Ex-diplomat slams Sharif's India policies

"Instead of standing up for the interests of Pakistan, they wanted to accept Modi's contentions," said Basit

BUREAU REPORT

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan's former high commissioner to India, Abdul Basit, has levelled some serious allegations against the country's former prime minister, Nawaz Sharif – a move that could potentially intensify the already tense political climate between the government and the Opposition in the country. "PML-N supremo and former prime minister Nawaz Sharif wanted to fulfil the aspirations of Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi unilaterally and unconditionally," alleges Abdul Basit. "In line with the same aspirations, Nawaz Sharif had refused to talk about the Kashmir issue at a meeting in Delhi," he said. In a recent interview with Indian journalist Karan Thapar for The Wire, Basit further said that Nawaz Sharif "did not involve Pakistani diplomatic staff in India when holding talks with Narendra Modi in New Delhi." He went on to say that two of Nawaz Sharif's senior advisers – Sartaj Aziz and Tariq Fatemi – bore "apologetic mindsets" with regard to their approach to India. "Instead of standing up for the interests of Pakistan, they wanted to accept Modi's contentions and understand his concerns," said Basit.

Afghan talks: Pakistan warns against spoilers

Efforts must be made to ensure that such efforts complement, not subvert, peace process, he said, adding, "Bringing in 'spoilers' to the table will retard prospects of an early settlement"

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

NEW YORK: Pakistan has welcomed the recent efforts to re-energize the process aimed at ending the war in Afghanistan, but warned against spoilers' attempts to subvert the peace negotiations and prevent a political settlement in the strife-torn country. In a statement submitted to the UN Security Council, Ambassador Munir Akram called on all sides to work towards reduction of violence leading to a ceasefire, a natural expectation from the peace process. The Pakistani envoy's statement followed a briefing, via video-link from Kabul, by Deborah Lyons, the Special Representative for Afghanistan, about the situation in that country during which she sounded alarm about soaring rates of violence that continue to hamper humanitarian efforts and erode public confidence more broadly. "Continuation of violence will strengthen the hands of 'spoilers', both within and outside Afghanistan, to subvert the peace negotiations and prevent a comprehensive political settlement in Afghanistan," Ambassador Akram said in his remarks. "We must guard against those who desire to frustrate a peaceful settlement on the pretext of safeguarding democracy and human rights and to continue to use Afghan territory against its neighbours." "Terrorism has had a devastating impact on Afghanistan and its neighbouring countries," the Pakistan envoy said. Pakistan, he said, shares the international community's determination not to allow Afghan soil to be used by Al-Qaeda, ISIL/Da'esh or other groups to threaten or attack any country. "Some who have waxed eloquent about terrorism today are the very ones who wish to continue to foment terrorism from Afghanistan's ungoverned spaces to conduct their war of terrorism against my country," Ambassador Akram said with obvious India in mind. He regretted that the Security Council has been prevented from considering the evidence of their sponsorship of terrorism. He hoped that despite multiple challenges, and possible periodic setbacks, all Afghan parties will persevere in the pursuit of a political settlement. Efforts must be made to ensure that such efforts complement, not subvert, the peace process, the Pakistani envoy said, adding, "Bringing in 'spoilers' to the table will retard the prospects of an early settlement. Pakistan, he said, facilitated the commencement and the conclusion of last year's US-Taliban Peace Agreement and the subsequent Intra-Afghan Negotiations. In this regard, Ambassador Akram said Pakistan will support the consensus between Afghan leaders and the Taliban on any inclusive political settlement in Afghanistan. "It is the Afghans who must be the masters of their destiny and decide their own future, without outside influence or interference," he added.

Capital's air quality makes hat-trick of healthy days

IBRAR KHAN

ISLAMABAD: The air quality of the federal capital has remained healthy for consecutive three days amid strong spell of rain that lashed the region since Sunday where the metropolis' ambience had remained unhealthy for sensitive masses during past dry weather.

The recent air quality data by Pakistan Environmental Protection Agency (Pak-EPA) reported record decline in hazardous pollutant tainting the atmosphere below permissible limits, an official of EPA told APP. The Pak-EPA daily air quality report recorded particulate matter of less than 2.5 microns (PM2.5), nitrogen dioxide (NO2) and Sulphur dioxide (SO2), temperature and humidity in the air.

The health hazardous pollutant PM 2.5 was responsible for causing premature deaths, chronic respiratory diseases and other health complications globally.

It is the most health-damaging environmental pollutant causing chronic respiratory diseases and premature deaths as it could easily penetrate human blood through lungs cells, she added.

growth by promoting the development of industrial zones, but industrial areas in Islamabad were facing multiple problems due to which industrial activities were suffering. She called upon the CDA & MCI to focus on better development of industrial areas in the federal capital that would boost industrialization in the region and enhance exports. She assured that ICCI would cooperate with IIA in its efforts for resolving the key issues of local industries. Mian Akram Farid, Chairman Founder Group said that the best option for the government to uplift the economy, reduce unemployment and enhance tax revenue was to promote industrialization. He said that the domestic industry needed upgrade-

ing and investment in CPEC and urged that the government should minimize taxes and duties on the import of industrial machinery, plants and equipment for upgradation of industrial units and make them more competitive for producing value added products & promoting exports. He said that the government should also cooperate in upgrading the skills development and knowledge of the industrial workforce to make them more productive. He said that the Overseas Pakistanis were sending remittances of USD 24 billion, which could be further enhanced to USD 40 billion if the government takes more measures to facilitate them. Speaking at the occasion, Tariq Sadiq, newly elected President, Islamabad Industrial Association said that he would work in coordination with ICCI for improvement of infrastructure in industrial areas of Islamabad. He said that the roads and footpaths in Islamabad's industrial areas were broken due to which heavy duty vehicles were facing problems in transportation of goods.

