Government should immediately revoke SRO 237: Sardar Yasir

Sardar Yasir Ilyas Khan said that ICCI has been pursuing this matter almost for the last two years but still there was no positive response from the Government. He said that the inflation has gone beyond the means

DNA

ISLAMABAD: The importers of halal products in a meeting with Sardar Yasir Ilyas Khan, President Islamabad Chamber of Commerce & Industry have expressed their great concern on the issuance of SRO 237 by the Ministry of Commerce & Textile. They said that as per the said SRO importers will have to comply with the strict conditions while importing halal food products including ingredients and details of the products of the food products should be printed in Urdu and English language on the consumer packaging, the Logo of the halal certification body should be printed on the consumer packaging, and the labeling should not be in the form of a sticker, overprinting stamp or scratched labeling. The delegation said that the majority of the halal food products are small importers and it was not possible for them to comply with such strict conditions especially writing details of ingredients and products in Urdu and printing of Logo of Halal Certification body on the packaging. They said that most of the small importers buy halal food products from the wholesale markets around the globe as they don't have direct access to the produc-

ters that makes it extremely difficult for them to fulfill conditions that were mentioned in the said SRO. They said that import volume of halal products was normally very low and factories do not offer services of customized labelling in case of small orders. Sardar Yasir Ilyas Khan said that ICCI has been pursuing this matter almost for the last two years but still there was no positive response from the Government. He said that the inflation has gone beyond the means and it was not affordable for the consumers to buy imported Halal food products at high price. He said that it has also become difficult for the importers to continue their businesses with the current policy because in the present covid-19 situation business community has suffered huge financial losses. Sardar Yasir Ilyas urged the Ministry to consider the request for revoking the SRO 237 on immediate basis in order to avoid further closure of business or going them in default. He said that imposition of such conditions would make it difficult for the small importers of halal food products to comply with the condition of printing details of the products in Urdu language. He said that the government should ease out conditions and allow importers to paste information on the packing in Urdu in the form of stickers. He further said that Halal Certificate should be accepted and the condition of printing of Halal Logo on the consumer packaging should be removed. He said that such conditions which are being imposed through the said SRO would curtail the imports and also increase the price of imported halal food products.

'Engage Africa policy to enhance ties'

Manufacturing the vaccine

FOLLOWING the generous donation of 500,000 CanSino doses, the Covid-19 vaccine created by China, the federal government has announced its plan to produce it locally as well. While the intention is noble, skipping medicinal processes to avail a quick solution in the hopes of eradicating the pandemic is a recipe for disaster. The blatant risk associated with such an uninformed initiative is bound to risk the lives of many, as can be learnt from the recent fire at the manufacturing institute in India. As such, we must take another route all the while accepting that getting through this pandemic will require patience, caution and diligence.

All vaccines that have been created globally have gone through the typical process before they are approved for use and mass distribution. Ordinarily, extensive research into the mix of ingredients used, human clinical trials and quality assessments are carried out before the vaccine can be termed as a successful antidote to the virus. Furthermore, a brief period of observation follows which takes into account special considerations for the side effects of the vaccine or potential drawbacks, if any. If the vaccine clears all these steps, then only is it approved.

The reason why this is a tedious process is because the intention is to preserve the health and lives of the people and eliminate risks. To bypass this protocol to cater to the large domestic demand, in the hopes that the difficulties posed by the pandemic will evaporate immediately, is severely misguided. Risking the lives of the people, whether those receiving the vaccine or those producing it, is not acceptable. We should learn from the failures of our neighbour which experienced fatalities due to a lack of technical knowhow and experience in regards to the local production of vaccines. As a long-term objective, this is something that Pakistan must definitely hope to achieve. However, the way to reach that goal is not to embark upon hurried and rash projects that will result in the status quo getting worse. Instead, taking the more comprehensive course of action is advised.

The English-Urdu debate

MUHAMMAD OMAR IFTIKHAR

THE recent debate on social media about the importance of Urdu that was instigated following the viral video of two owners of a high-end restaurant defaming their manager brings various questions. The video clearly showed how the owners were making fun of their manager who could not speak English. Social media users instantly came forward to defend the manager and criticized the owners' behaviors. While the retaliation from the social media users was correct in its context, perhaps we responded because this is who we are. As a nation we do – consciously or subconsciously – value those who speak or know the English language.

We give value to those who wear Western attire and want to be associated with those who own a luxury car. This video that went viral across Pakistan in a matter of hours reflects our social consciousness. We intend to follow the Western culture. However, when one is following too much of it, then retaliation also occurs. A case in point is our female celebrities. When they share their pictures from foreign trips, they are seen wearing Western attire. The bashing against their choice of wardrobe begins on social media. Many cite they should not be wearing such skimpy clothing for they are Muslims and Pakistanis. However, we tend to watch Indian and American movies where it is a norm for female actors to wear such attire.

