Prime Minister says opposition leaders have never worked and their autocratic lifestyle is directly dependent on saving their families' ill-gotten wealth

ISLAMABAD: Prime Minister Imran Khan said on Sunday opposition's bid to hold public rallies was aimed at pressurizing the government to get National Reconciliation Ordinance (NRO) at the cost of people's lives in the times of COVID-19 pandemic.

In a series of tweets, he said the sole and desperate goal of opposition political leadership is to save their families' looted wealth and corruption for which they are making last ditch efforts to get an NRO, but they will not succeed.

The Prime Minister said opposition leaders have never worked and their autocratic lifestyle is directly dependent on saving their families' ill-gotten wealth through robbing and impoverishing the nation.

Imran Khan said the problem of people of Pakistan during COVID 19 is the political leadership that has never gone through any democratic struggle nor worked with ordinary citizens to understand their difficulties they face and never contributed in any substantive way for betterment of ordinary citizens. Imran Khan said these entitled "leaders" living like royalty in their secluded mansions, have simply inherited their positions because of their families and they have no concern for the lives of ordinary citizens. The Prime Minister said when smart lockdown was imposed to save people from becoming destitute and save economy from total collapse, these "leaders" opposed it and demanded complete lockdown and now when smart lockdown is again needed to check new spike of the pandemic, they want to hold public rallies instead of caring for the lives and safety of people.

Pak support for Palestine cause laudable: Ambassador Ameen

On twenty-ninth of November every year, the free people of the world celebrate the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, which was declared by the United Nations General Assembly in 1977

ANSAR M BHATTI

ISLAMABAD: On twenty-ninth of November every year, the free people of the world celebrate the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, which was declared by the United Nations General Assembly in 1977, solidarity with the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people to freedom and self-determination, and to establish their independent state on their national soil, with Jerusalem as its capital.

Ambassador of Palestine to Pakistan Ahmed Ameen said in a statement. The ambassador further said, this day reflects the adherence of the vast majority of countries in the world to the values of International justice and the need to achieve security and peace in the region.

Justice requires that the Palestinian people be empowered to determine their own destiny like other peoples, and to enable them to attain their national aspirations and goals in building a free, sovereign and viable state and to end the Israeli military occupation and the Zionist settlements as well, especially in the city of Jerusalem, which is witnessing the fiercest settlement building aimed at uprooting the Palestinian existence from the holy city.

He added, on the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, our people are still under direct Israeli occupation and are subjected to an abominable racial discrimination regime, in which our people suffer from repeated violations of the Israeli occupation forces and the settler flocks who target the Palestinian people, their land, sky, air, capabilities and natural wealth.

On the International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People, two-thirds of which are still suffering from a refugee status since 1948, they live in camps in the neighboring countries clinging to the right to return to their villages and cities from which they were forced out, and are still awaiting the implementation of United Nations resolutions, especially Resolution 194, which stipulated their return to their homes. The resolution has emphasized to compensate Palestinian refugees as well. Despite everything, the Palestinian people are still clinging to their national identity and resisting Israeli plots to eliminate our culture and heritage. Palestinians have been living in the land of Palestine for thousands of years while struggling to maintain their identity and integrity guaranteed first by their massive sacrifices in the course. The modern history of Palestine, which has been represented by hundreds of thousands of martyrs, wounded and prisoners, as well as the UN resolutions in its various organizations and branches have also guaranteed them, and also included the obligations that the occupying power tries to evade from by establishing alternative paths and by disavowing their commitments and by practicing the most severe violations against the Palestinian people. Ambassador Ameen said a just solution to the Palestinian issue requires an end to the new apartheid regime imposed by the Israeli occupation force and an end to its occupation of the Palestinian land that has continued since June 5, 1967, including Jerusalem, which is also a prelude to resolving all crises in the region, and an entry point for the Palestinian people to restore their pioneering civilization role in building The values of the humanitarian system that the peoples of the world seek, on their land and in their independent and sovereign state on the 1967 borders with East Jerusalem as its capital. On behalf of the State of Palestine and the Palestinian people, the ambassador saluted the brotherly people of Pakistan for their sympathy and support, appreciates the solidarity statements of the honorable President, Government, Parliament and all Political Parties. The Embassy highly evaluates our historical relations with Pakistan for the last 8 decades, we are proud of Pakistan's friendship and we feel stronger with it's support on official and public levels, institutions and bodies that express on daily basis their solidarity with the Palestinian people and their rights. The Palestinian embassy in Pakistan appreciates the historical Pakistani fraternal stances in supporting the Palestinian people to obtain their rights, he added. Asian elephant Kaavan leaves for Cambodia

For decades, the world's loneliest elephant has entertained crowds from his small, barren patch of land in a Pakistani zoo

DNA

ISLAMABAD: The Asian elephant 'Kavaan' here on Sunday left for Cambodian sanctuary where the animal would spend his remaining life in a healthy and happy environment. In his brief address, Special Assistant to the Prime Minister on Climate Change (SAPM) Malik Amin Aslam, who was chief guest on the occasion, said the next phase of Kavaan's life has started today. He said the reception committee would be ready at the Cambodian airport to receive Kavaan. He said Russian chartered plane would take Kavaan to Cambodia. Initially 10 acre area would be given to Kavaan where the animal could see the other elephants.