CDA takes action against illegal buildings

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Capital Development Authority (CDA) is taking action against those who are violating the building by-laws and doing constructions without NOCs. 17 commercial buildings have been sealed for not getting NOCs. Notices have been issued to 245 owners and show cause notices have been served to 73 owners. According to detail, the administration of CDA is committed for implementing the building by laws. CDA has been taking action against the constructions without having NOCs. However, the current administration of CDA has completed preparations for a grand action against those who are violating the building by laws and are doing constructions without NOCs. ## 14 AIOU's disabled students get free laptops

STAFF REPORT

ISLAMABAD: Allama Iqbal Open University (AIOU) on Wednesday distributed laptops among its 14 disabled and transgender students under Higher Education Commission Laptop Scheme in order to provide them an opportunity to get modern education.

Addressing at a laptop distribution ceremony here, Director General Regional Services AIOU Inamullah Sheikh said that the university was specially facilitating transgender community, handicapped, prisoners, orphans, children of 'Shuhada' by offering them free education. He said the university was encouraging transgender community to acquire higher education for bringing positive change in the society.

He said transgender were equal as other human being of the society and bringing them into mainstream would help them to earn respectable livelihood. They could also play active role in socio-economic development of the country, he said. Inamullah said earlier transgender were dealt as discarded segment of society but now many opportunities were available to them to grow and flourish.

NHNP returns jewelry to owner

RAJA PERVAIZ

ISLAMABAD: National Highways and Motorway Police handed over the lost jewelry worth Rs 450,000 to the owner. According to the details, a man Fahad was traveling with his family on a private vehicle number MNY 2019 from Lahore to Attock via the motorway.

During his journey they stopped at KalarKahar rest areas for refreshment. After resuming their journey they found out that ladies bag in the car which contained gold ornaments worth about Rs 450,000 was missing. He contacted the Motorway Police Helpline 130, and informed that he had forgotten a lady purse in the Mini Service Area.

Sub-Inspector Adnan and car owner Fahad were kept in full touch so that they could reach the spot in the shortest possible time. Eventually, they reached the spot, took the purse into custody and informed the owners.

New metric included in governance observatory: Sania

KHAYAM ABBASI

ISLAMABAD: Special Assistant to the Prime Minister (SAPM) on Poverty Alleviation, Senator Dr. Sania Nishtar on Wednesday said a new metric was also included in the framework of the Governance Observatory. "We took a decision that no Ehsaas implementing agency will be allowed to get a post-facto approval on its budget," she said.

Dr. Sania Nishtar chaired a stock take meeting for the Ehsaas Governance Observatory, says a press release issued here. The Governance Observatory was established in June 2020 to monitor adherence to the Ehsaas Governance and Integrity Policy, which was approved by the cabinet in November 2019.

The Governance Observatory aims to review and improve governance systems and practices of all four executing agencies which are instrumental in implementing Ehsaas programs and initiatives. The purpose is to build systems that strongly discourage corruption, and to promote efficiency, transparency and accountability for results and compliance with rules.

All four executing agencies of Ehsaas including BISP, PPAF, Pakistan Bait-ul-Mal and TVO came to the table together with Secretary Poverty Alleviation and Social Safety Division (PASSD), Additional Secretary PASSD, and officials from Ehsaas Delivery Unit. Under the observatory, semi-annual reviews are conducted to review Ehsaas Governance and Integrity metrics focusing on board efficiency, financial control, risk & compliance, and business operations. Several indicators are tracked in these categories.

PRCS, NDMA agree to collaborate on disaster management

Abrar ul Haq stresses need to create synergies for efficient and swift response during emergencies by avoiding duplication of work

ZUBAIR AHMAD

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan Red Crescent Society (PRCS) and National Disaster Management Authority (NDMA) agreed to enhance mutual collaboration in tackling disasters and other emergency situations in the country. PRCS Chairman Abrar ul Haq held a meeting with NDMA Chairman Lt Gen Akhtar Nawaz Satti at the NDMA wherein the two discussed areas of mutual cooperation and collaboration. In the meeting, both organizations agreed to boost mutual cooperation and efforts regarding preparedness, mitigation, risk reduction and relief and rehabilitation in the wake of any calamity or disasters. Speaking on the occasion, PRCS Chairman Abrar ul Haq appreciated the role being played by the NDMA in disaster management in the country. He stressed the need to create synergies for efficient and swift response during emergencies by avoiding duplication of work. He said the PRCS has a huge volunteer base and its presence in every nook and corner of the country puts it in a unique place vis-a-vis effective handling of any disasters or emergency situations. He said collaboration between PRCS and NDMA on community-based disaster risk reduction (CBDRR) will not only help communities in an organized way during any disasters but also make the service delivery quicker and efficient. NDMA Chairman Lt Gen Akhtar Nawaz Satti hailed the role played by PRCS during disasters in the country, especially the recent outbreak of Covid-19 pandemic. He said volunteers are the backbone of any humanitarian organization, adding that the PRCS volunteers are devotedly working to help out people during disasters and are always ready to respond in the time of need. He hoped that collaboration with PRCS on CBDRR will help develop a sustainable mechanism for quick and effective response following any disasters in the country. PRCS Acting Secretary General Dr. Adeel Nawaz, IFRC Head of Delegation Peter (Pivi) Ophoff and other senior officials were also present on the occasion.

No vehicular traffic to be allowed to enter twin cities

DNA

RAWALPINDI: City Traffic Police (CTP) have finalized all the arrangements to facilitate the motorists of twin cities on March 25, Thursday, during Pakistan Day Parade while vehicular traffic would not be allowed to enter Rawalpindi and Islamabad from Faizabad. According to Chief Traffic Officer (CTO) Rawalpindi Rai Mazhar Iqbal, the entry of heavy vehicles would be banned in Rawalpindi city on March 25 particularly after 12 am, midnight. The CTP have formulated a comprehensive traffic plan to facilitate the motorists of twin cities during March 25 Parade. As many as 375 officers and Traffic Wardens including nine DSPs, 25 Inspectors, 272 Traffic Wardens and 69 Traffic Assistants would be deployed on various city roads to regulate traffic, he said adding, Faizabad Interchange would remain closed for all kinds of traffic either going towards Islamabad or entering Rawalpindi from 5 am to conclusion of the parade. He said the diversions would also be placed on different places, adding, the motorists who want to go to Islamabad from Murree Road would reach their destinations via 9th Avenue while those traveling on the 9th Avenue would enter Rawalpindi by taking U-turn from Double Road. Similarly, the vehicles coming from Koral Chowk would enter the federal capital using routes of Khana Pull Service Road, Chungi Number-8, Bandh Khana Road, Sadiqabad, Rawal Road, C-Block, Murree Road and Stadium Road. The entry of buses, trucks, trailers and other heavy vehicles would also be banned, he said.

