Gunman kills 10 at Colorado supermarket

"These were people going about their day, doing their shopping. I promise the victims and the people of the state of Colorado that we will secure justice"

MONITORING DESK

COLORADO: A gunman has killed 10 people, including a police officer, following an hours-long stand-off at a grocery store in the US state of Colorado. The attack in Boulder ended with police detaining an injured suspect at the King Soopers market. The shooting was live-streamed by witnesses and broadcast on YouTube. Among the dead was 51-year-old Eric Talley, who was the first police officer to respond to the shooting. "This is a tragedy and a nightmare for Boulder County," the area's district attorney, Michael Dougherty, said. "These were people going about their day, doing their shopping. I promise the victims and the people of the state of Colorado that we will secure justice." No other details have been released about the nine other victims or a motive for the attack. The grocery store is located in a busy shopping plaza in Boulder, a north-central Colorado city about 30 miles (50km) away from the state capital of Denver. The supermarket attack comes less than a week after a mass shooting that left eight dead, including six Asian women, at three spas in Atlanta. The incident began at about 14:30 local time (20:30 GMT) on Monday when the suspect entered the supermarket and began firing. Shoppers and employees of the store said they had to dive for cover or run to safety as the shooting unfolded. Some of the stand-off was captured on camera by a passer-by, showing victims near the grocery store. "I don't know what's going on... I heard gunshots, someone's down," the cameraman shouts. "There's an

Colorado incident among 7 mass shootings in a week

WASHINGTON: The mass shooting at a supermarket in Boulder, Colorado, on Monday took place less than a week after eight people were killed in a series of attacks on spas in Atlanta. active shooter, get away". Gunshots can be heard as he runs away from the shop. The video continues, with police arriving on the scene and surrounding the market. The Boulder police department later warned people to avoid the area and told them not to "broadcast on social media any tactical information you might see". "We were at the checkout, and shots just started going off," said Sarah Moonshadow, a customer caught up in the shooting with her son Nicholas. She told Reuters she had tried to help one of the victims lying on the pavement outside the store, but her son pulled her away saying "we have to go". "I couldn't help anybody," she said. Ryan Borowski, who was also inside the store, told CNN he could not believe what had happened in his town: "This feels like the safest spot in America, and I just nearly got killed for getting a soda and a bag of chips." Eyewitnesses said the suspect was armed with a rifle. A police source told CNN it was an AR-15 style rifle, a semi-automatic gun that has been used in several mass shootings across the US. Aerial footage later showed a handcuffed, shirtless man with an apparent injury to his leg being put onto a stretcher for treatment. Authorities did not say whether he was the suspect or not. Speaking at a press conference, Boulder police chief Maris Herold confirmed that a suspect was in custody and was receiving hospital treatment. "I want to reassure the community that they are safe," she said. Ms Herold named the officer killed as Eric Talley, a father of seven who had been with the Boulder Police Department since 2010.

Private import of vaccines' decision should be reversed

The government should review the policy of allowing private import of the Covid-19 vaccine to cancel it as all governments are procuring vaccines and administering them to their citizens for free because it is the responsibility of the state

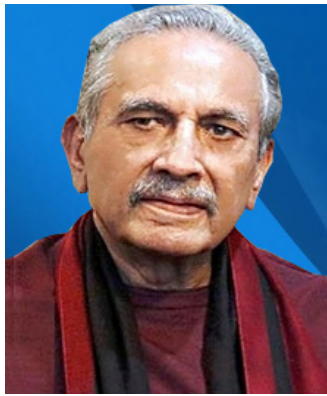

SHUJAAT HAMZA

ISLAMABAD: Former President ICCI Shahid Rasheed Butt on Tuesday said proposed autonomy of the State Bank of Pakistan (SBP) would hit the initiatives taken for economic recovery amid pandemic. Almost all the countries have adopted policies against the IMF agenda to revive economic activities and improve employment which is badly hit by the coronavirus, therefore, we should not implement IMF policies at this critical juncture, he said. Adopting IMF policies at this stage will make economic recovery difficult and hit the poor, he said, adding that Pakistan does not need the most influential central bank in the world.

Shahid Rasheed Butt said that SBP cannot be given a "Blank Cheque" in the guise of reforms and ending political interference as it is against the national interests and it will damage the economy and masses. He said that SBP will not be answerable to anyone in the proposed amendment which will set it free to abide by the IMF dictation discounting the national interests.

The critical decisions cannot be left to the bureaucrats and technocrats to please the lenders, as they are not concerned about the welfare of poor and mediocre, as it will stoke poverty and unrest among the masses. Empowered SBP will make it difficult for the government to finance projects important for health, education, clean drinking water and job creation, he said, adding that empowerment of Planning Commission and FBR is more important than granting unchallengeable powers to the central bank.

The government should take steps to reduce political interference in the Planning Commission and FBR and introduce reforms aimed at enhanced transparency, he demanded. The government should immediately review the policy of allowing private import of the Covid-19 vaccine to cancel it as all governments are procuring vaccines and administering them to their citizens for free because it is the responsibility of the state.