He said, "We would make this open enclosure zoo cum sanctuary and would provide world class facilities." Minister further said that it was a new day as Kavaan's loneliness nearing to an end. It's a herd animal cannot live alone however all the arrangements were finalized. Kavaan had been a centre of attraction among children for last 35 years.

For decades, the world's loneliest elephant has entertained crowds from his small, barren patch of land in a Pakistani zoo. The visitors would call for more as he saluted them, prompted by handlers who poked him with nailed bull horns to make him perform for the money which lined their pockets. Around him, animals disappeared from their enlosures, rumoured to be bound for the plates of the wealthy, while his only companion died, allegedly of sepsis brought on by those bull-hook nails digging deep into her skin. And for years, it seemed that no one cared about the elephant's lonely fate. His wounds became infected and the chains around his legs slowly left permanent scars. He drifted slowly into psychosis and obesity. But yesterday, the world's loneliest elephant finally left behind his desolate enclosure for a new life on the other side of the continent, thanks to the determination of a coalition of determined volunteers and, somewhat unexpectedly, the American pop icon Cher. This is the story of Kaavan. It begins with a prayer and ends in a song.

Prime Minister's corporate farming initiative lauded

The business leader said that the remaining staff of the steel mills should also be terminated as the unit is closed since 2015 but employees are enjoying salaries and other perks resulting in a total loss of over Rs300 billion.

ISLAMABAD: Former President ICCI Shahid Rasheed Butt on Sunday lauded the decision of the Prime Minister Imran Khan to introduce corporate farming which will improve the food security situation in the country. The move may attract huge investment which will improve the struggling agriculture sector and provide edibles to masses at a reasonable price, he said. Shahid Rasheed Butt also lauded the move of the government to downsize state-run enterprises wasting trillions of rupees annually. Around 4500 employees of the Pakistan Steel Mills have been terminated which will reduce salary burden by 50 percent to Rs170 million, he said. The business leader said that the remaining staff of the steel mills should also be terminated as the unit is closed since 2015 but employees are enjoying salaries and other perks resulting in a total loss of over Rs300 billion. He said that retrenchment should also be initiated in Railways which has wasted hundreds of billions of rupees while there are 14500 employees in the PIA causing colossal losses therefore almost half of the staff should be shown the door without any delay. Shahid Rasheed Butt said that these institutions are waiting trillions and the government has to get hefty loans on harsh conditions to keep them alive artificially which is not sustainable. He called upon the opposition to avoid making economising in failed institutions an issue while the government should declare trade unions illegal if they start an agitation. The government should limit the working hours in commercial centres following the steps of developed nations which will save electricity worth billions, he demanded. - DNA

Residents demand more burial places

ISLAMABAD: With a massive surge in the federal capital population during last two decades, the residents of urban areas are running out of the burial places, opting to go to the neighboring boroughs for burying their loved ones. Stressing the need for more facilities in urban Islamabad, they expressed dismay over slackness of the Capital Development Authority (CDA) which could not set up a new graveyard in the capital city during the recent past. "We need more burial places in Islamabad's urban areas as various communities lacking dedicated graveyards in their localities have resorted to use green belts along the Islamabad Expressway especially near Iqbal Town and Sohan to bury their near and dear ones," local Member of National Assembly (MNA) Raja Khurram Nawaz told APP. He said exponential growth of population and mushrooming housing societies in the capital city had increased the demand of more burial places. Exhorting the CDA to only issue No Objection Certificates (NOCs) and Layout Plans (LoPs) to those housing societies which ensured allocation of graveyards, schools and parks as per the law, he said "The non-availability of facility in various areas was the major issue that we were told during the electioneering of last general election." - APP

UNAIDS, UNFPA report shows declines in new HIV infections

"This year is a milestone for taking stock of a decade of progress towards ending AIDS by 2030. Sadly, the world has come up short against the commitments made to drastically reduce new HIV infections

ISLAMABAD: The latest progress report of the Global HIV Prevention Coalition shows declines in new HIV infections among adults in several countries. Overall progress in HIV prevention efforts remains variable and is too slow to reach the 2020 targets committed to at the 2016 United Nations High-Level Meeting on Ending AIDS, said a press release issued here. "We can't end AIDS if year after year people continue to become newly infected with HIV," said Winnie Byanyima, Executive Director of UNAIDS. "This year is a milestone for taking stock of a decade of progress towards ending AIDS by 2030. Sadly, the world has come up short against the commitments made to drastically reduce new HIV infections."

In 2016, United Nations Member States committed to reach a world-wide HIV prevention target of fewer than 500,000 new HIV infections among adults by 2020, a 75% reduction from 2010. By the end of 2019, the reduction was just 23%, with 1.7 million people becoming infected with HIV last year. Launched in 2017, the Global HIV Prevention Coalition aims to bring fresh momentum and clarity to HIV prevention programmes in 28 focus countries—the 28 countries worldwide with the greatest burden of new HIV infections. The 28 coalition countries have identified and promoted priority programme approaches and interventions, rekindled political commitment for HIV prevention and guided and supported programme implementation.

