes of peacekeeping, he said, calling it UN's flagship enterprise. "As the first member state to endorse the Action for Peacekeeping (AAP) declaration of shared commitments, we firmly believe that we are all stakeholders in this endeavour and thus have a shared responsibility to ensure its success." "We look forward to working with all stakeholders for our common objective of improving peacekeeping outcomes."

Syria Kurds free more than 600 ISIL fighters

MONITORING DESK

Kurdish-led authorities released hundreds of ISIL (ISIS) fighters imprisoned in northern Syria as part of a general amnesty in the region controlled by a United States-backed militia. Amina Omar, the head of the Syrian Democratic Council, told reporters at a news conference in the town of Qamishli that ISIL members who were released have "no blood on their hands" and have all repented joining ISIL at some point. "They are people who can be reformed," Omar said shortly before the men were freed. The Syrian Democratic Council said the 631 prisoners were released Thursday while 253 others will have their terms cut in half. Omar added all those freed are Syrians who have served at least half of their prison sentences. The releases came after repeated calls from the Arab tribes that dominate much of the region administered by the Kurds, including the areas near the Iraqi border where ISIL made its bloody last stand in 2019. AFP news agency correspondents outside the Alaya detention facility on the outskirts of Qamishli saw dozens of detainees leave the premises and reunite with relatives who had come to meet them. "My brother has been in jail for eight months for women trafficking in Al-Hol camp," Ahmad al-Husseini said, in reference to the largest detention facility in the region. Kurdish authorities currently operate more than two dozen prisons scattered across northeastern Syria, holding about 10,000 ISIL fighters. Among the detainees are some 2,000 foreigners whose home countries have refused to repatriate them, including about 800 Europeans.

Kashmir's political parties unite for autonomy

KASHMIR DESK

SRINAGAR: Kashmir's main political parties have announced a grand alliance to seek a peaceful restoration of its autonomy days after India released the last key Kashmiri political leader from a lengthy detention. "Our battle is a constitutional battle. We want the government of India to return to the people of the state [of Kashmir] the rights they held before August 5th, 2019," Farooq Abdullah, former chief minister of Indian-administered Kashmir, said on Thursday. Abdullah was talking to reporters after a meeting of the disputed region's main parties – the National Conference, the People's Democratic Party, the People's Conference, the Awami National Conference and the Communist Party of India (Marxist) – was held at his residence in the main city of Srinagar. On Tuesday, the government ordered the release of another former Chief Minister Mehbooba Mufti after a 14-month detention and she and other leaders promptly called for a campaign to restore Indian-administered Kashmir's special rights. Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi's government revoked the Muslim-majority region's special status last year, cracked down on opposition and rounded up hundreds of people to forestall protests.

UNHCR's Rohingya fund half a billion dollars short

FOREIGN DESK

NEW YORK: Less than half the $1bn in aid meant for Rohingya refugees in Bangladesh this year has been raised and the lack of money has made it difficult for them to provide the food, basic healthcare and other support the Rohingya need, the UN refugee agency or UNHCR said on Thursday as it announced plans for a large donor conference next week. The online event will take place on October 22 in an effort to close a "significant funding gap", the UNHCR said. "Solidarity with the Rohingya people means more than just meeting their basic needs," Filippo Grandi, the UN high commissioner for Refugees, said in a statement. "Refugees, like everyone else, have a right to a life of dignity and the chance to build a safe and stable future."