Following the owners' video that went viral, people began sharing the importance of speaking in Urdu and why the Urdu language must be preserved. A group of people even planned an Urdu mushaira in front of the restaurant. The problem here is the reaction to the video. Urdu is certainly important to us all. Its sanctity must be upheld and preserved every day. A viral video should not compel us to try to share the importance of the Urdu language. The same goes for all the regional languages of Pakistan that are dear to us and represent Pakistan's cultural dimensions.

Turkey's immaculate defense

Dr. Mehmood Ul Hassan Khan

The US-based publication the Defense News (2019-2020) focuses Turkish emerging strength in military production. During 2020-2021 the number of Turkish companies on the "Top 100 List" upgraded to seven from five. Turkey had launched four frigates in recent years. Turkey made a big investment in improving its naval defences in the last decade, increasing the number of warships and military vessels and relying on homegrown technology

DESPITE US sanctions on its national defense industry, Turkey is indeed marching towards achieving self-reliance in military production and modernization of its armed forces. The world-fame of its armed drones & UAVs (Azerbaijan-Armenia war, Syria, Libya, Kurds), prototype testing of armed helicopter engine, electronic warfare, modern submarines and tanks all showcase its "superiority" against its regional "competitors" and "enemies" too. Most recently, for the further strengthening of its National Defense System (NDS) Turkey's President Recep Tayyip Erdogan has launched the country's first indigenous frigate Istanbul (F-515) and pledged to take the country's navy to a very strong position with five major projects in the coming years.

Indigenous frigate is produced as part of the MILGEM project, a National Warship Program (NWP). According to the Turkish Presidency of Defense Industries (January 23, 2021), it was designed & developed with national resources, and over 75 percent of its systems are of indigenous manufacture. The 113 meter-long frigate would perform Advanced Air Defense (AAD) and Surface Warfare (SWs), Anti-Submarine Warfare (ASWs), and patrol activities. It is expected to be delivered to Turkey's Naval Forces Command in 2023.

While speaking to launching ceremony for the frigate and welding ceremony of the third ship under "Pakistan MILGEM" corvette project Turkish president Erdogan showcased his country's capabilities in diverse fields of military training, production and modernization due to which Turkey has been rated among the 10 countries that can design, build, and maintain its own warship in the world. It is indeed a great "strategic achievement" of brotherly country Turkey which has been debarred from purchasing modern electronic warfare system, ballistic missiles and fighter jets by the USA and the EU.

It has multiplier socio-economic, geopolitical and geostrategic effects. It will definitely, further strengthen its naval defense, professional and tactical preparedness against any external aggression in the days to come. It will also protect Turkish blue economy's commercial and business interests in the Mediterranean Sea, Black Sea and Arabian Sea in the future. Turkish more than 87 percent trade is carried out via maritime ports and a number of transnational pipelines passing through Turkey territorial waters which will be now protected through the country's enhanced naval capabilities. Along with the launch of the Istanbul frigate, the ceremony also marked the groundbreaking of the third ship to be constructed for the Pakistani navy under the MILGEM project. Turkish president Erdogan highlighted the "extraordinary" defense relations between the two countries. He termed bilateral ties as "historic" and "trustworthy" with desire to help each other in "defying" emerging geopolitical and geostrategic threats.

The Pakistan Navy inked an agreement with Turkey's Military Factory and Shipyard Management Corporation (ASFAT) in July 2018 to acquire four MILGEM-class ships.

The MILGEM project was initiated in 2000 to locally design and build a fleet of multipurpose corvettes and frigates that will replace older ships. Turkey has built four corvettes so far in line with the program, namely the TCG Heybeliada, the TCG Büyükkada, the TCG Burgazada and the TCG Kinaliada, while the fifth vessel, the first MILGEM I-class frigate of its kind, the Istanbul Frigate, was recently added to the inventory of the Turkish military with Saturday's ceremony.

The MILGEM project was launched to build corvettes and frigates to be used for a wide range of purposes, including reconnaissance, surveillance, early warning, anti-submarine warfare, surface-to-surface and surface-to-air warfare, and amphibious operations.

It will put into service six of its new submarines starting in 2022 with Piri Reis. Turkey is boasting significant skills in Submarine Technology (ST). It has already started its Stealth Submarine Project (unmanned) which will be completed within next two years. President also projected significance of Turkish drones and UAVs technologies and rated it best among the first three to four countries globally in terms of the production of unmanned and armed unmanned aerial vehicles. Furthermore he highlighted that Turkey will take Gokdeniz, the naval version of Korkut low-altitude air defence system into the inventory for the first time with Istanbul frigate. He outlined his future road map by narrating that an aircraft carrier will also be designed indigenously, following Anadolu Ship.

Hopefully, it will take Turkey to the top league in the field. In this connection, world has already acknowledged Turkey's superiority in diverse fields of military production as seven Turkish companies, including two new entries, have made it to the list of the world's top 100 defence firms.

The US-based publication the Defense News (2019-2020) focuses Turkish emerging strength in military production. During 2020-2021 the number of Turkish companies on the "Top 100 List" upgraded to seven from five. Turkey had launched four frigates in recent years. Turkey made a big investment in improving its naval defences in the last decade, increasing the number of warships and military vessels and relying on homegrown technology.