Progress in reducing new HIV infections in coalition countries is varied. In Eswatini, for example, new HIV infections declined by 64% between 2010 and 2019. In Pakistan, on the other hand, there was a 74% increase. But in 26 coalition countries new HIV infections declined. The report notes that there has been significant progress in implementing 10 strategic actions set out in the Global HIV Prevention 2020 Road Map, but a number of countries still have difficulties in changing underlying factors that hold back effective HIV prevention programmes, including shortfalls in financing, insufficient action on addressing the obstructive legal, policy and structural barriers that hinder programmes for key and vulnerable populations and the slow adoption of guidance on social contracting. "To drastically reduce new HIV infections, we have to bridge the gaps and dismantle barriers that deny adolescent girls, young women and key populations access to quality, respectful sexual and reproductive health services. It's time to end, once and for all, all forms of stigma, discrimination and marginalization that stand in their way," said Natalia Kanem, Executive Director of the United Nations Population Fund. The COVID-19 pandemic is an additional challenge to maintaining progress in HIV prevention this year. Of particular concern are disruptions in HIV prevention services such as voluntary medical male circumcision, interrupted access to prevention commodities, including safe injection supplies, the effects of lockdowns on educational and social support services and the interplay between economic downturns and heightened HIV risk behaviours and vulnerability. This year's report therefore begins to document adaptations that countries are taking to mitigate the potential effects of the COVID-19 pandemic. The progress report was launched at a virtual meeting of ministers of health from Global HIV Prevention Coalition focus countries at which members took stock of the progress to date, with the aim of charting a way forward for the next five years on the road to ending AIDS by 2030. - APP

Murad Saeed blasts frustrated opposition

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Federal Minister for Communications and Postal Services Murad Saeed Sunday said Pakistan Democratic Movement (PDM) leadership was frustrated after defeat in Gilgit-Baltistan elections and failure of their public rally in Peshawar. Addressing a press conference here, the minister criticised the duplicity of opposition and said that those who were advocating complete lockdown during the first wave of coronavirus were now organizing public rallies in defiance of NCOC directives. Murad Saeed said the masses have rejected the PDM as they knew fully well that when in power, the PPP and PML-N did nothing for their welfare, rather they stuffed their own coffers with ill gotten money and now the aim of so called protest movement was to get concessions from the government. He urged the opposition to stop the cruel joke with the lives of the poor people and postpone their political rallies in the larger national interest. He said the opposition had no interest in protection of people's lives or revival of economy as they wanted to do politics on these both issues. He said Pakistan succeeded to defeat the first wave of coronavirus due to effective strategy of Prime Minister Imran Khan. He said big economies and modern health infrastructures collapsed in the world but Pakistan government with the cooperation of masses and efforts of doctors and para medical staff successfully protected lives and livelihood of the people. He reminded the opposition parties that they had ruled the country for four decades but failed to improve health care facilities and left the economy in a shambles. He said instead of feeling ashamed for their failures, they had tried to blame the PTI government for poor economy and frail health infrastructure. He said that entire world had appreciated Pakistan Prime Minister Imran Khan for effective handling of coronavirus pandemic by taking timely decisions and introducing the concept of smart lock down but the opposition had no moral courage to acknowledge this fact. He said the opposition wanted to protect themselves from corona but endanger lives of the masses by holding public rallies. He said the participants of an event at Bilawal House were asked to show certificate of having no coronavirus. Similarly almost all members of Sharif family including Nawaz Sharif, his sons Hussain and Hassan, his son in law, Shahbaz Sharif's son Salman and Ishaq Dar were in London but they were hellbent to play with the lives of poor people by organizing public meetings. Moreover, he said that PPP and PML-N had imposed lock down in Sindh and Azad Jammu and Kashmir respectively but in the areas not ruled by them, they were endangering people's lives by organizing public meetings which was criminal.

A digital parliament

AS the pandemic enters its first year, it becomes evident that institutions cannot shut down or things cannot be halted temporarily. Instead, the infrastructure needs to be adjusted to the pandemic—daily workings, patterns and perhaps the way we have been doing things for decades have to be changed in order to make the lockdowns work in an efficient way. Herein lies the conundrum of parliament. Parliament cannot shut down for obvious reasons—in order to counter the pandemic, legislators need to meet in session and pass laws and deliberate bills. Yet with an increasing number of parliamentarians testing positive for the virus, most recently PPP Chief Bilawal Bhutto-Zardari, the old system of gathering in the National Assembly in Islamabad will not work for the time being. This is where technology must be used in order to make our democracy work. A special fund of Rs6 million has been earmarked by National Assembly Secretariat to ensure virtual meetings so that parliament sessions can be held despite the crisis. Training of sitting MNAs will be part of the programme. All the bills, agenda, publications will be available on a digital system, with the lawmakers given special access through laptops. This was a long time coming and it is hoped that the programme is installed timely. Countries across the world have put in place mechanisms for video conferences for parliament. The use of technology would not only improve the performance of the government departments but also ensure transparency in public services because it leads to better monitoring and registration of details. While a lot of this hefty fund should go towards equipment and infrastructure, there must also be an emphasis on the training of parliamentarians. Our digital policies have reflected that a large number of officials in government are still not up to date when it comes to using technology—considering its enormous place in the world and politics, this is negligence and parliamentarians regardless need training to operate in a digital workspace.