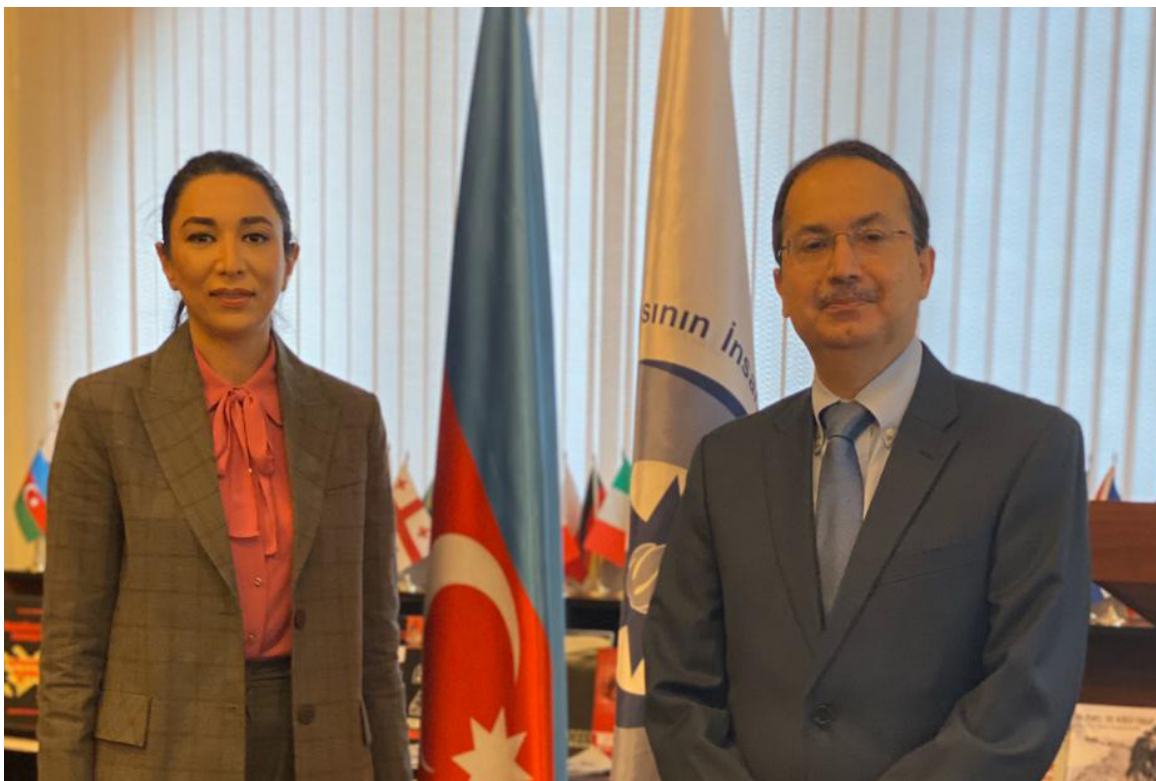

European powers condemn Israel's settlement approvals

FOREIGN DESK

LONDON: European powers on Friday condemned Israel's decision to approve thousands more settlements in occupied Palestinian territory, calling it a "counterproductive" move that undermines regional peace efforts. "The expansion of settlements violates international law and further imperils the viability of a two-state solution to bring about a just and lasting peace to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict," said a joint statement from the foreign ministers of Germany, France, the United Kingdom, Italy and Spain. "As we have emphasised directly with the government of Israel, this step furthermore undermines efforts to rebuild trust between the parties with a view to resuming dialogue," they said, urging an immediate halt in settlement construction. This week, Israel approved the construction of more than 3,000 settler homes across the occupied West Bank, ending an eight-month lull in settlement expansion. Under international law, settlements are considered illegal. Palestinian officials and much of the international community view them as the main obstacle to a viable two-state solution. The latest approvals raised the number of settlement homes to be advanced this year to more than 12,150, according to Peace Now, the settlement watchdog group. "These approvals make 2020 the highest year on record in terms of units in settlement plans promoted since Peace

Now began recording in 2012," the watchdog said in a statement. The European ministers said pushing ahead with more settlements would be a "counterproductive move in light of the positive developments of normalisation agreements reached between Israel, the United Arab Emirates and Bahrain". The UAE and Bahrain in mid-September set aside decades of enmity with Israel to sign a US-brokered deal to normalise ties. US Secretary of State Mike Pompeo also urged Saudi Arabia to recognise Israel, in what would be a strategic boost for the country. But Riyadh said the focus should remain on the Palestinian-Israeli peace talks before any formal rapprochement between Israel and Saudi Arabia.