In recent years, Ankara has not only increased its number of vessels and warships, protecting its coasts and sailing in international waters, but also made self-sufficiency a priority to upgrade its naval force, relying on its own native sources to decrease dependency on outside powers.

Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan's government has drastically increased defence spending and has worked diligently to promote state cooperation with native defence contractors.

The Turkish Navy has had 112 military vessels until now, but Ankara plans to add a total of 24 new ships, which include four frigates, before the Republic reaches the 100th anniversary of its founding in 2023. Turkey desires to compete with its Mediterranean neighbours on equal terms to claim its marine rights in the region by improving its naval capabilities, which are also crucial to secure the country's vital economic interests. The Turkish defense industry has taken a significant leap from 2002, increasing from 62 to almost 700. Due to which Turkey has become a country that develops its domestic industry but also meets the needs of its allies. Being prominent regional expert I term the launching and inclusion of indigenous frigate Istanbul (F-515) and welding ceremony of the third ship under "Pakistan MILGEM" corvette project is a "paradigm shift" in the regional security. It will definitely, safeguard Turkey's trade & commerce activities, oil & gas exploration and defend its coastal areas from any external aggression. It will also further strengthen Pak-Turkey military cooperation in "real sense" in the days to come.

Indian republic day: The back day for Kashmiris

Sajjad Shaukat

The UNSC adopted resolution of April 21, 1948, which promised a plebiscite under UN auspices to enable the people of Jammu and Kashmir to determine whether they wish to join Pak or India. On Feb 5, 1964, India backed out of its commitment of holding plebiscite. Instead, Indian Parliament declared Kashmir an integral part of the Indian union

ON the one side, every year, 26th of January, is being celebrated by India as the Republic Day, while, on the other side, the day is being observed by the Kashmiris on both side of the Line of Control (LoC) and all over the world, including their Pakistani brethren as the Black Day in protest against Indian illegal occupation of Kashmir.

Although apparently, India claims to be the largest democracy, acting upon the principles of liberalism and secularism, yet in practice, all political, economic and social fields of the country are divided on the religious and caste lines.

Theoretically, Indian Constitution safeguards the rights of minorities, but in practice, ideology of Hindutva (Hindu Nationalism) prevails. And showing complete disregard to the Constitution, the leader of the ruling BJP party the Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi has accelerated implementing the Hindutva ideology. Now, Indian internal policies are totalitarian. Various developments like unprecedented rise of Hindu extremism, persecution of religious minorities such as Sikhs, Christians and particularly Muslims, including even of lower cast-Hindus—the anti-Muslim Indian Citizenship Amendment Act 2019, the National Register of Citizens show that the Hindu fanatic groups have been promoting religious and ethnic chauvinism in India.

Despite criticism of the rights groups, foreign leaders, the UN and moderate Hindus in wake of violent protests which killed hundreds of persons—mostly Muslims by the police and prejudiced Hindus, Modi's regime has not withdrawn the CAA/NRC.

While, Indian Constitution was torn into pieces when on August 5, 2019, Indian Parliament revoked articles 35A and 370 of the Constitution, which gave a special status to the disputed territory of the Indian Illegally Occupied Jammu and Kashmir (IIOJK). The act split the IIOJK into two territories to be ruled directly from center. Thus, Indian fanatic Prime Minister Modi's government led by extremist party BJP unilaterally annexed the IIOJK to turn Muslim majority into minority. Now, more than 17 months have been passed. But, Indian strict military lockdown in the IIOJK continues. Despite the deployment of more than 900,000 military troops in the IIOJK, who have martyred thousands of the Kashmiris, including women and children through brutal tactics—fake encounters—closure of mosques, shortage of foods, medicines for the patients and coronavirus-affected persons, the use of pellet guns and phosphorus bombs, Kashmiris continues war of liberation.

In order to conceal India's state terrorism, Kashmir has been cut off from rest of the world.

Besides, New Delhi also amended a law in October, last year regarding the Indian Occupied Kashmir (IOK), allowing Indian citizens to buy land there. Indian prejudiced rulers' various other measures such as issuance of domicile certificates to more than 500,000 non-Kashmiris show Indian fascist campaign.

It is notable that during the partition of the Sub-continent, the people of the state of Jammu and Kashmir (J&K) which comprised Muslim majority decided to join Pakistan according to the British formula. But, Dogra Raja, Sir Hari Singh, a Hindu who was ruling over the J&K in collusion with the Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and Governor General Lord Mountbatten joined India.

The Radcliffe Boundary Award gave the Gurdaspur District—a majority Muslim area to India to provide a land route to the Indian armed forces to move into the J&K. Indian forces invaded Srinagar on October, 27 1947 and forcibly occupied the J&K in utter violation of the partition plan and against the wishes of the Kashmiri people.

When Pakistan responded militarily, on December 31, 1947, India made an appeal to the UN Security Council to intervene and a ceasefire ultimately came into effect on January 01, 1949, following UN resolutions calling for a plebiscite in Kashmir.