Import of vaccines by private parties will provide an opportunity for corruption as some elements may start selling the government's vaccines to private hospitals and clinics. The global price set for SputnikV vaccine is $10 per dose but the approved price for its commercial sale in Pakistan is 150pc higher than the international price which is exploitation. Price of the Russian vaccine in India is 734 rupees and it should be Rs 1500 to Rs1550 in Pakistan but the approved price is Rs8449 which amounts to profiteering on the cost of poor.

Distributive Justice is the way to deal with water scarcity

RAJA PERVAIZ

ISLAMABAD: Bringing distributive justice in water management is need of the hour to overcome water scarcity, especially in the South Asian region. Without a comprehensive understanding of real and multi-dimensional value of water, safeguarding this critical resource for the benefit of everyone would not be a possibility. The experts from water, environment and agriculture sectors said this while sharing their views with the participants of online regional dialogue 'Valuing water for achieving sustainable development goal 6 (Water and Sanitation)', held by Sustainable Development Policy Institute (SDPI).

Former Minister of Water Resources in Nepal, Dr. Dipak Gyawali, while sharing his views in regional perspective of water management, said that from transboundary to a village level, the conflicts on water issues would always be there due to its being precious and irreplaceable natural resource. He said that we often confine to surface water (blue water) while talking of water conservation. Brown water (underground water) and white water (clouds and glaciers) are equally important and should be conserved, he opined.

Dr. Gyawali said that "the policies pertaining water need to be pluralized while taking aboard all voices." The point that we need to consider while dealing with the water issues is that there cannot be a complete consensus on any solution and therefore, we need to reach at certain compromises for the collective betterment, he concluded.

While linking water issues with Covid-19 pandemic time challenges, Ms. Vanita Suneja, Regional Advocacy Manager, WaterAid South Asia, opined that the messaging, especially about hands hygiene to contain the spread of virus has reminded us the access to water and entailing inequality.

She added further that it is quite ironic that despite higher emphasize on value of water during the pandemic and messaging around it, there is no visible increase in the public funding on water, especially in South Asian countries. She said that including all stakeholders in decision-making pertaining water issues is imperative for effective water management.

Dr. Abid Qayum Sulri, Executive Director, SDPI, highlighted the multidimensionality of water usage and said that water has become even important amidst Covid-19 for health (hand washing), food security (agriculture), and livelihoods (energy). He suggested that Dr. Gyawali should take a lead in updating quarter century old, "South Asia water manifesto"; a document that water experts in South Asia prepared in 1997 for just distribution of water across the region. "It is our collective responsibility to pass on this precious resource to our future generations", said Dr. Sulri.

Price hike

TO recover billions in revenue shortfalls, the Sui Northern Gas Pipelines Limited (SNGPL) and Sui Southern Gas Company (SSGCL) proposed an astounding 220 percent increase in gas prices. If their demands are met by the Oil and Gas Regulatory Authority (OGRA), the per unit price of gas might become unaffordable for industrial sectors as well the masses. Accessibility must be maintained and an alternative solution should be explored by the government to protect its citizens from crippling exploitation. SNGPL and SSGCL's argument is that without a substantial increase in prices, the estimated revenue requirement for the current fiscal year may not be met. Furthermore, they mention that previous years' shortfalls must also be recovered alongside considering that their exclusive contracts have expired in Punjab and KP as well.

While it is still unclear exactly where the burden of over a 100 billion rupees might fall, one can clearly conclude that industries and the general public alike will be impacted heavily. Already, the government approved electricity price increases to meet conditions stated by the IMF; another increase will be the final straw that threatens to bring upon immense economic strife. Inflation coupled with such price hikes may put many below the poverty line and run industries out of business. The government must fulfil its duty to provide a solution that is not disadvantageous yet still allows for the companies to bridge their revenue gap.

While Pakistan works towards eliminating the reliance on depleting energy sources like gas entirely, as a long-term solution, experts propose that maximising efficiency in the meantime might help the problem. Upgrading equipment, employing a detailed control system, reducing UFG and improving distribution systems can help save up gas that would have been lost otherwise. Responsible usage should also be encouraged across the nation so that a conscious effort is made towards preserving an exhaustive resource that is vital for our economy. Lastly, carrying out checks and balances to ensure that proper functions are followed in the companies are vital since the end consumer cannot always bear the costs of every shortfall.

Crime spike

SINCE the start of this year, Islamabad police has been telling us that making the capital crime-free is the utmost priority. But in reality, it looks like the federal police's efforts in curbing the crime rate in the city are proving to be insufficient. It is not to say that the police department is sitting idle. Indeed the force is carrying out its duty, as is evident from its earlier operations this month against criminal elements. But last Saturday, the crimes reported from eleven different areas in Islamabad must be a point of concern for the department.