The CTO urged the citizens to cooperate with traffic police so that traffic problems could be addressed properly. He said to make security foolproof for Pakistan Day Parade, heavy traffic would not be allowed to enter Rawalpindi city. He advised the motorists and road users to contact Helpline 051-9272616, 051-9272839 and Murree Traffic Police Helpline 051-9269200 in case of any inconvenience or problem during travel. CTP's radio station 88.6 would also broadcast programs for awareness of the citizens, he added.

Growing Pak-Uzbek ties vital for region

This resolve was expressed at a webinar jointly organized by the Center for Global & Strategic Studies (CGSS), Islamabad, and the Institute for Strategic and Regional Studies

MEHMOOD ABDULLAH

ISLAMABAD: An Online International Conference on "Regional Connectivity Strategy: Pakistan & Uzbekistan-A New Regional Commitment" was jointly organized by the Center for Global & Strategic Studies (CGSS), Islamabad, and the Institute for Strategic and Regional Studies under the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan. The online conference was commenced with the welcome remarks by Mr. Aybek Arif Usmanov, Ambassador of the Republic of Uzbekistan to Pakistan. He appreciated the initiative of organizing the conference & expressed his gratitude to the institutions for their participation in enhancing bilateral ties between Uzbekistan & Pakistan. His Excellency also mentioned that this conference will identify new areas of cooperation between Pakistan and Uzbekistan and also suggest the role of both countries in the Afghanistan peace process. In his opening remarks, Mr. Khalid Taimur Akram, Executive Director, Center for Global & Strategic Studies (CGSS), Islamabad stated that Regional connectivity is the key catchword in today's political and economic discourse. Pakistan has a cultural and religious affinity with the Central Asian Region and in this aspect, Pakistan-Uzbekistan bilateral relations have significantly improved in recent times. He emphasized that it is the need of the hour to effectively implement and execute the practical aspects of joint projects that interconnect all regional partners. Mr. Akramjon Nematov, First Deputy Director of the Institute for Strategic and Regional Studies under the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan also shared his point of view. He highlighted that Pakistan and Uzbekistan must support bilateral dialogue for the Afghan peace process. This support should also be extended and highlighted on all international platforms as well. This will initiate a new paradigm of international trade, regional connectivity, and economic cooperation in the region. Furthermore, it will become a pathway for sustainable development and progressive economic growth in Afghanistan. He appreciated Pakistan's vision for building and developing bilateral ties between Pakistan and Uzbekistan to maximize benefits and to capitalize on the geographical importance of this region. Prof. Dr. Shabir Ahmad Khan, Director of Area Study Centre, University of Peshawar highlighted that For Pakistan connectivity with Uzbekistan means connectivity with all other CARs. Pakistan is naturally facing Central Asia and considers itself part of the process of regionalism reinvigorated by President Shavkat Mirziyoyev in Central Asia. He also mentioned that it is also important to harmonize and coordinate cross-border policies for smooth border crossing between Uzbekistan, Afghanistan, and Pakistan. It will result in Pakistan and Uzbekistan maximally benefit from the regional integration plans like CAREC, BRI, Eurasian Union, and ECO due to their significant geographies in respective regions.

Opposition infighting

POLITICS makes for some unlikely allies. When there exists an opposition which is constantly at odds with each other and has failed to win any prominent positions because of its inability to agree on a candidate, it is not surprising when mismatched groups within the opposition form.

This is the case with the Pakistan People's Party (PPP), one of the major political forces of the opposition, which, instead of pushing the joint opposition effort, is finding an ally in Jamat-e-Islami, which at one time used to be an ally of the Pakistan Tehreek-i-Insaf (PTI).

This is an unpredictable alliance—the PPP and JI may disagree on every single issue except for their contentions with the government. Yet still, JI is backing the PPP by deciding to support the candidature of Syed Yousuf Raza Gilani for the opposition leader in the Senate. This agreement on the issue of the Senate opposition leader is bringing out more common interests between the two parties, including agreements to work together on electoral reforms, accountability, independence of the Election Commission of Pakistan and the Kashmir cause.

While these new bonds of friendship are being formed, the older ones, between PPP and the PML-N—the ones which account for actual meaningful opposition—are being weakened. Veiled verbal attacks are becoming more acceptable between recent allies.

How wise is this inner conflict? It is clear that the Senate opposition leader issue is a make or break one for the PPP. Enlisting the help of the JI strengthens its case for the PDM, but there is little chance that JI can contribute as a substitute to the larger opposition movement.

Leveraging for power is standard for a giant opposition but all factors need to not let this get in the way of unity. A fractured and weak opposition cannot even perform government oversight, let alone realising its grand plans of overthrowing the ruling party. This infighting is a gift to the government.

Heart of Asia

WHILE the United States (US) is facing a dilemma over the current situation in Afghanistan, the 9th ministerial meeting of Heart of Asia—Istanbul Process (HOA-IP) will kickstart from March 29. Foreign Minister Makhdoom Shah Mahmood Qureshi will lead Pakistan in the regional initiative of Afghanistan and Turkey.

The main theme of the conference will be finding a way out for a secure and stable Afghanistan so that regional security, economic and political cooperation centred on Afghanistan can be promoted. Thus, the FM will visit with regional cooperation and the Afghan peace process in mind, as Pakistan's role is very crucial on the two subjects.