The Security Council adopted resolution of April 21, 1948, which promised a plebiscite under UN auspices to enable the people of Jammu and Kashmir to determine whether they wish to join Pakistan or India. On February 5, 1964, India backed out of its commitment of holding plebiscite. Instead, Indian Parliament declared Kashmir an integral part of the Indian union. Since 1989, Kashmiris have already been enduring various forms of state terrorism; no Indian soldier has ever been taken to task. Hence, since the military clampdown started, Indian forces have intensified the employment of cruel tactics. Almost, 100,000 Kashmiris have died in the past 30 years.

UN human rights experts on August 4, 2020 called on India and the international community to take urgent action to address the "alarming" human rights situation in Jammu and Kashmir—"to investigate all cases of human rights violations, including extrajudicial killings, enforced disappearances, torture and arbitrary detentions."

Amnesty International said on September 29, last year that it is "stopping its work in India because the government has frozen its bank accounts on September 10 [2020] for highlighting rights violations in Jammu and Kashmir...the government had sought to punish it for that".

In the recent past, the UNSC in its meetings has thrice reiterated that the Kashmir issue requires to be settled in accordance with the principles of the UN charter and the related Security Council resolutions, as the world has refused to believe in the Indian story that its actions are its internal matter.

Moreover, Indian extremist rulers are escalating tensions with Pakistan to divert attention from the drastic situation of the IOK and Indian internal issues. For the purpose, Indian forces have also accelerated shelling inside Pakistani side of Kashmir by violating the ceasefire agreement in relation to the LoC.

In a recent statement, ISPR said that on December 18, 2020, Indian troops deployed along Line of Control in Charikot sector specifically targeted a United Nations vehicle carrying two officers of the United Nations Military Observer Group in India and Pakistan—the vehicle was damaged by the firing, but the officers remained unhurt.

Nonetheless, by exposing the myth of Indian claim of the largest democracy—26th of January which is celebrated as the Indian Republic Day is being observed by the Kashmiris and Pakistanis across the globe as the Black Day to express solidarity with the freedom fighters of Kashmir.

KARACHI: Pakistan captain Babar Azam has stated that the decision to select the final playing XI is on him but coaches also give collective input. "I have to lead the side on the field and I also try to select it, although, it's necessary to get coach input but the final decision is on me," Babar said in a presser ahead of first Pakistan-South Africa Test.

The 26-year-old Babar also dismissed Proteas' batsman Faf du Plessis's statement that the Pakistan team is mostly dependent on him. "I don't think that's the case as other players are also performing well. Azhar Ali and Mohammad Rizwan are outstanding, Fawad Alam performed well in New Zealand. We always try what's best for the team and everyone contributes" he added. On the other hand, Babar thinks that it's not good to be the plan and back the side on the field," he maintained. On the first Pakistan-South Africa Test, Babar looked confident and is excited to lead the national team for the first time in this format of the game.

"We are quite excited to play against a team like South Africa on our home ground. The boys are practicing for the last week where we played practiced matches. We will try to pull the result in our favor," Babar added.

Hasan Ali ready to comeback

KARACHI: Pacer bowler Hasan Ali is all set to make his comeback after almost one and a half years when Pakistan take on South Africa in the first Test tomorrow at National Stadium, Karachi. The 26-year-old Hasan took to Twitter and posted a photo of a pre-series photoshoot with the caption 'Eyes Forward. Mind Focused. Heart Ready'. It must be noted Hasan had an outstanding Quaid-e-Azam (QeA) Trophy season where he took 43 wickets in nine matches and scored 273 runs at a strike rate of 98.50. He has played nine Tests for Pakistan and has picked 31 wickets with one five-wicket haul.

Remembering Tahrir Square, 10 years on

CAIRO: After watching the protests in Tahrir Square on January 25, 2011, from afar, Abdelrahman Ashraf, 34, a multimedia producer now based in Turkey, returned to Egypt to participate in the revolution. Here, he recalls how protesters stood firm in the face of water cannon, bullets and tear gas. The protests, which marked the explosion of the Arab Spring in Egypt followed mass protests in Tunisia which had culminated in the flight of Tunisian President Zine El Abidine Ben Ali from the country on January 14. Egypt's protests continued for 18 days until Hosni Mubarak — in power for 30 years — also succumbed to popular demand and stepped down on February 11. I was working in the newsroom at Al-Hiwar TV in London when the events in Tunisia started in late 2010. We were following the developments there but nobody had expectations of a revolution, the thought of [Tunisia's President] Ben Ali leaving never crossed our minds. The protests were dismissed as mild disturbances, clashes happening in this neighbourhood or that. How I envied the Tunisians in my workplace when Ben Ali fled! Many of them were dissenting Tunisians, some self-exiled, who hadn't returned for years and in their nostalgic dreams, I saw myself and my dreams for my country. Egypt at the time was a distant dream for me; we'd seldom visit. My father previously was in the political opposition and had spent years in prison. He was a surgeon and board member of Egypt's Doctors' Syndicate, but after he was issued with another arrest warrant because of his political activities, he was forced to leave Egypt, unable to return for 20 years. The amount of injustice in Egypt created anger, poverty and need. An emergency law of over 30 years meant that justice was impossible; at any time a civilian could be prosecuted in a closed military court with no defence. — Agencies