The future of academic research

MUHAMMAD OMAR IFTIKHAR

A PIECE of recent news mentions about 81 Pakistani academics who have become part of the two percent scientists. The list has been compiled by Stanford University in the USA. It has names of 159683 people from across the world from all scientific disciplines. These academicians and researchers were added to the list based on an international evaluation of their research papers. Moreover, their selection was made on a career-long citation impact until 2019. Included in this list are eleven teachers from the Quaid-e-Azam University (QAU) Islamabad and five scientists from the University of Haripur. This milestone achievement shows that Pakistanis do have the ability to make a difference and pursue tasks requiring cognitive skills. The challenge here is to create a ripple effect where the same passion to learn and grow is directed and imparted among people from all social strata. These scientists can publish the summary of their research in easy-to-understand language on social media and print publications. It will be helping those who are directly or indirectly associated with such professions to which the research is related. Translating such research in Urdu and other regional languages will be useful in its swift dissemination. Fortunately, 2% of Pakistanis are a part of such a distinguished list. However, it is the duty of these 2% Pakistanis to share their findings to help others understand their work and learn something new. The education sector of Pakistan, apart from the need for restructuring, requires a change in its syllabus. It needs to impart practical learning among students who can question and broaden their mental horizon. Such scientists can add value to the content and syllabus by adding such information that is relevant, pertinent, and useful for the careers and professional learning of the students. The concerned authorities must make such strategies so the students and professionals can benefit from the learning of such academicians, scientists, and researchers who make Pakistan proud.

Gratifying results have been achieved which can be described as "making friends in the four corners of the earth and finding kith and kin across the oceans". IDCPC's main missions are to carry out theoretical, strategic, comprehensive and policy oriented studies on international situation, world political parties, socialist movement, contemporary capitalism and other important global issues; to coordinate the research efforts within the Department and conduct academic exchanges and cooperation with outside institutions; to hold press conference and publicity activities over the Party's international work. The office has a professional team with a broad scope of research areas and appropriately structured expertise background. IDCPC through eight (8) Bureaus looking after relations and exchanges with political parties and organizations across the globe, while IDCPC Information Center is commissioned to collect and analyze information on international issues and political parties in the world. As the International Department is a functional organ of the Central Committee of the CPC responsible for the Party's international work. By party-to-party relations and the advantage of political party contacts, IDCPC have played a very positive role in establishing, developing and consolidating China's relations with foreign countries. The IDCPC, for decades, coordinated with China's foreign diplomacy. They have a unique role in facilitating the progress of healthy and stable state-to-state relations when political instability and frequent change of governments happen in some countries. As an "accelerator," party-to-party relations have facilitated the progress of state relations. Party-to-party relations cover both the party in office and the party not in power, established or up and coming people. CPC's international relations have elevated CPC's governing ability. As a party in power, with over 70 million members and leading a country of 1.3 billion people, the CPC is facing, among other tasks, a mission how to keep shoulder to shoulder with the changing international and domestic situations, and how to improve its leading and governing abilities. IDCPC also plays its vital role during COVID 19 by providing in shortest time coronavirus testing kits to friendly countries across the globe, sent plane loads of ventilators, masks and medicines. The Chinese President, Xi Jinping, who is also Secretary-General of CPC has offered comforting words to global leaders like telling the Spanish prime minister, Pedro Sánchez, that "sunshine comes after the storm". As the coronavirus outbreak spreads and countries struggle to respond, China has positioned itself as a leader and benefactor in public health, building the kind of soft power Beijing needs at a time of intensifying US-China rivalry and scrutiny of Chinese influence around the world. In Pakistan, IDCPC also provided complimentary COVID 19 protection masks and necessary equipments like body suits PPEs to all Political Parties, NGOs. In this connection the role of Mr. Bayazeed Kasi -PTT's advisor on cooperation with CPC with active coordination of IDCPC is highly appreciated. No doubt, this is the fact that the International Department has so far delivered much of what is expected of it. Its brand of party-based diplomacy has assumed a prominence that is unseen in any other countries' diplomatic practices. Under President Xi Jinping leadership party-based diplomacy has indeed grown to be an important tool of China's diplomacy. Moreover, Xi is also emphasizing how party based diplomacy can play a key role in explaining China's policies and promoting China's image and soft power to foreign elites. This unique practice of party-based diplomacy has perhaps given China the advantage to cultivate friendships and elite networks of all sorts. Looking forward, while much of what has been discussed in these lines about party-based diplomacy will continue under the leadership of Xi Jinping, there could also be another growing role for the International Department in the future. This is the training of foreign party cadres, especially in developing countries. Xi is increasingly becoming more confident in promoting the developmental experiences of China to the developing world and in offering the so-called 'China solutions' to complex problems in the world. The growing and diversifying mandate of party-based diplomacy will ensure that the International Department continues to be a critical actor in Chinese foreign policy.