Dozens of Islamabad's residents were deprived of their hard-earned money and valuables worth millions of rupees in a single day. This shows the police department's failure in performing its primary duty—protecting the lives and properties of the ordinary people. Almost a dozen incidents in a day are a worrying indicator of a newfound security problem in the capital, as crime becomes endemic. The rise in crime rate has only increased the feeling of insecurity in the residents of the capital. Islamabad police must control the deteriorating law and order situation to restore the city's peace. Such a trend cannot be condoned anywhere, especially in the capital.

This rise can be attributed to socio-economic determinants of crime in Pakistan. Crime and unemployment rates are directly related, as a plethora of research shows us. However, that does not exonerate police officials from failing in carrying out their job. The fact that crimes increase in the last few days of every month necessitates increased surveillance and patrolling of the city. The higher-ups must reassess the department's performance. They must prioritise accountability and ensure strict implementation of law and order.

A spike in petty and street crimes in a city are indicative of poor policing. Erecting scores of pickets by capital police in the past has made no difference. Perhaps, the capital police need to focus more on effective response management and good patrolling to cover all bases.

Process of judicial reforms in Uzbekistan

Khadji-Murod ISAKOV

The development of a system of continuous judicial education in the Republic of Uzbekistan is one of necessary conditions for establishment and security of the rule of law. Taking into account the importance of training highly qualified judicial personnel and their relevance in judicial activity in the country

THE independence of judiciary is one of the fundamental principles of a democratic rule of law as well as a fundamental element of the right of fair trial. This factor is the starting, definition of the court in a democratic state, since in a dynamically developing society, the role of an independent judiciary, as an integral element of the rule of law and the system of comprehensive protection of human rights and freedoms, is certainly growing. The guarantees of independence and impartiality of the courts are enshrined in national legislation at the highest level. Thus, Articles 106 and 112 of the Constitution of the Republic of Uzbekistan have become a solid legislative basis for the implementation of systemic and consistent measures in this direction. A deep in content and significant in scope work was carried out, which was aimed primarily at ensuring the full implementation of the principle of independence and impartiality of the judiciary, enshrined in the Supreme Law of our country, which contributes to the growth of the quality of justice, its transparency, accessibility, openness, efficiency, and most importantly, it serves as a complete and comprehensive protection of human rights and freedoms.

In recent years, large-scale transformations in the judicial and legal spheres have been taking place in our country, which laid the foundation for a modern new concept of the judicial system under the leadership of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan - Sh.Mirziyoyev. It should be noted that the process of democratic renewal of the judicial system was followed by powerful continuation and development in 2016-2017. It was at this stage of development that cardinal decisions were made which laid the beginning of a new, historical stage in the democratization of the judicial system. As a result of the measures taken to reform the judicial system, the guarantees of reliable protection of the rights and freedoms of citizens have been strengthened, the structure of the judicial system has been radically improved, and the efficiency of the activities of the judicial authorities has been increased. In particular, it is considered to be necessary to dwell on the following aspects: First, within the framework of the implementation of the measures provided in the "Strategy of actions for five priority areas of development of the Republic of Uzbekistan in 2017-2021", the Head of State issued Decree No. UP-4966 of February 21, 2017 "On measures to radically improve the structure and increase the efficiency of activities of the judicial system of the Republic of Uzbekistan". In accordance with this Decree, the Supreme judicial council of the Republic of Uzbekistan (hereinafter referred as the Council) was formed, by abolishing the Supreme qualification commission for selection and recommendation of candidates for judicial positions under the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan. The Council is the body of the judicial community, which is designed to assist in ensuring compliance with the constitutional principle of the independence of the judiciary. It should be noted that this reform is fully consistent with the Basic Principles of the United Nations concerning the independence of the judiciary (approved on August 30, 1997 by a resolution of Oliy Majlis of the Republic of Uzbekistan). The specific attention shall be paid to the fact that the Council has a constitutional status, its activities are regulated by the Constitution and the Law "On the Supreme judicial council of the Republic of Uzbekistan", which in turn also strengthens its independence and impartiality.

According to the provisions of the Decree, our country has introduced a new system for the selection of candidates and the appointment of judges, in which representatives of the judiciary, as well as civil society institutions take part. It is the Council that is empowered to select and form a highly qualified judiciary. Noteworthy, the introduction of this institution made it possible to conduct an open and transparent formation of the judiciary on the basis of a competitive selection of candidates for the positions of judges from among the most qualified specialists, to ensure the genuine immunity of judges and prevent interference in their activities in the administration of justice, and to establish a dialogue between the judicial community and people.

In addition, the Law of the Republic of Uzbekistan of September 10, 2019 No. 566 "On amendments and additions to certain legislative acts of the Republic of Uzbekistan in connection with improving the activities of certain state bodies", amended the Laws "On courts" and "On the Supreme judicial council of the Republic of Uzbekistan", according to which, a judge before being appointed to the position, is required to reach 35 years of age (previously - 30 years), and persons in the reserve of candidates who are appointed to the positions of judges for the first time shall undergo compulsory training at the Supreme school of judges.