New Zealand's new COVID case is South Africa variant

FOREIGN DESK

WELLINGTON: New Zealand's first case of coronavirus in the community in months has been identified as the South African variant, health minister Chris Hipkins said on Monday, adding that the 56-year-old woman probably caught it from another returning traveler just before leaving quarantine. The woman, who recently returned from Europe, tested positive on Saturday, 10 days after she completed her compulsory two weeks in isolation at a hotel in the city of Auckland. The case represents the first time the virus has breached a quarantine facility in more than two months, after New Zealand eliminated community spread of the virus. The Pacific nation has been widely praised for its handling of the pandemic, with just 25 deaths from 1,927 confirmed virus cases in a population of five million.

"We can confirm that the strain of infection is the South African variant and the source of infection is highly likely to be a fellow returnee during the person's stay at the Pullman hotel," Hipkins told reporters in the capital, Wellington.

Genome testing indicates the woman may have contracted the virus from a person on the same floor of the hotel who tested positive two days before she left quarantine, he said. "The two people occupied rooms in close proximity to each other on the same floor of the Pullman hotel and I'm advised by officials that they're confident that the infection was a direct one and that there's no other missing link in between those two people," Hipkins added, urging travellers who stayed at the same hotel to "self-isolate" immediately.

The 56-year-old toured around the Northland region near Auckland after her release from quarantine and showed symptoms for several days before being tested.

Two people close to her, including her husband, have since returned negative tests and New Zealand's Director-General of Health Dr Ashley Bloomfield said they probably avoided contracting the illness because of the type of infection.

"She didn't talk about respiratory symptoms, it was more muscle aches, so she may not have been sharing or spreading the virus much," he said.

"I don't think that's peculiar to this variant, it's just how it was expressed in this woman." The World Health Organization has said there is no clear evidence the South African variant leads to more severe disease or a higher death rate.

'Pakistan's victory to depend on wickets prepared'

ISLAMABAD: Former pacer Shoaib Akhtar believes that Pakistan team's win against South Africa in the two-match Test series beginning Tuesday, would depend on the kind of wickets the hosts prepare for the games. "South Africa is touring Pakistan after 14 years which is great news for the whole nation. I think Pakistan's chances of winning the series will depend on what kinds of pitches are prepared and the team combinations," he said in a video on his YouTube channel. However the Rawalpindi Express hoped that Pakistan doesn't make flat wickets. "I hope Pakistan doesn't make flat wickets as this would result in 500-plus runs total and drawn matches, which we don't want to see," he said. Akhtar, who bagged 178 wickets in 46 Tests, feels that the spinners can prove vital in the series. "We can put in two three spinners as they will prove beneficial against the South African team, but this is what the head coach Misbah ul Haq and team management has to decide. — APP

The parliamentary party gave its approval to Sharif's decision. After much deliberations, the party's Parliamentary Committee that met on Monday decided to participate in the Senate polls 2021. It is pertinent to mention here that the Pakistan Democratic Alliance (PDM) leaders have started consultations for the upcoming Senate elections which is likely to be held in February this year.

Sources said that PDM leaders are mulling over fielding joint candidates for the Senate polls. The opposition leaders have started consultations to field joint candidates in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa (KP) and Balochistan assemblies. Sources closer to Pakistan Muslim League Nawaz said that the PDM parties will be convinced to field joint candidates besides appealing Pakistan People's Party (PPP) to support PML-N in Punjab. A consultation session will be summoned soon to discuss the strategy to field joint candidates of the opposition parties. PML-N sources said. Earlier in the day, Maryam Nawaz talking to media persons before the Parliamentary Committee meeting said, "Now this government will not get any NRO Inshallah. The no-confidence motion will be discussed in the next meeting of the PDM. Bilawal Bhutto has said that he will put up this in the PDM meeting." "When the PDM feels it is the right time to resign, it will. We will not do anything under the pressure of anyone. That time is not far away. There will be a long march and we will also resign," she added. Maryam Nawaz said people are aware now after the performance of the government that is in front of everyone. PMLN Vice President said the whole Pakistan will apply for the PMLN ticket but no one will apply for their (PTI) ticket.

The accident occurred when the plane suddenly plunged to the ground at the end of the runway while on takeoff, the club reported in a statement. The players were on their way to Goiania, in the central region of the country, to play a match against Vila Nova. Brazilian media reported that the players were traveling in a private plane because they had tested positive for COVID-19, that Sunday would be their last day of isolation, and the rest of the players would travel on a commercial flight. The victims were identified as president Lucas Meira and players Lucas Praxedes, Guilherme Noé, Ranule and Marcus Molinari, as well as the pilot. There were no survivors, the club said. Palmas Futebol e Regatas was founded in 1997 and plays in Brazil's fourth division.