However, the key question relates to engagement with India on the sidelines of the conference. Some experts fear that New Delhi might try to turn the meeting into yet another event of Pakistan-bashing as it did in 2016. But others are optimistic that the two sides might use the forum to bury the acrimonious past and look forward to a more cooperative future.

This optimism stems from the recent message of Chief of Army Staff (COAS) Qamar Bajwa and sporadic reports of a "secret India-Pakistan Peace Roadmap" brokered by the United Arab Emirates (UAE). According to the COAS, stabilised Indo-Pak relations can unlock the potential of South and Central Asia.

Given that both the civilian government and the military want to cultivate friendly ties with India, the ball is in New Delhi's court. Pakistan has once again shown to the world that it has always an appetite for peace.

The latest telephonic conversation between the US defence secretary Lloyd Austin and COAS Bajwa where the former lauded Pakistan's commendable efforts for Afghan peace is a fresh piece of evidence showing Pakistan's desire for regional peace and stability. If New Delhi reciprocates Pakistan's warm gesture, the two countries can emerge as the leading drivers of regional cooperation and progress.

Kazakh govt to enhance civil society engagement

Usen Suleimen

The relevance of this platform increased considerably with the announcement by Kazakhstan's President Kassym-Jomart Tokayev of the concept of a "listening state", implying stronger focus on the government's engagement with the civil society, and implementation since 2019 of three packages of reforms in the field of human rights and further democratisation of political processes in the country. Through open and transparent discussion, the activities of the platform have been vital to identifying systemic problems, as well as working together with Kazakh and int'l NGOs to find joint solutions

THIS year Kazakhstan is marking its 30th anniversary as an independent state. We have come a long way over the last three decades. Our economy has greatly expanded and our political processes are unrecognisable compared to when we just gained our independence from the Soviet Union. A critical element of Kazakhstan's development has been the growth of our civil society, especially the increase in the number of non-governmental organisations (NGOs). It is hard to believe that in the early 1990s there were only approximately 400 NGOs in Kazakhstan. The story is much different today. By now, the number of active registered NGOs in Kazakhstan has increased 40-fold to around 16,000. Many operate in the sphere of support for socially vulnerable segments of the population or issues related to the protection of the rights and legal interests of citizens and organisations. This dynamic is of course most welcome. A developed civil society is the foundation of any modern and thriving state. It provides an effective dialogue platform, as well as a communication bridge between representatives of the government and the public.

Therefore, the government of Kazakhstan has continued to support actively NGOs, including financially. In 2020, grants were provided worth 1.8 billion tenge (over 4.3 million US dollars). Most of the funding went towards supporting the projects related to the welfare and development of children and young people. Approximately 305.4 million tenge ($740,000) was allocated to promote directly the development of civil society, including increasing the efficiency of the activities of non-governmental organisations. While substantial progress has been made, we are of course aware of the need to continue to develop the space for NGOs to thrive.

For this reason, the government takes active interest in this endeavour. Since 2003, a Civil Forum, which serves as a platform for ensuring a dialogue between the state and NGOs, is regularly organised in our capital. The ninth Civil Forum held last November offered 12 virtual meetings between heads of ministries and representatives of NGOs. The participants discussed the main directions of the new concept for the development of civil society, citizen participation in decision-making, and mechanisms and opportunities for public scrutiny of government work, as well as other topics.

Another important tool for effective engagement between government and civil society is the Consultative and Advisory Body "Dialogue Platform for the Human Dimension", which was set up at the initiative of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Kazakhstan in 2013 to further consolidate opportunities for the NGOs to engage in direct dialogue with representatives of the Government and Parliament on the issues of human rights and democratic reforms. Meetings are held once a quarter under my chairmanship, with the participation of representatives of NGOs, members of parliament, representatives of the Human Rights Commission under the President of Kazakhstan, the Supreme Court, the Constitutional Council and relevant ministries, as well as representatives of our international partners, including the UN Development Programme, Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, OSCE, the European Union, foreign diplomatic missions, US-AID, Penal Reform International, etc.

The relevance of this platform increased considerably with the announcement by Kazakhstan's President Kassym-Jomart Tokayev of the concept of a "listening state", implying stronger focus on the government's engagement with the civil society, and implementation since 2019 of three packages of reforms in the field of human rights and further democratisation of political processes in the country. Through open and transparent discussion, the activities of the platform have been vital to identifying systemic problems, as well as working together with Kazakh and international NGOs to find joint solutions. Our meetings provide a useful arrangement to discuss recommendations of the UN convention committees on Kazakhstan's implementation of international obligations to protect human rights.

Let me also give you two examples of issues, which had been closely reviewed by the Dialogue Platform and resulted in adoption of new legislative acts. One is the updated law on peaceful assemblies in Kazakhstan. The key change is that since last year NGOs or other groups that want to hold such a meeting need only to notify the local authorities about it five days before the actual event instead of applying for a permit. Another example is that last year the Article 130 of the country's Criminal Code, namely on libel, was, at last, decriminalised. Both these topics had been regularly and vigorously discussed at the Dialogue Platform's meetings.

The necessity for such a platform became especially clear earlier this year, when members of the Kazakh civil society raised the issue of the suspension of a few NGOs following inspections by the tax authorities. It was recommended at the meeting held on 26th January 2021 that the suspended organisations should apply to the higher tax authorities and appeal the decision. Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of Kazakhstan, Mukhtar Tileuberdi, assured that he would take this issue under his control.

Following a thorough review with the tax authorities, only a week later, on 3 February, all charges against the affected NGOs were dropped and the decision to suspend their activities was annulled. This situation has demonstrated why it is so important for the government and the civil society to have clear lines of communication. Without the Dialogue Platform for the Human Dimension and the open conversations between civil society and Kazakh government, the issue of the suspension of NGOs may not have been resolved so efficiently. Undoubtedly, lessons need to be learned following this case, but I believe I can say with some confidence that the engagement between civil society and our government is currently tangible and practical. Of course, we will not stop here. Last year, the President approved the Concept for the Development of Civil Society in Kazakhstan until 2025 last year. Its aim is to strengthen the system of partnership between the state, business, and civil society, as well as to facilitate further political transformation and modernisation in Kazakhstan. I believe we have a solid foundation to move steadily in this direction.