Sustainable tourism

T OURISM is one of the most incredible socio-economic phenomena of the twentieth century. It singly started from an action "enjoyed by only a small group of relatively well-off people" during the first half of the last century, it gradually became a mass popular during the post- World War II, particularly from the 1970s and onwards. It now reaches wider scale and larger numbers of people throughout the world and is a source of employment for a significant segment of the labor force. Tourism can contribute as the major service sector in a country as well as in the globe as a whole. Furthermore, in this sector there is ample scope for cultural exchange, views and philosophy, in this regard it may contribute to peace through improved cross-cultural understanding. Rather than export earnings, international tourism also generates an increasingly significant share of government tax revenues throughout the world. In addition, the development of tourism as a whole is usually accompanied by considerable investments in infrastructure, such as airports, roads, water, sewerage facilities, telecommunications and other public utilities. Such improvements not only generate benefits to tourists but can also contribute to the local area and thus be crucial to regional economic development. Moreover, tourism provides a substantial amount of jobs for women and unskilled workers, tourism can appreciably contribute to empowering women and lighten poverty. Even so, it is now generally accepted that tourism can make an imperative role to employment, export receipts and national income in most countries and regions. Furthermore, tourism is often identified as the most promising driving force for economic development of under developed countries and regions endowed with areas of natural beauty because it offers them a valuable opportunity for economic diversification. Likewise, if it goes uncontrolled it can be a threat for natural resources, including fresh water, marine resources, endanger species, and forests. Since, tourism can also lead to the indiscriminate clearance of native vegetation for the development of new facilities, increased demand for fuel wood and even forest fires. In many countries, coastlines are becoming overbuilt due to tourism development until the damage caused by environmental degradation – and the eventual loss of revenues arising from a collapse in tourism arrivals – becomes irreversible. As intensive tourism development and recreational activities in coastal areas can not only lead to beach destruction and coastal degradation but can also threaten coral reefs and other marine ecosystems. Other major problems arising from tourist activities in mountain regions include disruption of animal migration by road and tourist facilities, sewage pollution of rivers, excessive water withdrawals from streams to supply resorts and accumulation of solid waste on trails. Here the solution could be offered by the government through making environmental policies, management measures and technologies that can surely reduce these negative impacts by proposing the foundation of sustainability in tourism, that is commonly known as ecotourism. Since only Sustainable tourism can take care about the environment through ecological development by attempting to make as low impact on the environment and local culture as possible, while helping to generate future employment for local people, with the aim to ensure that development brings a positive experience for local people, tourism companies and the tourists themselves. Moreover, it facilitates in protection of natural and heritage assets.

exhibition bout ends in draw

Fifteen years after retiring with a 2005 loss to journeyman Kevin McBride, Tyson made his comeback at Staples Center in Los Angeles without spectators in a pay-per-view matchup that mixed curiosity and nostalgia

SPORTS DESK

LOS ANGELES: Legendary boxers and quinquagenarians Mike Tyson and Roy Jones Jr fought out a draw on their return to the ring in an eight-round exhibition. Fifteen years after retiring with a 2005 loss to journeyman Kevin McBride, Tyson made his comeback at Staples Center in Los Angeles without spectators in a pay-per-view matchup that mixed curiosity and nostalgia. California State Athletic Commission officials required two-minute rounds instead of the usual three-minute rounds, mandated larger than normal 12-ounce gloves, said neither fighter could seek a knockout and declared there could be no official winner in safety moves for the over-50 fighters. "Sometimes that two minutes felt like three minutes," Tyson said. "I'm glad I got this under my belt and I'm looking forward to doing it again." An "unofficial" panel of former World Boxing Council champions at ringside scored the bout a draw, an outcome that Tyson applauded despite appearing to dominate. "I'm good with that," Tyson said, admitting he thought he had won the fight. "Yeah, but I'm good with a draw. The crowd was happy with that." Jones, who looked tired and grabbed Tyson much of the fight, was unhappy at a draw. "I ain't never happy with a draw. I don't do draw,"

Jones said, admitting that Tyson hurt him throughout the bout, particularly with body blows. "If he hits you with his head, punches, body shots, it don't matter, everything hurts. Body shots definitely took a toll. Body shots are what makes you exhausted." Tyson, who entered 50-with 44 knockouts, lost 100 pounds and began training again, his desire to get back in shape becoming a hunger to strap on the gloves once more. Jones, who entered 66-9 with 47 knockouts, had not fought since a February 2018 cruiserweight victory. He hoped a solid effort against Tyson might set up a fight with 45-year-old Brazilian mixed martial arts star Anderson Silva. "It's going to hurt," Tyson came out aggressive and fast, swinging and connecting often to the body of Jones, who was able to hit and evade at times, then hugging Tyson often when all else failed. "You came back. I hit you with good shots and you took it," Tyson told Jones. "We have to do this again." A hard left to the head stung Jones in round two and he spent much of the third and fourth rounds holding and moving into clinches with Tyson. "It's something in there taking punches from Mike," Jones said. "Once I go in there, I'm game. I'll go to the end. I know when he hits me it's going to hurt."

Tyson landed an inside right and a hard left to the head of Jones in the fifth round, then connected to the body with a solid right and left in the sixth, Jones evading a right uppercut and tying up Tyson before he could land major combinations. Tyson stung the midsection of Jones in round seven but was held before he could press the advantage. In the eighth and final round, Tyson pounded a pair of left hooks to the body but Jones tied him up and they finished trading inside punches. "I was very happy to go the eight rounds," Tyson said. "I'm more happy with going the distance." "I was afraid I might get hurt. Why is nobody worried about my ass? I haven't done this in 15 years."