Russia: Putin slams pro-Navalny protests

FOREIGN DESK

MOSCOW: President Vladimir Putin has described mass protests held at the weekend demanding the release of Alexey Navalny as illegal and dangerous, as he faces mounting pressure from the West and thousands of Russians over the leading Kremlin critic's arrest. Putin on Monday fielded questions from students in a video call from his Zavidovo residence after tens of thousands of Russians demonstrated against Navalny's detention in several cities and towns on Saturday. "All people have the right to express their point of view within the framework of the law. Everything that goes beyond the framework of the law is not only counterproductive but also dangerous," he said. "In the history of our country, we have repeatedly encountered situations when the situation went far beyond the law, and shook our society and the state, where not only people who were engaged in it suffered but also those people who had nothing to do with it. "All these events about which I just talked about — no one should use them trying to reach their ambitious goals and objectives, especially in the field of politics. This is not how politics is done, at least not a responsible politics." Police detained more than 3,000 protesters and used force to break up the rallies, which saw people ignore extreme cold and police

Top EU envoy to visit Russia

BRUSSELS: EU foreign policy chief Josep Borrell will visit Moscow early next month to press the Kremlin on the arrest of Alexey Navalny, diplomats have said, as Brussels weighs fresh sanctions. "Borrell will go to Moscow in early February to deliver a clear message from the EU," a senior diplomat told AFP, despite earlier calls from several member states for the trip to be scrapped. The visit was confirmed during a meeting in Brussels where foreign ministers from the 27 nations debated their response to the arrest of Kremlin critic Navalny and crackdown on demonstrators. "Sanctions are a possible tool, but it is necessary to wait to see what happens in Moscow," a second diplomat said. European diplomats had earlier said Brussels was expected to hold off on sanctions until Navalny goes to court on February 2 to see if the Kremlin puts him behind bars for an extended term. — Agencies warnings to publicly call for the 44-year-old's immediate release. Several protesters were injured in clashes with riot police, the OVD-info protest monitor group reported. Navalny, Putin's most prominent critic, was arrested on January 17 as he returned to Russia after five months in Germany spent recovering from an alleged poisoning he blames on the Kremlin. The Kremlin says it has seen no evidence that Navalny was poisoned. After landing in Moscow and being immediately arrested, he was soon jailed for 30 days over alleged parole violations relating to a case dating back to 2014 over embezzlement charges which Navalny believes were politically motivated. Meanwhile, Navalny's allies called for more demonstrations across Russia on January 31 — Sunday — to demand his release. If they take place, the protests would come just two days before Navalny is due in court on February 2, on charges of breaking the terms of the 2014 suspended sentence.

COVID has worsened inequality: Oxfam

FOREIGN DESK

LONDON: It could take more than 10 years for the world's poorest people to recover from the economic fallout of the ongoing COVID-19 induced pandemic, according to a new report published on Monday by Oxfam International, urging governments to act fast and "set concrete, time-bound targets to reduce inequality". At the same time, the recession is over for the world's richest billionaires who have recouped their losses within nine months since the pandemic began spreading across the globe, the United Kingdom-based charity said. "The deep divide between the rich and poor is proving as deadly as the virus," said Gabriela Bucher, the executive director of Oxfam International, adding that "the fight against inequality must be at the heart of economic rescue and recovery efforts." The top 1,000 billionaires, mainly White men, had recovered all the wealth they had lost ... even while the real economy faces the deepest recession in a century," the report said. The findings were released as the World Economic Forum kicks off virtually on Monday from its perch in the Swiss mountain town of Davos.

Nepal's caretaker PM removed from CP

WEB DESK

KATMANDU: Nepal's caretaker Prime Minister Khadga Prasad Sharma Oli has been removed from the country's governing Communist party, his opponents said, in protest against his abrupt move in December to dissolve Parliament and call for an early general election. Despite being stripped of party membership, Oli remains in office. Meanwhile, judges in the Himalayan country's top court are hearing more than a dozen petitions from independent lawyers and Oli opponents on whether his move to dissolve Parliament and call an early election was legitimate or unconstitutional. The court is expected to deliver its verdict next month. The ruling Nepal Communist Party has split over Oli's call for a new parliament to be elected more than a year ahead of schedule on the basis that his colleagues were not cooperating with the government on policy interventions. "We have expelled Oli from the party on the grounds that he was not following the party rules and was working against collective decision-making," said Pampha Bhusal, a senior leader of the faction opposing Oli. But Surya Thapa, an aide to Oli, said the expulsion holds no political meaning as the leader remains prime minister, adding that Oli was confident of a legal and political victory.