Second, one of the large-scale transformations of the judicial and legal sphere and the organizational and legal guarantee of the independence of the judiciary in the Republic of Uzbekistan is the establishment of an indefinite period of office for judges. Thus, the Law of the Republic of Uzbekistan dated April 12, 2017 established that a judge is appointed or elected in accordance with the established procedure for an initial five-year term, another ten-year term and a subsequent indefinite period of office.

This innovation fully meets the requirements of modern international and foreign experience. Pursuant to Article 12 of the UN Basic Principles on the Independence of the Judiciary of November 29, 1985, judges, whether appointed or elected, have a guaranteed term of office until mandatory retirement or the expiration of their term of office, where applicable. In practice, this means that the judge retains his position until he reaches the age limit.

This measure has become the main guarantee of the irremovability of judges - one of the most important elements of their independence. It is significant that at present this rule is fully implemented in the law enforcement practice of our country.

Third, in Uzbekistan, organizational and legal mechanisms are consistently developing, aimed at ensuring a comprehensive protection of judges, as well as their immunity.

Fourth, appropriate measures have been taken to ensure the transparency of the activities of the judiciary, expand open dialogue with the society and strengthen the role of the public in the administration of justice. So, in accordance with the provisions of the Decree of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan No. UP-5482 dated July 13, 2018 "On measures to further improve the judicial system and increase confidence in the judiciary," the following is provided: - gradual introduction of the procedure for the systematic publication of court decisions on the website of the Supreme Court of the Republic of Uzbekistan; - introduction of the practice into daily operation of courts of giving clarifications to the participants in the trial of the essence of the adopted court decision after its announcement; - conducting quarterly briefings by the chairperson of regional courts and their deputies in order to inform the public and the media about the activities of the courts; - publication of quarterly reviews of the practice of considering court cases in the order of supervision by the judicial collegiums of the Supreme court of the Republic of Uzbekistan, in the appeal and cassation procedure - by regional and equivalent courts. We are talking about the decree of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan No. PP-4096 of January 6, 2019 "On measures to radically improve the system of training candidates for the positions of judges, retraining, advanced training of judges and employees of the court apparatus", in accordance with which the Supreme school of judges under the Supreme judicial council of the Republic of Uzbekistan (hereinafter referred to as the Supreme school) was created to carry out training of candidates for the positions of judges, retraining, advanced training of judges and court staff through the way of: - Organization of a unified system of training of candidates for the positions of judges, retraining, advanced training of judges and court staff; - Introduction into the educational process of interactive teaching methods that develop skills of record keeping and critical analysis, making informed decisions using innovative pedagogical and information and communication technologies; - Development of students' theoretical knowledge and practical skills in the field of jurisprudence, professional ethics, psychology, business communication, time management, negotiation tactics, technology for working with information, interpretation and application of law; - Organization of events on a regular basis for discussing topical issues of judicial and law enforcement activities, as well as law enforcement practice; - Familiarization of listeners with current amendments and additions to legislation, the state and trends of domestic and foreign law enforcement practice, as well as experience in the field of rule-making; - Implementation of deep fundamental, applied and innovative research work on topical issues of improving the judicial and legal system, the development of legislation and the formation of a uniform law enforcement practice; - Training of scientific and production (practical) highly qualified personnel in the judicial sphere, as well as scientific and methodological support of judicial and legal activities; - Analyzing legislation and law enforcement practice in the judicial sphere, study and generalization of judicial practice and statistics with the development of appropriate proposals and recommendations; - Establishment of effective interdepartmental interaction with educational and scientific-research institutions that train candidates for the position of judges, improving the qualifications of judges and court staff in order to exchange experience, consolidating efforts to improve the quality of the educational process; - Development of international cooperation in order to establish regular scientific research, exchange of information of a regulatory, methodological and analytical nature, attract foreign specialists to the educational and scientific process, organize internships for teachers, researchers and students.

The development of a system of continuous judicial education in the Republic of Uzbekistan is one of necessary conditions for establishment and security of the rule of law. Taking into account the importance of training highly qualified judicial personnel and their relevance in judicial activity in the country, the primary training of judges and judicial officers is carried out in order to meet the needs of professional judicial corpus. Judges are trained by implementation of specialized programs, with a specific focus on the field of their professional activity, but at the same time in light of norms of protection of the rights, freedoms and legitimate interests of citizens and organizations.