BAKU: Representatives of diplomatic corps accredited in Azerbaijan, including heads of representations of international organizations in the country visited the liberated from Armenian occupation the city of Aghdam. The visit was aimed at familiarizing foreign diplomats with the atrocities and scenes of crimes committed by the Armenian armed forces in the city. The diplomats were accompanied by the Azerbaijani presidential aide Hikmat Hajiyev and other officials. The diplomats familiarized themselves with severe consequences of Armenian war crimes committed in the city. They witnessed the atrocities and vandalism committed by the Armenians in Aghdam city for 27 years. They were informed that Armenians savagely destroyed residential settlements, cemeteries, historical and cultural monuments in Aghdam. Before Aghdam, foreign diplomats and Azerbaijani officials accompanying them visited Tartar, which had suffered from huge destructions as a result of the Armenian missile attacks. Earlier Hajiyev said that a missile fired to Tartar by the Armenian armed forces in late October had been delivered to a local museum. "Smerch missile fired to Tartar on October 29 was taken from private house and delivered to the museum of the local mayor's office," Hajiyev wrote in his Twitter account on November 28. In another tweet, the presidential aide said: "Shikharkh settlement of Tartar region. During the 44-day war Armenia intensively shelled this settlement constructed for IDPs in an indiscriminate manner. Diplomatic corps have witnessed consequences of Armenia's brutal rocket and artillery attacks."

LAHORE: Star cricketer and Pakistan's all-format captain Babar Azam has been accused of sexual abuse, violence and financial fraud by a woman from Lahore that claims to be his former girlfriend and classmate. Speaking at a press conference in Lahore on Saturday, the woman, identified as Hamiza, claimed that she was Azam's neighbour and old school mate, adding that the young cricketer tricked her into love and marriage. "When I asked him to marry me, he tortured me," she said. Hamiza said that she had financially supported Azam when he was struggling with his career, adding that she spent millions of rupees on him. "When I called the Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) to lodge a complaint, they said that it was a personal matter," she continued. According to Jang, when questioned about the allegations, PCB's Director of Media and Communications Samiul Hassan said that this was Babar's private matter and the Board could not comment on it. During Saturday's press conference, the woman's lawyer said that an FIR had been lodged with the Capital City Police Officer (CCPO) Lahore regarding the matter but no action was taken. Hamiza's petition is now pending at the Sessions Court, which is scheduled for a hearing on December 4. The sexual harassment case will be heard on December 5. Babar Azam, who is in New Zealand for a three-match T20I series and a two-match Test series, could not be reached for a comment on the matter. It is pertinent to mention here that another Pakistan star, Shoaib Malik, had faced a similar scandal prior to his wedding to Indian tennis player Sania Mirza a decade or so ago.

The players played football in the ground and lifted their championship trophy in a symbolic victory. Qarabag won the 2020 Azerbaijani Premier League title in June. The team also paid their respects to Allahverdi Bagirov, a national hero of Azerbaijan and one of the founders of the football club, who is buried in a graveyard in the town. Bagirov was killed by an anti-tank mine during his return to Aghdam in 1992. The Aghdam district was occupied in 1993. Some 70,000 people were since displaced and resettled in the nearby Azerbaijani provinces of Tartar and Barda. On Nov. 20, Azerbaijani forces liberated Aghdam. Fresh border clashes erupted between Azerbaijan and Armenia on Sept. 27 resulting in civilian casualties. After over six weeks, a Russia-brokered truce was reached. The truce is seen as a victory for Azerbaijan, and a defeat for Armenia. During this period, Baku liberated several cities and nearly 300 settlements and villages from the Armenian occupation.

'Ties with

of Muslims'

FOREIGN DESK

TEHRAN: Iran has denounced the normalization of ties between certain member states of the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) and Israel as "a betrayal of Muslims" and a violation of the 57-nation body's principles. Iranian Foreign Ministry Director General for International Peace and Security Reza Najafi made the remarks at the 47th session of the OIC's Council of Foreign Ministers in Niger's capital, Niamey, on Saturday. Najafi expressed serious concerns about a decision by certain OIC countries to forge formal diplomatic relations with Tel Aviv, saying, "Any interaction with the fake and illegal Zionist regime, whose life involves 60 years of crime, murder, torture and displacement of thousands of Palestinians, is considered a betrayal of Muslims and a violation of the fundamental principles of the OIC and will deal a serious blow to the unity of the organization's member states and the Muslim Ummah." "A few members of the organization betrayed the Muslim Ummah by revealing their secret relations with the Zionist regime," he added. Najafi further urged the international community to strengthen efforts towards upholding the Palestinians' inalienable rights to return to their homeland and establish an independent state in the occupied territories, with East Jerusalem al-Quds as its capital.

4 Azerbaijani civilians killed in mine explosion

FOREIGN DESK

BAKU: Four Azerbaijani civilians lost their lives after a mine laid by Armenian forces exploded, state authorities said Saturday. The explosion occurred when a vehicle carrying the civilians came in contact with the landmine in the village of Ashagi Seyidahmedli of Fuzuli province, the Chief Prosecutor's Office said. The province was recently liberated by the Azerbaijani army from nearly three-decades of Armenian occupation. While retreating from the occupied territories, the Armenian forces laid mines to target the civilians, prosecutors said in a statement. They also asked the public to not enter the liberated areas without a special permit. Relations between the former Soviet republics of Azerbaijan and Armenia have been tense since 1991 when the Armenian military occupied Nagorno-Karabakh, also known as Upper Karabakh, a territory recognized as part of Azerbaijan, and seven adjacent regions. New clashes erupted on Sept. 27 and ended with a Russian-brokered truce six weeks later. Baku liberated several strategic cities, and nearly 300 of its settlements and villages from the Armenian occupation during this time.