Biden seeks to reinforce 'Made in America' approach

WASHINGTON: President Joe Biden will sign an executive order Monday giving priority to US companies and products in contracts with the federal government, pushing a "Made in America" approach favored by predecessor Donald Trump. The order, senior White House officials said, aims to boost national production and save industrial jobs by increasing investments in manufacturing industries and workers in order to "Build Back Better." Less than a week after his inauguration, Biden is pushing his priorities through with executive orders, even though his Cabinet is not fully in place, with the roles such as Secretary of State still to be approved. The new executive order should reduce the possibility of skirting rules requiring federal authorities to prioritize buying US-made products. Biden wants to limit the way federal agencies stamp the products they buy as "Made in America" in order to eliminate legal loopholes used by companies that often manufacture in the US only a small portion of the products offered to the government. decision echoes those of his predecessors, particularly Trump. — APP

China's Xi warns world against 'new Cold War'

President Xi Jinping called on the world to abandon "ideological prejudice" and shun an "outdated Cold-War mentality" as he signaled that China will continue to forge its own path regardless of western criticism

FOREIGN DESK

BEIJING: Chinese President Xi Jinping warned global leaders at an all-virtual Davos forum Monday against starting a "new Cold War", and urged global unity in the face of the coronavirus pandemic. Having largely curbed the spread of the pandemic within its borders, Xi wants to position China as a key player in a new multilateral world order as the US remains crippled by the pandemic. "To build small cliques or start a new Cold War, to reject, threaten or intimidate others... will only push the world into division," said Xi in a likely veiled attack on US President Joe Biden's plans to revitalise global alliances to counter China's growing influence. In a swipe at moves targeting China launched by the previous US administration under President Donald Trump, Xi said confrontation "will always end up harming every nation's interests and sacrificing people's welfare". The Chinese leader also reaffirmed Beijing's ambitious climate pledges to slash carbon emissions by 65 per cent by 2030 and achieve carbon neutrality by 2060 — both significant commitments as China emits a quarter of the world's greenhouse gases. "Meeting these targets will require tremendous hard work from China. But we believe that when the interests of the entire humanity are at stake, China must step forward, take action and get the job done," he said. Xi also called for stronger global governance via multilateral organisations, the removal of barriers to international trade, investment and tech exchanges, as well as stronger representation on the world stage for developing countries. He stressed the importance of strengthening macroeconomic policies to combat the pandemic-induced global economic downturn. "We must build an open world economy, firmly safeguard the multilateral trade system, and refrain from making discriminatory and exclusive standards, rules and systems, as well as high walls that separate trade, investment, and technology," he said. China saw its GDP increase 2.3 percent last year, according to official data — the lowest growth rate since 1976 — but it is nonetheless expected to be the only major economy to have expanded in the pandemic-ravaged year. Its economy is also forecast to grow by 7.9 per cent in 2021, according to the International Monetary Fund — trimmed down from initial predictions by a harsh geopolitical climate, global economic downturn and risks from a messy technological decoupling from the US. It also overtook the US as the world's biggest recipient of foreign direct investment (FDI) in 2020, according to a UN report released Sunday. Bolstered by confidence in his country's management of the pandemic, Xi has made ambitious climate pledges and vowed to uphold multilateralism as US-China relations entered their worst phase in decades under the Trump administration. But the Chinese government has been accused of mishandling the initial Covid-19 outbreak and covering up information, while a World Health Organisation expert team is currently conducting a long-delayed probe into the origins of the virus. How Biden decides to handle the mounting tensions posed by China's rise will be one of the biggest strategic challenges he faces. Under Trump, China and the US traded blows on a wide range of issues ranging from the virus to trade, media freedoms, human rights and technology competition. Biden, busy handling several urgent domestic crises, did not participate at Davos and tasked US climate envoy John Kerry with representing Washington. Xi last addressed Davos in 2017, presenting himself as the champion of free trade on the eve of Trump's inauguration.

Riots sparked by anti-curfew protests in Netherlands

WEB DESK

AMSTERDAM: Protests against a curfew to curb the spread of Covid-19 in the Netherlands have degenerated into clashes with police and looting in cities across the country, authorities and reports said. Police used water cannon and dogs in Amsterdam, public television NOS reported, after hundreds gathered to protest the curfew which is set to last until February 10 and is the country's first since World War II. In the southern city of Eindhoven, police fired tear gas to disperse a crowd of several hundred, regional television Omroep Brabant reported. At least 30 people were arrested there, according to police. A number of vehicles were burned and businesses at Eindhoven's central train station were also looted, media reports said. Dutch rail company NS called on travellers to avoid the Eindhoven station, where it said train circulation was interrupted due to the intervention of emergency services nearby. Eindhoven mayor John Jorritsma told reporters that if the country continued "down this path, then I think we are heading for civil war." Incidents were also reported in The Hague, Breda, Arnhem, Tilburg, Enschede, Apeldoorn, Venlo and Ruremond. A Covid-19 testing centre was set on fire on Saturday evening in the village of Urk in the north of the country, local authorities said. "The fire in a screening centre in Urk goes beyond all limits," Health Minister Hugo de Jonge said on Sunday.