The judicial reforms in Uzbekistan are ongoing and the Decree of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan PF-6034 of July 24, 2020 "On additional measures to improve further the judicial activities and increase their efficiency" can be considered as a vivid example. This Decree introduced following changes:

- The practice of reviewing court decisions by way of supervision was cancelled and respective rights of chairman of the Supreme Court, the Prosecutor General of the Republic of Uzbekistan and their deputies to protest the judicial decisions were abolished.
- regional and equivalent courts of general jurisdiction were created on the basis of the principle of "one court - one instance" and corresponding judicial collegia were formed while maintaining the strict specialization of judges. A feature of this innovation is the revision of decisions of interdistrict, district (city) courts by regional and equivalent courts, and court decisions considered on appeal can be reviewed in cassation by judicial collegiums of the Supreme Court of the Republic of Uzbekistan.
- a new procedure for the participation of the prosecutor in court has been introduced, according to which the participation of the prosecutor on his own initiative in the consideration of civil and economic cases in courts initiated by other persons, with the exception of cases provided for by law, as well as the reclamation from the court and examination of the case by the prosecutor, on to which the verdict, decision or ruling of the court entered into legal force only if there is an appeal by the parties in this case.

Regarding institutional changes in the judicial system, Article 107 of the Constitution of the Republic of Uzbekistan has introduced new structure of the state's judicial system. According to it, new court instances were formed, such as the courts of the Republic of Karakalpakstan, regional and Tashkent city courts, the Administrative Court of the Republic of Karakalpakstan, administrative courts of regions and the Tashkent city, inter-district, district, city courts on civil cases, district and city courts on criminal cases, district and city courts on economic cases, and finally, district and city courts on administrative matters.

In general, the abovementioned, measures, having become an important factor in the development of democratic transformations in the country, serve the main goal - "Man, his life, rights and freedom are the highest value." This concept deriving its origins from Article 13 of the Constitution of Uzbekistan has become the most important foundation for strengthening the role of judiciary in the system of state power, ensuring the true independence of the judicial system, increasing the level of access to justice, as well as strengthening judicial power in ensuring reliable protection of the rights and freedoms of citizens.

Renewed commitment from Pakistan!

Attiya Munawer

The 27th meeting of the Muslim League, presided over by Quaid-e-Azam, started with great pomp on March 22, 1940. It was very successful in terms of assembly

SOME moments in national life are very precious, and living nations do not waste these moments or let them be forgotten. March 23, 1940 is one such day in the national history of Pakistan when a historic resolution was passed at the end of the three-day annual meeting of the All India Muslim League in Minto Park, Lahore, on the basis of which the Muslim League leaders started a movement for a separate homeland for Muslims in the subcontinent and succeeded in getting his demand approved in a short period of seven years.

It is clear that the Pakistan Resolution was passed on March 23, 1940 after going through many difficult stages, but we can all estimate it hypothetically. From the beginning of 1940, Quaid-i-Azam gradually shifted the views and opinions of the Muslims of the subcontinent towards the ten-year-old goal for which Allama Iqbal was striving. The Quaid-e-Azam, while expressing his views in the London newspaper Time and Tide, had clearly declared that Hindus and Muslims are two separate nations. Quaid-i-Azam wrote in reply to Gandhiji's letter that he had no misunderstanding that India was not one and the same. The subcontinent is inhabited by many nations, Hindus and Muslims being the two major nations. In February 1940, a meeting of the Working Committee and Council of the Muslim League was held in Delhi, where it was decided that the demand for a separate state for Muslims would be presented at the Lahore meeting.

The 27th meeting of the Muslim League, presided over by Quaid-e-Azam, started with great pomp on March 22, 1940. It was very successful in terms of assembly. More than 50,000 people attended the meeting. In his presidential address at the open session of the Muslim League on March 22, the Quaid highlighted the two-nation ideology and said in no uncertain terms that India's problem was not sectarian but international, and that it was impossible to combine fire and water. Alhamdulillah, Pakistan is based on this ideology and at that time those who opposed this ideology were regretting their own decision. Just look at the recent amendments to the Indian law, how the controversial Citizenship Bill was introduced in defiance of Islam, newspaper headlines there are now slamming opponents of the ideology of Pakistan and they are convinced of the political insight of Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah.

There is no denying the fact that the Pakistan Resolution of March 23 is a blessing or a gift for all of us (Muslims). If all Pakistanis pledge to protect this gift, then every enemy of the country will think a hundred times before looking at our beloved land with a dirty eye. We celebrate Pakistan Day every year with great enthusiasm, events are also organized in the educational institutions of the country, special programs and influential writings on print, social and electronic media are selected, but all these matters do not fall into the category of loyalty to the beloved land, our homeland demands sacrifices from us, and it is our duty to pledge solidarity and unity with it, we pledge to lead Pakistan in the light of the guiding principles of faith, unity and discipline. We will make Pakistan a truly welfare and Islamic state, we will implement the Qur'an and Sunnah system in Pakistan in practice, we will liberate Pakistan from the slavery of others, we will wage jihad against those who promote Hindu culture and its traditions.