Canada bans mass exports of prescription drugs

FOREIGN DESK

OTTAWA: Canada has banned the export of some prescription medicines in order to prevent a shortage in the country. The decision is in response to a US plan that would allow for drugs to be imported from Canada to make them cheaper for Americans. Although prescription drug prices in Canada are higher than some nations, they are cheaper than the US. A number of Canada's drug suppliers had warned that the plan, implemented by President Trump, would cause shortages. The pandemic has already increased demands for some medicines, according to the media. A statement from Canada's health ministry said the country sources 68% of its drugs from overseas and therefore it was important to avoid any disruptions to supplies. "Companies will now also be required to provide information to assess existing or potential shortages when requested, and within 24 hours if there is a serious or imminent health risk," the statement said.

'Biden administration will be a bigger problem for China'

I think the Chinese are more concerned with a Biden administration than a Trump administration," said O'Neill, a former chief economist at Goldman Sachs and now president of Chatham House, suggesting that Biden's team "has stronger philosophical beliefs." in key issues

LONDON: Joe Biden's presidency will be a bigger problem for the Chinese government than Donald Trump's nearly four-year presidency, economist Jim O'Neill, chairman of the British research institute Chatham House, told. Trump has taken a different approach to US-China relations by unilaterally imposing tariffs on Beijing. The US president has often criticized China on Twitter and sparked a trade war with China that has had a negative effect on the global economy. This policy differs greatly from the European approach, for example, which often negotiates trade disputes with China using traditional institutions such as the World Trade Organization (WTO) and the G20. President-elect Biden will also call for these agreements to be negotiated through multilateral institutions, which could mean more concrete action against China.

"I think the Chinese are more concerned with a Biden administration than a Trump administration," said O'Neill, a former chief economist at Goldman Sachs and now president of Chatham House, suggesting that Biden's team "has stronger philosophical beliefs." in key issues. "They (Biden's team) will use existing multinational forums to try to force China to meet the standards of such international forums, whether it's the WHO, the G20, the World Bank, and so on, and so on. Than this "style of negotiation so loved by Trump," he added. Chinese President Xi Jinping called Biden earlier this week to congratulate him on his election victory. According to media reports, Xi said he hopes the two countries will uphold the spirit of "non-conflict, non-confrontation, mutual respect" when managing their differences. One of the many points of tension between the US and China has been linked to climate change. Before the Trump presidency, Washington and Beijing often clashed over how to address high carbon dioxide levels. However, US climate ambitions have changed with Trump, and pressure on China to step up its emissions efforts has eased somewhat. Beijing also changed its position in September — just weeks after the US presidential vote — announced its goal of reducing carbon emissions to zero by 2060. "In a strange way, it might already force China to think a little differently," O'Neill said of the impact of the US election on China.

Belarus protesters take to the streets with new tactic

MINSK: Opposition protesters in Belarus took to the streets of capital Minsk on Sunday in the latest of three months of demonstrations against the re-election of strongman president Alexander Lukashenko. Since an August election, Belarus has been gripped by massive protests that erupted after Lukashenko, 66, secured a sixth term as president of the ex-Soviet republic. The opposition believes the election was rigged and political novice Svetlana Tikhonovskaya — who ran against Lukashenko in the place of her jailed husband — was the true winner of the polls. In recent weeks, authorities imposed an intense crackdown in which hundreds were detained and protesters were prevented from gathering in central Minsk. That prompted Lukashenko's opponents to change tactic, calling on supporters to create small gatherings in every district of the capital. Dmitry Golubev, a 20-year-old student, told AFP that he is rallying for "fair elections, Lukashenko's resignation and the release of political prisoners." "We are not evil people, not foreign agents (...), we are citizens of Belarus, who want peace, calm and respect for human rights in their country," Golubev said, holding a red and white flag — a symbol of the Belarus opposition. According to local media, some twenty rallies were recorded on Sunday across the city. "Large columns of people have assembled in all districts of Minsk, without exception. The Lukashenko police are desperately rushing from district to district," said opposition Telegram channel Nexta Live that has helped coordinate the ongoing demonstrations. As in previous weeks, several metro stations in the city centre were shut and mobile connection was limited. Riot police were deployed in large numbers, with the Tut.by news website reporting the use of stun grenades and tear gas. Human rights group Viasna said that more than 150 people have been taken into police custody as of 1400 GMT. "Everyone takes to the streets in their district and sees dozens, hundreds and thousands of supporters," Tikhonovskaya, 38, said in a video address posted on her Telegram channel on Saturday. — APP

Iran blames Israel for scientist's death

WEB DESK / DNA

TEHRAN: Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif says the recent assassination of a senior Iranian nuclear scientist bears the clear hallmark of atrocities committed by the Israeli regime, which has already murdered a number of Iran's scientific elites. The Iranian scientist, who headed the Defense Ministry's Organization of Defensive Innovation and Research, was targeted in a multi-pronged attack involving at least one explosion and machinegun fire by a number of assailants in Absard city of Tehran Province's Damavand County. The Atomic Energy Organization of Iran, the country's nuclear agency, has likewise suspected Israeli involvement in both the assassination and a July incident at Iran's Natanz nuclear facility. "It looks like the Zionist regime [of Israel] has a role in these issues," AEOI Spokesman Behrouz Kamalvandi said on Saturday. Zarif condemned the "cowardice" that characterizes the assassination as "an expression of the desperate war-mongering of its perpetrators." Brigadier General Hossein Dehqan, a military advisor to Leader of the Islamic Revolution Ayatollah Seyyed Ali Khamenei, issued similar comments earlier. The Israeli regime was seeking to "create an all-out war" in the dying political tenure of its "gambling ally (US President Donald Trump)" by risking escalation with the Islamic Republic, he said.