Turkey, Greece launch Mediterranean crisis talks

FOREIGN DESK

ANKARA: Turkey and Greece have opened their first direct talks over their explosive eastern Mediterranean standoff in four years. The talks in Istanbul on Monday, led by retired Greek diplomat Pavlos Apostolidis and Turkish Deputy Foreign Minister Sedat Onal, are not expected to make substantive progress but could help ease tensions between the two NATO neighbours after their gunboats collided in August as their dispute over energy and borders threatened to spiral out of control. But the meeting adds to the positive tone Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan has been setting as he tries to repair relations with Europe. And it could lay the groundwork for the eventual delineation of one of the world's most recently discovered regions of proven natural gas reserves. Turkey's Defence Minister Hulusi Akar on Saturday expressed hope that lawful solutions to bilateral issues will be found during talks with Greece starting in Istanbul on Monday. "In talks with Greece, we hope that issues will be dealt with within the framework of rights, law, and equity, and that solutions are found," National Defence Minister Akar said at launch and welding ceremonies for new Turkish-built ships. Akar further underlined Turkey's expectation that Greece "respect [Turkey's] rights in the Aegean and eastern Mediterranean and avoids actions that may cause misunderstandings." Greek Prime Minister Kyriakos Mitsotakis said Athens was entering the so-called exploratory talks "with optimism and hope" — a comment echoed by Turkish Foreign Minister Mevlut Cavusoglu. Ankara and Athens held 60 rounds of talks between 2002 and 2016 that they broke off without making progress in a dispute that has lingered for much of the past century. Hostilities flared anew last year when Ankara sent a research ship accompanied by a navy flotilla into waters near the Turkish shore which Greece claims with EU support. Ankara last year sent several drillships to explore for energy in the eastern Mediterranean, asserting its rights in the region, as well as those of the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus (TRNC). Turkey is furious that Greece is using its vast web of islands to lay claim to huge swathes of the Aegean and Mediterranean Seas. Turkey, which has the longest continental coastline in the eastern Mediterranean, has rejected maritime boundary claims by Greece and the Greek Cypriot administration, stressing that their excessive claims violate the sovereign rights of Turkey and the Turkish Cypriots. The two sides cite a range of decades-old treaties and international agreements to support their conflicting claims. NATO has set up a hotline to stave off a military conflict, while Germany has spearheaded efforts to solve the dispute through negotiations. These will not be easy as Ankara and Athens clashed over their agenda last week. Greece wants to limit the discussions between the two countries' deputy foreign ministers to continental shelf borders and the size of exclusive economic zones.

Baku welcomes Iran in restoration of Karabakh

"We will be very happy to see companies from Iran among the companies who will participate in the reconstruction of the liberated areas. That will be natural. Aliyev told Zarif

DNA

BAKU: Iran has shown great interest in cooperation with Azerbaijan to rebuild territories liberated from Armenia's 30-year occupation in the recent war. Close cooperation in this sphere was discussed at a meeting between Azerbaijani President Ilham Aliyev and Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif in Baku on January 25. President Ilham Aliyev welcomed Iran's involvement in the restoration of Azerbaijan's liberated lands. "We will be very happy to see companies from Iran among the companies who will participate in the reconstruction of the liberated areas. That will be natural. Because as I said, only friendly countries will be our partners. And of course, Iranian companies have an advantage because of the close proximity, logistics and great experience," Aliyev told Zarif. In turn, Zarif expressed Iranian companies' readiness to get involved in the restoration activities. "These are areas where would be our priority and our companies are ready to engage... PM Imran calls for fair distribution of vaccine

The prime minister was the keynote speaker at the fourth session of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) Intergovernmental Group of Experts (IGE) on Financing for Development (FfD) in Geneva

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Prime Minister Imran Khan on Monday shared a five-point agenda to address the structural barriers in global prosperity, proposing equitable supply of the coronavirus vaccine in the developing countries and once again appealed for the suspension of debt repayments for the most stressed countries until the end of the pandemic. The prime minister was the keynote speaker at the fourth session of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) Intergovernmental Group of Experts (IGE) on Financing for Development (FfD) in Geneva. "The coverage of the COVAX facility must be expanded. This would enable the developing countries to spend their precious resources on socio-economic development needs," he said. PM Imran told the UN body that the pandemic is an opportunity to address the structural barriers hampering global prosperity and development. He suggested the suspension of debt repayments for the most stressed countries until the end of the pandemic and restructuring of their public-sector debt under an agreed and inclusive multilateral framework. "Moreover, the expansion of concessional financing through multilateral development banks is also essential," stated the premier. PM Imran called for a general allocation of Special Drawing Rights (SDRs) of 500 billion dollars to help alleviate balance-of-payment pressures. Reiterating his decades-old stance of return of stolen assets held by corrupt politicians and criminals, the prime minister viewed that the illicit financial outflows from developing nations caused more poverty in that world than any other factor. "Reportedly, a staggering amount of 7 trillion dollars is parked in 'haven' destinations. And it is also reported that one trillion dollars annually leave the developing countries for these 'haven' destinations," he told the meeting also addressed by the prime minister of Barbados, vice president of Plurinational State of Bolivia, and second vice president of Government of Spain. The fifth point of the proposed agenda was meeting the agreed target of mobilizing 100 billion dollars annually by developed countries for climate action in developing countries. "Termining the economic malaise and recession "highly communicable" like the coronavirus, PM Imran Khan said the global policy measures, along his proposed lines, were urgently needed to save lives, revive economies, and build back better. He also thanked the UNCTAD Secretary-General for organising the extremely important session and said the world was grappling with a series of inter-linked and unprecedented public health and economic crises.