For the people of Pakistan, Pakistan Day is a day of renewed commitment, the responsibility to improve this country lies not only with the government and the braves of the Pakistani forces guarding the border, we all have a responsibility to develop and protect this country. Forgetting all kinds of differences and setting an example of unity so that the enemy countries cannot even think of conspiracies against us. We have spent our time, but the future of our children has to be decided in the same way as our elders have made a dream come true for us and made it a free country. In the same way, it is our duty to train the youth for the integrity and survival of this country, to give them a conducive environment so that they can be able to run this country. This year, let us all renew our commitment to Pakistan on Pakistan Day that in the light of the Pakistan resolution, we will individually and collectively become the Shaheen of Allama Iqbal and make Pakistan's future bright.

Protesters rally in front of Kosovo embassy in Ankara

ANKARA: Dozens of protesters rallied in front of Kosovo's embassy in the Turkish capital Ankara on Tuesday. They were showing resentment against Kosovo's move to open its embassy in Jerusalem.

The protest, organized by the Humanitarian Relief Organization (IHH) and the Memur-Sen Trade Union, was attended by Turkish activists and Arab students. "We believe that Kosovo's move to open an embassy in Jerusalem will go down as a black mark in history", Zahid Sengul, a leading figure of Memur-Sen, said in a press statement.

The statement also urged the leaders of Kosovo to reverse their decision. "Just as we had defended Kosovo at the cost of our lives during its war of independence, we will stand up for the state of Palestine languishing under Israeli occupation", the statement read. Speaking to media, Sengul said they will not end the struggle till Palestinians are granted their rights.

"We will continue our struggle until the Zionist invaders leave Palestinian lands, including Jerusalem", he said. Huthaifa Yassin, an Ankara-based Palestinian student, said he is taking part in the protest to voice his "outrage" over the Kosovo move. "Jerusalem was and is still the capital of Palestine and Israelis have no right there," he added. Jordanian student Jilan Abu al-Rub, who was also part of the protest, said she was there to express strong condemnation against the Kosovo country's move.

"Our position represents every free person in this globe which is rejecting the Israeli attacks and discrimination practiced by the Apartheid state of Israel against the Palestinian people," she said. In a controversial move, Kosovo on March 14 announced the opening of its embassy to Israel in Jerusalem. Turkey had condemned the Kosovo decision. The city of Jerusalem remains at the heart of the decades-long Mideast conflict, with Palestinians insisting that East Jerusalem - illegally occupied by Israel since 1967 - should serve as the capital of the Palestinian state.

261 killed in Myanmar military crackdown

YANGON: At least 261 people have been killed in Myanmar since the military coup last month, said a civil society organization that works to secure the release of political prisoners in Myanmar. The Thailand-based Assistance Association for Political Prisoners said: "The actual number of casualties is likely much higher. We will continue adding as and when." As of Monday, a total of 2,682 people were arrested, charged or sentenced for protesting against the coup, said the group. In the crackdown, the military junta uses live ammunition with impunity, and assaults, arrests and kidnaps, it added. "They do this to spread fear, but people continue to protest," the group said. Myanmar's army seized power on Feb. 1, ousting the elected government of Aung San Suu Kyi and ending the country's brief experiment with democratic rule. In response to the coup, civilian groups across the country launched a civil disobedience campaign with mass demonstrations and sit-ins.

Germany declares lockdown until April 18

DNA

BERLIN: Germany has announced plans to extend lockdown restrictions until April 18 amid a sharp rise in the number of infections. "We have not yet been able to defeat the virus, it does not give up," Chancellor Angela Merkel said Tuesday morning in Berlin after 12-hour marathon consultations with the state premiers.

Germany is in a "very, very serious situation" with rising infections, heightened pressure on intensive care units, and the spread of more contagious variants, she added.

"We are in a race with vaccination," said Merkel. Merkel pointed out that the country is "basically facing a new pandemic" with a new virus that is way more deadly and more infectious.

If an area has an incidence rate of over 100 for three consecutive days, harsher lockdown measures will once again apply.

The stricter lockdown over the Easter holidays comes amid calls by some health experts for a full lockdown with a night curfew.

Merkel's coalition government is under intense public pressure for its handling of the pandemic crisis, especially when it comes to its slow vaccination program.

US says Turkey is 'long standing ally'

ANKARA: Turkey is a "strong and valued ally," the US top diplomat said on Tuesday, asserting that it is in the interest of NATO to have Turkey in the bloc. "Turkey is a long standing and valued ally, and one that I believe we have a strong interest in keeping anchored to NATO. And I believe that's also in Turkey's interest as well," US Secretary of State Antony Blinken said in Brussels.

His remarks came in an address with NATO Secretary General Jens Stoltenberg ahead of the NATO foreign ministers meeting. Blinken also said NATO has shown its effectiveness in dealing with some disagreement, especially in the Eastern Mediterranean, "serving as a vehicle for deconfliction, for de-escalation, for finding a way forward."

"I strongly believe that NATO has to be a platform where allies also sit down together, and then we address them, then we discuss them, and that's exactly what we try to do," he stated.

Spain to extend use of AstraZeneca vaccine

DNA

MADRID: Spain's public health commission on Tuesday agreed to extend the use of AstraZeneca's COVID-19 vaccine for people up to 65 years old. Previously it had only been used for people younger than 55.