International community urged to condemn Armenian attack on children

The ministry stressed that for almost three decades hundreds of thousands of children in Azerbaijan suffer from the ongoing aggression of Armenia and its long-lasting effects

BAKU: Azerbaijan Foreign Ministry calls the international community, the relevant international organizations to react publicly to the deliberate targeting by Armenia of children and educational facilities in Azerbaijan and take effective actions to stop the climate of impunity lasting for three decades. In the statement, ministry urges the international community to refrain from the actions, such as rendering political, financial and especially military support to Armenia which contributes to the grave violations committed by this country against the children in Azerbaijan. "Children represent the future. If the international community fails today its universal moral obligation to protect the future generation and provide them with safe haven, ignoring the decades-lasting plight and suffering of the whole generation, and failing to secure justice and rule of law which sow the seeds for conflicts to continue," the statement reads. The ministry stressed that for almost three decades hundreds of thousands of children in Azerbaijan suffer from the ongoing aggression of Armenia and its long-lasting effects. During this period, Armenia ignoring moral imperatives and legal responsibilities, deprived the Azerbaijani children of their inherent rights defined in the international documents, and their right to be brought up in the spirit of the ideals proclaimed in the United Nations Charter, in particular in the spirit of peace, dignity, equality and solidarity as described in the Convention on the Rights of the Child. Moreover, Armenia has been using acts of genocide as a means to instil fear and to terrorize the entire population and force them to flee. It was noted that only in Khojaly massacre 613 civilians of whom 63 were children were brutally killed and many were maimed by the armed forces of Armenia in 1992. The ministry underlined that 1 million Azerbaijanis, one third of whom are children were forcefully expelled and driven away from their homes in contrary to Article 49 of IV Geneva Convention. "For almost 15 years the larger part of the forcefully displaced children in Azerbaijan had to live in tent camps and villages consisting of luggage vans on railways which were subsequently abolished as a result of the tremendous efforts and budget resources allocated by the Government of Azerbaijan. The internally displaced children in Azerbaijan still cannot realize their right to voluntary return to their lands in safety and dignity despite the provisions of relevant documents, including the UN Security Council resolutions 822, 853, 874 and 884 adopted in 1993," the statement says. Furthermore, the ministry emphasized that the ongoing armed aggression of Armenia against Azerbaijan has inflicted serious damage upon the infrastructure for children in Azerbaijan, in contrary to the Article 50 of the IV Geneva Convention which provides that the occupying power shall facilitate the proper working of all institutions devoted to the care and education of children.

"Armenia which presents itself as one of the 'advocates' of the Safe Schools Declaration is responsible for total destruction of 1107 educational facilities and 855 kindergartens in the occupied territories of the Republic of Azerbaijan. As a result of the ethnic cleansing policy, all Azerbaijani schoolchildren and students have been expelled from their native lands. Tens of thousands of Azerbaijani children continue to realize their right to education under serious challenges stemming from their continued displacement. Many others along the line of confrontation attend their classes under the constant threat of being attacked by the indiscriminate bombing of the armed forces of Armenia," the statement reads.

Mexico minister arrested in US on 'drug charges'

FOREIGN DESK

NEW YORK: Former Mexican defence minister Salvador Cienfuegos has been arrested in the United States on undisclosed charges, Mexico's foreign minister said on Thursday. "The consul in Los Angeles will inform me of the charges in the next few hours. We will offer the consular assistance to which he is entitled," Foreign Minister Marcelo Ebrard wrote on Twitter. The Mexican investigative magazine Proceso, quoting unnamed sources at the US Department of Justice, reported that the arrest was the result of a long-standing investigation into corruption involving drug traffickers. Bolivia set to vote for president

LA PAZ: Bolivians will vote for a new president on Sunday and for the first time in two decades the name of Evo Morales will not be on the ballot paper. Yet not only does the shadow of the landlocked country's first ever indigenous president loom large over the poll, he is the reason it is taking place at all. Morales stood for, and won, an unconstitutional fourth term in a controversial election last year that sparked weeks of protests against his victory. An Organization of American States audit subsequently found clear evidence of fraud and Morales resigned before fleeing into exile. Now living in neighboring Argentina, he is barred from standing but his hand-picked successor as the Movement for Socialism (MAS) candidate, Luis Arce, leads opinion polls. According to analysts Eurasia Group, "polls point to a very close race with... Arce within reach of a first round victory." A Ciesmori poll released last week put Arce ahead with 30.7 percent of votes compared to his main challenger, the centrist former president Carlos Mesa with 24.7 percent. To win outright in the first round, Arce would need to poll 40 percent with a 10-point advantage over his nearest challenger. – APP