UK, France sign deal to curb refugee crossings

PARIS: The United Kingdom and France have signed a new agreement to try to stop the undocumented movement of people across the Channel, upping patrols and technology to close off a dangerous route refugees and migrants use in hopes of reaching the UK on small boats. UK Home Secretary Priti Patel said that, under the deal signed on Saturday, the number of officers patrolling French beaches would double and new equipment, including drones and radar, would be employed. "Thanks to more police patrols on French beaches and enhanced intelligence sharing between our security and law enforcement agencies, we are already seeing fewer migrants leaving French beaches," she said. Amnesty International called the agreement "profoundly disappointing".

10m Iraqi children back to school

WEB DESK

BAGHDAD: Iraqi schools have opened their doors to 10 million students for the first time since the country entered a COVID-19 lockdown in late February. Iraq's public schools are expected to operate six days a week, instead of five, in a bid to maintain physical distancing in what were once classrooms that could easily host more than 50 students. Elementary school pupils are set to attend class one day a week, while older students will be required to go twice a week. The rest of their learning will take place online. Mohammed, a young English teacher from the town of Karma in Anbar province, said both he and his students were excited to return to the classroom after eight months of online learning. "COVID-19 is a problem, but we will have the necessary preventions. There will be three metres [nine feet] between students," he said. But keeping excitable children in check can be a daunting task. "We are sure that they won't be careful, and won't wear their masks all the time," 38-year-old Imad Mohammed Farhan said of his two sons, aged 14 and 11. The father of three from Fallujah said he and his wife were "terrified" of their boys returning to school. But added: "They miss school so much."

'Killing of Fakhrizadeh a violation of human rights'

FOREIGN DESK

DOHA: Qatar has condemned Friday's assassination of Iranian nuclear physicist Mohsen Fakhrizadeh, calling it "a clear violation of human rights". Qatar's Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs Sheikh Mohammed bin Abdulrahman Al Thani expressed his condolences in a phone call with Iran's Minister of Foreign Affairs Mohammad Javad Zarif. Iranian media reported on Friday that Fakhrizadeh died in hospital after he was shot in his car in an ambush east of Tehran. Fakhrizadeh served as the head of the research and innovation organisation of Iran's defence ministry at the time of his death. The West has long suspected Fakhrizadeh of being the mastermind of Iranian efforts to develop nuclear weapons, but Iran denies he was involved in any such undertaking. Al Thani stressed that the scientist's murder "will only contribute to pouring more fuel on the fire at a time when the region and the international community are searching for ways to reduce tension and return to the table of dialogue and diplomacy", Qatar news agency (QNA) reported on Saturday. Al Thani "called for restraint," it said.

Police brutality protests turn violent in Paris

FOREIGN DESK

PARIS: Saturday marked a day of widespread protest in France as "The March of Freedoms" saw thousands decry police brutality and a new global security bill that favors protecting police above freedom of expression. The demonstration in Paris started at 2 p.m. (1300GMT) at the Place de la Republique and made its way toward the Place de la Bastille. What was a peaceful march for hours turned increasingly violent as the evening approached, with fires set in the afternoon to barricades and trash cans, and the facade of the Banque de France by nightfall, along with a kiosk, brasserie and several cars. Banners and signs were held by some proclaiming defiant messages against police: "Not see, not caught", "Carrying weapons is out of service", "France: Country of Rights of the Police" and "Police everywhere, justice nowhere." Probably the most pronounced sign of all: The word "Liberte" written in black on a white background encircled by a red noose. Police were present throughout the day yet brigades streamed in as the crowd grew more turbulent, to jeers and "boos" from demonstrators.

Pak support for Palestine will not waver: Munir

"It is travesty of justice that only the Jewish state came into being and the Palestinian people were condemned to immeasurable misery, suffering and grief — by making them stateless in their own land," the Pakistani envoy said

NEW YORK: Pakistan has renewed its firm support to the Palestinian people's right to self-determination and statehood, as the United Nations (UN) marked the annual International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People on Sunday. "Our support remains unwavering," Ambassador Munir Akram said in a message for the occasion. The International Day of Solidarity with the Palestinian People is observed each year on Nov 29. Established in 1977, it marks the day in 1947 when the UN General Assembly adopted a resolution partitioning Palestine into an Arab State and a Jewish State. "It is travesty of justice that only the Jewish state came into being and the Palestinian people were condemned to immeasurable misery, suffering and grief — by making them stateless in their own land," the Pakistani envoy said. Pakistan, he pointed out, has always remained a staunch supporter of Palestinian people. "Supporting Palestinian right to self-determination and calling for an early creation of a viable, contiguous, independent and sovereign Palestinian state, based on internationally agreed parameters — pre-1967 borders and Al Quds Al Sharif as its capital — has remained a cardinal pillar of Pakistan's foreign policy," Ambassador Akram said. "We will continue to impress upon the world that creation of a Palestinian state — on the grounds acceptable to the Palestinian people — remains the only abiding guarantee for peace in the Middle East and for the wider world." Every year, he said, Pakistan tables a resolution in the UN General Assembly's Third Committee on 'universal realization of right of peoples to self-determination. "Through this, and other initiatives, we show our resolve of fighting for all oppressed people who are waging legitimate struggles to earn their freedom."