The Spanish state TV network RTVE said the decision was taken in a meeting held to identify the groups of the population that should be administered the AstraZeneca vaccine after the European Medicines Agency (EMA) said last Thursday that the vaccine was "safe and efficient" and that no links had been discovered between its use and an increased risk of blood clots.

Monday also saw the publication of the results of a trial involving 32,000 people in the U.S., Chile and Peru, which showed that the vaccine was 79 percent effective at preventing symptomatic illness and 100 percent effective against severe infection, and that there was no evidence it caused thrombosis. Spain had earlier joined other European countries, such as France, Italy and Germany, in suspending the use of this vaccine, but while most countries began administering the AstraZeneca jab almost immediately after the EMA's announcement, the Spanish Health Ministry gave the public health commission until this Wednesday to decide whether to make any changes to its policy.

Hit with sanctions, China, Russia push for UN summit

FOREIGN DESK

MOSCOW: Russia and China have called for a United Nations Security Council summit over what they term heightened "global political turbulence", which has seen Western powers impose fresh sanctions on the pair over alleged human rights violations.

The two allies, whose relations with the West are under increasing strain, made the call in a joint statement on Tuesday following talks in Beijing between Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs Sergey Lavrov and his Chinese counterpart, Wang Yi.

"At a time of increasing global political turbulence, a summit of the permanent members of the UN Security Council is particularly necessary to establish direct dialogue about ways to resolve humankind's common problems in the interests of maintaining global stability," said the statement, published on the Russian foreign ministry's website.

Moscow has long been unilaterally pushing for such a summit. The joint statement came after the United States, European Union, United Kingdom and Canada imposed sanctions on a handful of Chinese officials on Monday for alleged human rights abuses against the country's Uighur population in its northwestern Xinjiang province.

US Secretary of State Antony Blinken said in a statement that the united response "sends a strong signal to those who violate or abuse international human rights," as he warned, of "further actions in coordination with like-minded partners".

China responded by imposing sanctions on 10 European individuals and four institutions that it said had damaged China's interests and "maliciously spread lies and disinformation".

Russia too is braced for a new round of US sanctions over what Washington says was its meddling in the 2020 US presidential election, which Moscow denies. Russia and China's joint statement also urged other countries to refrain from interfering in the pair's domestic affairs.

"Interference in a sovereign nation's internal affairs under the excuse of 'advancing democracy' is unacceptable," it said.

Commenting specifically on Monday's sanctions, Lavrov said Russia and China both regarded the measures as unacceptable. Wang sharply criticised the moves, warning they would "not be embraced by the international community". "Countries should stand together to oppose all forms of unilateral sanctions," he said.

Israel votes in fourth election in two years

FOREIGN DESK

TEL AVIV: Israel has gone to the polls for the fourth election in less than two years, with the nation still divided over whether Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu deserves to remain in office.

Polling stations were opening across Israel and in the occupied West Bank, with some 6.5 million registered voters set to deliver a result that could prolong the worst period of political gridlock in the country's history.

Israelis vote for parties, not individual candidates. During Israel's 72-year history, no single party list of candidates has been able to form a governing majority in the 120-seat Knesset.

Netanyahu has portrayed himself as a global statesman uniquely qualified to lead the country through its many security and diplomatic challenges.

He has made Israel's coronavirus-vaccination campaign the centrepiece of his re-election bid and pointed to last year's diplomatic agreements with four Arab states.

Opponents accuse Netanyahu of bungling the management of the coronavirus pandemic for most of the past year.

UN verifies 15 deaths in Rohingya fire

DHAKA: The UN has confirmed that 15 people were killed and over 550 were injured in Monday's deadly fire in Rohingya refugee camps in southern Bangladesh.

"It has been confirmed that 15 people have tragically lost their lives, and around 560 are injured," UNHCR communications officer in Bangladesh Louise Donovan told Anadolu Agency on Tuesday. She added that 400 are still missing.

"These numbers may increase," Donovan said in a message to media in the most devastating fire in the history of Rohingyas in Bangladesh, "around 45,000 people have been displaced, and approximately 10,000 shelters damaged or destroyed," the UN official added.

The fire erupted on Monday at around 3:30 p.m. local time (0930 GMT) and gutted thousands of makeshift tents of Rohingya until midnight.

After nine hours of efforts by the Fire Service and Civil Aviation and other agencies, the blaze was brought under control.

More than 1.2 million persecuted Rohingyas have been living in Bangladesh's camps, most of them fled the August 2017 brutal military crackdown in west Myanmar's Rakhine State.

ANKARA: US federal health officials on Tuesday cast doubt on the efficiency of AstraZeneca's COVID-19 vaccine, saying it may have relied on "outdated information."

The Data and Safety Monitoring Board (DSMB) informed the National Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases that the data released about the testing results "may have provided an incomplete view of the efficacy data."