Thai premier refuses to resign, free protesters

FOREIGN DESK

BANGKOK: Thai prime minister on Friday rejected calls by pro-democracy protesters to resign and refused to release detained demonstrators as demanded by human rights groups, saying they had broken the law. "What did I do wrong? I am asking you," Prayut Chan-o-cha said at a news conference broadcast by local Voice TV. Thailand declared a state of emergency in Bangkok on Thursday as security forces cleared demonstrators from outside the prime minister's office. Prayut said that the Foreign Ministry would explain to diplomats that the state of emergency was imposed in Bangkok to restore stability in the country. "The government cannot allow lawlessness to continue," he said, blaming media for keeping eyes only on political conflicts while ignoring other issues. The former general, however, said he would not force media to report news according to the government's wishes. Earlier, police closed Bangkok's Ratchaprasong Intersection, where tens of thousands of protesters had gathered since Thursday. Thailand's six opposition parties opposed the government's decision to impose a state of emergency banning pro-democracy protests. "The Prime Minister must immediately cancel the state of emergency declaration as the move violates human rights," said a joint statement by the opposition parties.

Health Corridor, enrichment of CPEC: Chinese scholar

The construction of the China-Pakistan Health Corridor and the cooperation between China and Pakistan in the field of health can directly benefit the people's livelihood in Pakistan

DNA

BEIJING: China-Pakistan's ongoing efforts of building Health corridor will enrich CPEC for the well-being of the people of the two countries, said Chinese scholar Prof. Cheng Xizhong in an article published by China Economic Net on Friday. Recently, China and Pakistan agreed to make joint efforts to boost the China-Pakistan Health Corridor. China-Pakistan Health Corridor is a very good and wide-ranging concept. Initially, the two sides were devoted to the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC). Later, the economic corridor expanded to the cultural corridor and the tourism corridor. "Now we are talking about the China-Pakistan Health Corridor, and I believe there will be other corridors in the days to come. This shows that the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor is constantly enriching and developing. The construction of the China-Pakistan Health Corridor and the cooperation between China and Pakistan in the field of health can directly benefit the people's livelihood in Pakistan. This shows that the construction of the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor is becoming more and more pragmatic." Prof. Cheng noted that China and Pakistan have cooperated in the field of health for many years. As far back as 2006, the health authorities of China and Pakistan signed a cooperation document in the field of health, which stated that the two sides would strengthen cooperation in the fields of clinical training, traditional medicine, public health care, prevention of viral diseases, and surveillance of infectious diseases. "This year, the novel coronavirus pneumonia is unprecedentedly spreading worldwide. For joint prevention, control and treatment, the central governments, local governments, medical institutions, enterprises and non-governmental organizations of China and Pakistan have carried out close cooperation, which fully reflects the special friendly relationship between the two countries.

In building the China-Pakistan Health Corridor, I advocate giving full play to two initiatives: one is the initiative of the governments; the other is the initiative of medical institutions. In addition to the efforts by the two governments, the medical institutions of China and Pakistan should carry out close cooperation. Recently, Chinese and Pakistani enterprises decided that they will jointly establish a medical laboratory. The incidence rate of cancer in Pakistan is very high, especially in lung cancer and liver cancer. However, due to the current medical and health conditions in Pakistan, patients cannot get proper treatment.

As a result, the strategic agreement between China and Pakistan on precision medical laboratory for cancer was signed in Beijing last month.

According to the agreement, Beijing Anlong Gene Medicine Technology Company and Life Rehealth Technology Pakistan will jointly establish a cancer precision medical laboratory. Under this framework, Chinese and Pakistani enterprises will jointly carry out cancer medical research, and Chinese enterprises will share medical technology with their Pakistani partners. Another important content for the China-Pakistan Health Corridor is the development of medical tourism industry.