Though Pakistan was created on the basis of La Ilaha Illallah, yet people from diverse ethnicities, religious affiliations and backgrounds accepted the idea of Pakistan and accepted it keeping in view the traditionalist narrow approach of Hindu leadership in the subcontinent. Today Pakistan is home to diverse ethnicities, religious and cultural backgrounds and linguistic affiliations. Kartarpur Corridor is one such example where Sikhs from across the globe visit Pakistan

AFTER EIGHT decades of Pakistan Resolution, this country has established itself as one of the most important players in the global system. Being a developing state, we continue to progress with an unstable, yet progressive and evolving politico-economic journey after more than 70 years of independence. Despite losing East Pakistan, fighting an unending war with India on Kashmir and spending more than two decades in war on terror, this country is still sovereign enough to strive for peace, economic prosperity and a dignified global repute in the international system. Over the course of history, Pakistan has produced the greatest sons of the soil across diverse sectors.

From the founder of Pakistan Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah to the current Premier Imran Khan, the greatness of Pakistan lies in the enthusiasm and passion of its citizens to strive for the honor, dignity and esteem of Pakistan.

While keeping in view our strengths as a nation, we need to be well aware of our weaknesses and drawbacks that has over the time halted our capacity to progress as a nation. Individual achievements become the pride of the nation, yet it is the collective efforts and accomplishments that makes a state significant in the international system. Founder of the Nation Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah had categorically set forward the direction of the nation.

He highlighted that, "You are free; you are free to go to your temples. You are free to go to your mosques or to any other places of worship in this State of Pakistan. You may belong to any religion, caste or creed—that has nothing to do with the business of the state". Words of Quaid-e-Azam established the identity of people of this state at the time of creation of Pakistan, yet unfortunately over the course of history, we as a nation lost the will, courage and direction to work for the prosperity of Pakistan. Social, Religious and cultural fundamentalism has sown the seed of identity clashes amongst the people of this state that has impacted the progress of Pakistan.

It is time for Pakistani political parties, its institutions and its people to reprioritize their goals. Economic prosperity, culture of tolerance and acceptability is the only forward for the state of Pakistan. Geographically located at a highly securitized region, we as a nation have to remain vigilant and cautious. Economic interdependence and peace is the only way forward, yet it cannot be at the cost of national sovereignty. Peace is desired yet defense of the state is a priority and every Pakistani stands behind our security forces, if the existence of Pakistan is challenged.

What needs to be highlighted and acknowledged is that every year 23rd March is celebrated with great zeal and enthusiasm, yet the actual message is overlooked, particularly by the youth of Pakistan which accounts for more than 60% of the population. Living in the times of Information warfare, efforts are required to strengthen our ideological basis. 23rd March reminds us of the commitment and dedication of the Muslims of subcontinent to create a separate homeland.

Though Pakistan was created on the basis of La Ilaha Illallah, yet people from diverse ethnicities, religious affiliations and backgrounds accepted the idea of Pakistan and accepted it keeping in view the traditionalist narrow approach of Hindu leadership in the subcontinent. Today Pakistan is home to diverse ethnicities, religious and cultural backgrounds and linguistic affiliations. Kartarpur Corridor is one such example where Sikhs from across the globe visit Pakistan.

Religious, cultural and sectarian harmony needs to be promoted as diversion will only create conflict amongst ourselves, that will not only impact the progress and development of state but will also passively impact the global repute of the country.

While highlighting the actual meanings of Pakistan Day, let's not forget our Kashmiri brothers and sisters who have been fighting for decades against the Indian brutalities. Leaders like Syed Ali Gillani, Mir Wayez Umar Farooq, Dr. Qasim Faktu and Asiya Andrabi are the pride of this state and their sacrifices and affection for Pakistan will always be highlighted at all national and international forums. This nation is indebted to such heroes who despite being under the worst oppression have always chanted the slogan "Hum Pakistani Hain-Pakistan Hamara hai".

Pakistan is in dire need of economic prosperity yet we as a nation need to be united, focused and committed to our cause of making Pakistan one of the greatest nations of the world. Our destiny is clear and now it is responsibility of our leadership to negate any ideas of diversions and intolerance and unite this nation for the achievement of a common purpose. An economically developed and ideologically strengthened Pakistan should be our resolution as a nation on this 23rd March.

Yates climbs to victory and takes lead in Catalonia

VALLTER: Adam Yates surged away from a powerful lead group on the final climb to win the third stage of the Tour of Catalonia and take the overall race lead. With five kilometres to go, the Englishman joined a small group that broke from the remnants of the peloton. He then accelerated away with two kilometres to go. "I just felt good," Yates said. "I had enough momentum and enough speed to go straight past." Esteban Chaves gave chase, but Yates built a decisive lead on the snow-flanked final hairpins to the finish at the ski station of Valter 2000. Yates completed the 203.5km stage in 5 hours and 58 seconds, with Chaves, a Colombian who rides for ColEchange, 13 seconds back.

The national expert committee on the coronavirus vaccine has advised that people suffering from fever and currently Covid positive should not be administered the AstraZeneca vaccine. According to guidelines, a gap of 12 weeks should be given after first dose of the vaccine. Healthcare workers and citizens will receive the Covid-19 vaccine. Pakistan has secured 17 million doses of the Oxford-AstraZeneca COVID-19 vaccine under the COVAX arrangement. The first consignment of seven million doses of AstraZeneca Covid vaccine will reach Pakistan before April. The next 10 million doses of the vaccine will be dispatched to Pakistan before June. Pakistan will receive an overall 45 million COVID-19 vaccine doses under the COVAX scheme this year. The WHO has declared that AstraZeneca vaccine has been safe for people with 18 years of age to 65 years and above.

It is pertinent to mention here that the Drug Regulatory Authority of Pakistan (DRAP) had granted approval to the Russian vaccine for Covid-19, for emergency use in February. Sputnik V could be administered to a person of 18 and above it. The vaccine requires to store at minus-18 Celsius temperature, according to the sources at DRAP.