"We urge the company to work with the DSMB to review the efficacy data and ensure the most accurate, up-to-date efficacy data be made public as quickly as possible," said the agency.

The statement came a day after AstraZeneca announced that its coronavirus vaccine is 79% effective against the symptomatic virus.

According to the findings from the phase 3 trials in the US, the jab also has 100% efficacy against severe or critical disease and hospitalization and is 80% effective in participants aged 65 and over.

AstraZeneca added that it would apply to the US Food and Drug Administration for emergency use authorization "in the coming weeks."

Houthi fire drone at Saudi airport

FOREIGN DESK

RIYADH: Yemen's Houthi forces launched a drone attack on an airport in southern Saudi Arabia, the Iran-aligned group's military spokesman said on Tuesday, a day after Riyadh presented a new peace initiative that includes a nationwide ceasefire. There was no immediate confirmation by Saudi authorities or the Saudi-led military coalition that has been battling the Houthis for six years, of an attack on Abha airport which has been repeatedly targeted by cross-border attacks. "Our operations will continue as long as the aggression and siege continue," Houthi military spokesman Yahya Sarea said in a Twitter post. Saudi Arabia and the United States have urged the group to accept the ceasefire initiative which Riyadh said would also include reopening Sanaa airport and allow fuel and food imports through Hodeidah port, both of which are under Houthi control. The Houthis' chief negotiator had said that the Saudi offer fell short of their demand for a complete lifting of the air and sea blockade, but that the group would continue to talk to Saudi Arabia, the United States and mediator Oman in pursuit of a peace deal.

UN chief "concerned" over ethnical violence

DNA

NEW YORK: UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres has voiced his "profound concern" over the rise of violence against Asians and people of Asian descent around the world during the coronavirus pandemic, a U.N. spokesman said. While the U.N. chief did not name any country, he spoke out following a shooting in Atlanta, capital of the U.S. state of Georgia, last week that left eight people dead, six of them Asian-American women. The shooting stoked fears among those in the Asian-American Pacific Islander community, which has reported a spike in hate crimes since March 2020 when then-President Donald Trump began referring to COVID-19 as the "China virus."

March and the end of last year, across 47 states and Washington DC.

Just over seven per cent of these incidents involved Asian Americans over 60 years old. The hashtag #StopAsianHate has spread widely across social media, drawing support from many public figures both inside and outside the community. US President Joe Biden condemned anti-Asian racism, during a solidarity visit to Atlanta in the wake of Tuesday's attack, noting that hate crimes had risen, and urged Congress to pass a hate-crimes bill introduced earlier this month, by two Asian-American legislators. "The world has witnessed horrific deadly attacks, verbal and physical harassment, bullying in schools, workplace discrimination, incitement to hatred in the media and on social media platforms, and incendiary language by those in positions of power", said the UN chief, in a statement issued through his deputy Spokesman Farhan Haq. In some countries, Asian women have been specifically targeted for attack, adding misogyny to the toxic mix of hatred", he continued.

Afghan president to offer election in six months

Ghani will unveil his proposal at an international gathering in Turkey next month, signalling his refusal to accept Washington's plan for his elected government to be replaced by an interim administration

DNA

KABUL: Afghan President Ashraf Ghani will propose a new presidential election within six months, under a peace plan he will put forward as a counter-offer to a United States proposal that he rejects, two senior government officials told Reuters. Ghani will unveil his proposal at an international gathering in Turkey next month, signalling his refusal to accept Washington's plan for his elected government to be replaced by an interim administration, the officials said. Washington, which agreed last year to withdraw its troops from Afghanistan by May 1 after nearly two decades, is pressing for a peace deal to end the war between the government and the Taliban. Talks between the Afghan sides in Qatar have stalled. US Special Envoy Zalmay Khalilzad has been circulating a proposal that would replace the Kabul government with an interim administration. But Ghani has voiced vehement opposition to any solution that requires his government to step aside for unelected successors. "The counterproposal which we are going to present at the Istanbul meeting would be to call for early presidential elections if the Taliban agree on a ceasefire," one senior government official said on condition of anonymity. Another Afghan government official said: "The president would never agree to step aside and any future government should be formed through democratic process, not a political deal." A third senior official also said Ghani's proposal would include possible early elections, although he did not specify the exact time frame for the vote. The third official said Ghani had already shared his road map with Khalilzad. With just weeks left before a deadline it agreed with the Taliban last year to end the longest war in U.S. history, Washington is seeking regional backing for its approach to push the Kabul government and insurgents to share power. But diplomats and foreign officials have said it will be difficult to move forward with the US plans without Ghani's support. During a visit to the region, which included stops in Doha and Islamabad, Khalilzad pushed for a conference to be hosted by Turkey with involvement from the United Nations next month. The Afghan officials said that as part of Ghani's counter-proposal, his government would ask the UN to closely observe the new election to ensure it is accepted by all sides. A presidential palace spokesman declined to comment.