Thai protesters rally in Bangkok for royal reforms

DNA

BANGKOK: More than a thousand Thai pro-democracy protesters took over a major Bangkok intersection on Wednesday, defying authorities in the first major rally since police used rubber bullets against demonstrators over the weekend. Thailand's protest movement kicked off in July, calling for the resignation of Prime Minister Prayut Chan-O-Cha's government and a rewrite of a military-scripted constitution. But the most controversial demand is to reform the untouchable monarchy, including the abolition of the kingdom's draconian royal defamation laws. So far more than 70 protesters and student leaders have been charged for allegedly insulting the monarchy and about a dozen are remanded in prison. If convicted, they face up to 15 years in jail per charge. On Wednesday, protesters gathered in Bangkok's main shopping district, chanting "release our friends" and "abolish 112" - a reference to the lese majeste law in Thailand's criminal code that shields the monarchy from criticism. A stage in the middle of the road had a huge banner that read "Monarchy reform" while scores of demonstrators held pictures of detainees and glued them onto street signs. "It does not matter how many of our friends are arrested - 10 or a hundred - we will not stop coming out," Benja Apan, one of the protest leaders facing several royal defamation charges, told the crowd. "It cannot stop our spirit. We will fight together. It will be good if our friends can be out fighting together with us." A heavy police presence, including riot squads, was building in the vicinity in the early evening. Ahead of the rally, National Police deputy spokesman Kissana Phathanachareon warned the protest was illegal because of coronavirus restrictions and officers would "enforce the law step-by-step". On Saturday, Thai police used water cannon and rubber bullets outside Bangkok's Grand Palace after demonstrators broke through a barricade of shipping containers. Twenty protesters and 13 police officers were injured in the clash, according to a local emergency centre, while authorities said 20 people were arrested and seven have been charged with lese majeste. Bangkok artist Chanaradee, 26 - who came out Wednesday to the Ratchaprasong intersection - said she wasn't put off by the police tactics. Instead, she is angry about the "brutal" escalating use of force because her 70-year-old father was injured while running from rubber bullets. "I'm very disappointed and sad. My dad went to the mob alone (on Saturday)... he hurt himself. He fell over," she media. added that her father had been taking part in pro-democracy demonstrations since 1973, the year of a massive student uprising against a military dictator. The fact "he still needs to do it (today) shows Thailand is not going anywhere," Chanaradee said, though she added that those in the pro-democracy movement today are able to talk about royal reforms. "We are making progress. It's important we stay hopeful."

Myanmar: 7-year-old girl 'killed by junta'

YANGON: A seven-year-old girl was shot dead by junta forces in Myanmar's second-largest city of Mandalay on Tuesday, becoming the youngest victim in the crackdown against the Feb. 1 military coup, her family said. Khin Myo Chit was sitting on her father's lap when soldiers entered their home and tried to shoot him, her sister told the Myanmar Now news website. Protests have continued in Myanmar since Tatmadaw - the official name of the Burmese military - seized control. According to the rights group Save the Children, at least 20 children have been killed since the takeover. Aye Chan San, the victim's sister, said junta forces raided the Chan Mya Thazi Township around 4 p.m. local time (0930GMT). "They asked if everyone in the house was there. My father responded that that was everyone. Khin Myo Chit was sitting on our father's lap. One of them said my father was lying and shot at him," she said. But the bullet hit her sister instead. She was rushed to a hospital but succumbed to the wounds. She said that later her 19-year-old brother was also detained. - Foreign Desk

FIFA extends ban on former president Blatter until 2028

SPORTS DESK

LAUSANNE: FIFA banned its former president Sepp Blatter until 2028 on Wednesday after handing him a new suspension of six years and eight months for receiving huge bonuses. Former FIFA secretary-general Jerome Valcke also had his existing suspension extended by the same amount. The new bans will only come into force when the current bans on Blatter and Valcke for corruption, which last till October this year and October 2025, end. FIFA's Ethics Committee said it had also fined each man one million Swiss francs. Blatter, who is 85, received 23 million Swiss francs ($24.6 million, 20.7 million euros) in "extraordinary bonuses" linked to the 2010 World Cup in South Africa and the 2014 World Cup in Brazil as well as the Confederations Cup tournament in Brazil that preceded it, the Ethics Committee said in a summary of its decision. Valcke, the 60-year-old Frenchman who was Blatter's right-hand man during his 17-year reign at the head of football's world governing body, received 30 million Swiss francs over the same period, the committee said. FIFA said Blatter and Valcke had violated the Code of Ethics by "offering and accepting gifts or other benefits" and through "abuse of position". It said in a statement: "The investigations into Messrs Blatter and Valcke covered various charges, in particular concerning bonus payments in relation to FIFA competitions that were paid to top FIFA management officials, various amendments and extensions of employment contracts, as well as reimbursement by FIFA of private legal costs in the case of Mr Valcke." Blatter was forced to stand down as FIFA president in 2015 and was originally banned by FIFA for eight years, later reduced to six, over ethics breaches when he was found to have authorised a two-million-euro "disloyal payment" to former UEFA president Michel Platini.

Iran says UNRC resolution lack's legitimacy

TEHRAN: Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesman Saeed Khatibzadeh said in remarks on Wednesday that certain European countries had been behind the resolution, which was passed owing to "ill-founded, non-consensual, and internationally illegitimate votes." On March 23, the final day of the 46th regular session of the Human Rights Council, the Council adopted the resolution by a vote of 21 in favor, 12 against and 14 abstentions, and extended the mandate of the special rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Iran, Javid Rehmam, for a year. The countries that voted 'yes' mainly included the European states and governments considered as vassal states for Western powers such as Fiji, the Marshal

Iran slams IAEA chief's comments

VIENNA: Iran's permanent representative to Vienna-based international organizations has criticized Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) Rafael Grossi for his latest remarks about the 2015 landmark nuclear pact, terming the comments as unconstructive. Kazem Gharibabadi made the remarks on Wednesday in reaction to Grossi's interview with American weekly news magazine Newsweek in which he said "detailed and technical discussions" are needed to ascertain the location of Iran's undeclared uranium and that the issue is "totally connected" to the revival of the nuclear agreement, officially known as Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA).

Islands, and Bahrain. Khatibzadeh criticized the resolution for extending the mandate of a rapporteur whose reports fail to make any mention of the deaths of dozens of Iranian children and hundreds of patients lacking access to medicine due to the American sanctions. He said all anti-Iran resolutions adopted since March 2011 have been anchored in unsubstantiated allegations, and that Tehran has frequently termed the appointment of a special human rights rapporteur for the country as an inexcusable and unconstructive move. "Countries that abuse other nations' rights can neither portray themselves as advocates of human rights, nor can they judge other states on the situation of human rights. They must, instead, be held accountable for their own crimes regarding blatant violations of human rights," the official said. He underlined that Iran has always lived up to its commitments towards its own citizens and the international community despite being subject to US economic terrorism. Khatibzadeh said Iran is a religious democracy and strives for the promotion of human rights at national, regional and international levels within the framework of its religious obligations and Constitution. The Iranian official criticized the sponsors of the resolution for their instrumental and political use of human rights, and for refusing to acknowledge the beliefs and cultural values particular to each nation.

Hong Kong halts use of Pfizer vaccine

FOREIGN DESK

HONG KONG: Hong Kong has stopped its rollout of the Pfizer-BioNTech Covid-19 shot after being alerted to a packaging issue. Authorities say they are acting out of caution and do not think there is a safety risk.

The government said on Wednesday that it had been informed by a local distributor of the vaccine that there was a problem with how the vials in one batch were sealed. Officials responded by ordering vaccination sites to temporarily suspend injections of the batch, numbered 210102, as well as a second batch being administered in the semi-autonomous region.

"For the sake of precaution, the current vaccination must be suspended during the period of investigation," Hong Kong's government said in a statement.

It's not clear how many shots were affected by the decision, but the suspension means that the only vaccine currently being offered to residents is China's Sinovac vaccine. Some people took to social media to complain that their vaccination appointments had been canceled.

Three dead in earthquake in Xinjiang

DNA

BEIJING: A 5.4-magnitude earthquake that struck in China's western Xinjiang region before dawn Wednesday left three people dead, damaged roofs and forced the evacuation of hundreds, state media reported.

The earthquake hit Baicheng county in the north-western Aksu prefecture at 5.14 am, according to the China Earthquake Networks Center.

Footage showed buildings swaying in the dark, leaving some houses with their roofs caved in afterward.

"The earthquake caused three deaths and 65 houses were damaged," state broadcaster CCTV reported, adding that there were 10 aftershocks of which the largest magnitude was 3.4.

After houses and livestock sheds collapsed, leaders of an affected village set up a temporary resettlement site.

China is regularly hit by earthquakes, especially in its mountainous western and southwestern regions.

In February 2003, a powerful 6.8-magnitude quake killed 268 people in Xinjiang and caused significant damage.

Following Wednesday's earthquake, train services between regional capital Urumqi and areas such as Hotan and Aksu were delayed, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

A powerful 7.9-magnitude quake in southwest China's Sichuan province in 2008 left 87,000 people dead or missing.

Turkey, US plan for broader ties

BRUSSELS: After brief talks, Turkey's Foreign Minister Mevlut Cavusoglu said on Wednesday that he and his US counterpart plan to hold a more comprehensive meeting in either the US or Turkey.

"We agreed with the US secretary of state to hold a broader meeting in either the US or Turkey," Cavusoglu told reporters in Brussels.

Cavusoglu's remarks came after he met with Anthony Blinken on the sidelines of a NATO foreign ministers' meeting. He said today's meeting lasted less than an hour.

Stressing that they had a constructive meeting with Blinken, Cavusoglu said there are differences of opinion between the two sides on certain issues.

The presence in the US of members of the Fetullah Terrorist Organization (FETO), which plotted a coup attempt in Turkey, and the US support for the YPG/PKK terror group have negatively affected the bilateral relations, he said.

HRW's Armenian POW report biased: Azerbaijani ombudsman

DNA

BAKU: Azerbaijani Human Rights Commissioner Sabina Aliyeva has said that the recent Human Rights Watch (HRW) on the mistreatment of Armenian POWs held in Azerbaijan reflects a biased approach and misleads the international community.

Aliyeva made the remarks, while commenting on the allegations of mistreatment of the Armenian POWs in HRW's report dated March 19, 2021.

"We regret to note that the recent report of the Human Rights Watch (HRW) alleging the ill-treatment towards Armenian POWs detained in Azerbaijan reflects a biased approach and confuses the international community," Aliyeva said.

She noted that any report on such sensitive topics as conflicts, their consequences, POWs, alleged violations of International Humanitarian Law, etc., should be based only on verified facts and substantiated arguments to follow the objectivity principle and avoid a one-sided stance.

"The materials and facts provided by reliable sources such as independent international and domestic human rights organizations should be referred to as well. Unfortunately, we do not see these principles in the HRW report. On the contrary, we again witness double standards in this respect and distortion of the truth and undeniable facts," the rights commissioner added.

Aliyeva added that Azerbaijan expected HRW to examine and interview the former Azerbaijani POWs who may provide eye-witnessed detailed information about the ill-treatment towards them as well as the other POWs with whom they were captured or shared cells in the Armenian custody.

"At least, HRW could get acquainted with the report of the Azerbaijani Ombudsman on treatment towards the Azerbaijani POWs and hostages in the Armenian custody before issuing their own report. The Azerbaijani Ombudsman's report reflects former Azerbaijani POWs' and hostages' testimonies on how they were treated during their captivity. For example during their interviewing personally by the Ombudsman, one said that he was prodded with a sharp metal rod, and the other one stated he was subjected to electric shocks, and one was repeatedly burned with a cigarette lighter," the commissioner stressed.

Aliyeva noted that during a face-to-face meeting with the Ombudsman, "one of those released captives, a military servant, said that he was severely wounded in his left leg and right eye (a bullet entered a lower part of his eye and exit the oral cavity) as a result of a fire from a large-calibre weapon during the hostilities. That night, due to bleeding in the vein, the Armenian doctor put stitches on the palate for about 3 hours without using painkillers and anesthetics. In addition, in hospital, nurses injected him with an alcohol syringe and demanded that he repeat what they had said, but when he refused to do so, he continued to be subjected to further torture and other ill-treatment".

During the captivity, they were not given any opportunity to communicate with their family members and relatives, she added. She noted that the report of the Ombudsman on ill-treatment of the Azerbaijani POWs also reflected the case of three Azerbaijani civilians who were taken hostage by Armenia.

"One of them - Hasan Hasanov was subjected to torture and brutally killed. The other two, Dilgam Asgarov and Shahbaz Guliyev, were subjected to different physical abuses during 6 years period about which many times the Ombudsman raised issues before relevant international organizations. After their release, the Ombudsman interviewed them one by one and the detailed information about their testimonies was placed in the report," Aliyeva added.

The rights commissioner said that the aforesaid are just some of the cases brought to HRW attention. "More detailed information can be found in the last report of the Azerbaijani Ombudsman on ill-treatment towards the Azerbaijani POWs in captivity of Armenia. The links of videos, which show undeniable facts of torture and ill-treatment towards the Azerbaijani POWs by the Armenian soldiers, are also reflected in the report," Aliyeva said.

Israel military hits ' Hamas positions ' in Gaza

GAZA: The Israeli military says it carried out night-time raids against Hamas positions in the Gaza Strip in response to rocket fire from the besieged Palestinian enclave. A witness in Gaza told the media that the Israeli military hit Hamas positions in the southern parts of the Strip just after 2:30am (00:30 GMT) on Wednesday.

The Associated Press also reported an explosion over Gaza in the early hours of Wednesday.

The Israeli military said its fighter jets and attack helicopters struck a Hamas rocket manufacturing site and a military post "in response to the rocket fired from Gaza into Israel tonight". According to local Palestinian news agency Maan, the site southwest of Gaza City was struck by five missiles. Another site east of Deir al-Balah in the central Gaza Strip was also targeted.

An Israeli military spokesperson told AFP a rocket from Gaza had hit an open field in southern Israel. There were no immediate reports of damage or casualties caused by the rocket, the first fired from the Palestinian enclave since January, and there was no immediate claim of responsibility. - Foreign Desk

France to reopen embassy in Libya after seven years

FOREIGN DESK

PARIS: France will reopen its embassy in the Libyan capital Tripoli next Monday to show its support for the North African country's new unity government, President Emmanuel Macron said on Tuesday after meeting the head of the interim presidency council.

Libya's unity government led by Prime Minister Abdul Hamid Dbeibah took office on March 16 from two rival administrations that ruled its eastern and western regions, completing a smooth transition of power after 10 years of violence and chaos.

"We will do everything that is in our power to defend this sovereignty and stability agenda," Macron said alongside Mohammed al-Menfi, the head of the Libyan presidency council in Paris. "Monday our embassy in Tripoli will reopen and our ambassador will be back on your territory," he said.

Paris closed its embassy after evacuating some 50 French and British nationals as fighting broke out in Tripoli in July 2014. It based its ambassador in neighbouring Tunisia, the capital of Tunisia.

Menfi was making his first overseas visit since taking his post, which was created following a UN-brokered process.

Prime Minister Dbeibah and an interim three-member presidency council were selected at UN-sponsored talks in February.

The new transitional executive emerged from the UN peace process that was launched in November in Tunisia, then voted on in Geneva. It was ratified by Libya's parliament on March 10.

Oil-rich Libya has been torn by war since a NATO-backed uprising led to the toppling and killing of longtime ruler Muammar Gaddafi in 2011. Former French President Nicolas Sarkozy was the chief advocate of the NATO-led military campaign that resulted in Gaddafi's overthrow.

"I want here to show you all my support and that of France for the new Libyan unified authorities that emerged from the transition process," said Macron.

"We have a debt towards Libya and the Libyans for a decade of disorder," said Macron, adding that regional stability would be impossible without peace in Libya.

Germany pulls Easter virus shutdown

DNA

BERLIN: German Chancellor Angela Merkel on Wednesday reversed a planned strict Easter shutdown, the chief of her CDU party said, amid massive criticism of the government's pandemic management.

Merkel and the leaders of Germany's 16 states had agreed at marathon talks on Monday that almost all shops were to be closed on April 1-5, with only grocers allowed to open on Saturday April 3.

But they have now scrapped that measure, instead appealing to the public to stay home over the Easter weekend. CDU chief Armin Laschet told a regional parliament meeting in the state of North Rhine-Westphalia.

The leaders had agreed the measure was "a mistake and not enforceable in this form", he said.

Merkel had called an unexpected crisis meeting on Wednesday morning as a backlash over the pandemic measures sent her CDU party's ratings plummeting.

Ahead of a Merkel press conference at 1130 GMT, Der Spiegel news magazine said the chancellor had also admitted the Easter shutdown was a "mistake".

'Greed', 'capitalism' behind vaccine successes

FOREIGN DESK

LONDON: British Prime Minister Boris Johnson has told legislators from his governing Conservative Party that "capitalism" and "greed" were behind the United Kingdom's rapid COVID-19 vaccination programme.

Johnson's comments on Tuesday, reported by The Sun newspaper, were made during a closed Zoom meeting with Conservative MPs in which he also praised pharmaceutical companies for developing vaccines at speed.

"The reason we have the vaccine success is because of capitalism, because of greed my friends,"

Johnson was quoted as saying. Johnson later attempted to backtrack on the comments, reportedly telling his fellow Conservatives to "forget" what he said and adding that he regretted his initial remarks.

The UK on Tuesday observed a national day of reflection, a year after it first went into a COVID-19 lockdown.

The pandemic has killed more than 125,000 people in the UK and plunged the economy into recession.

At the time of publication, the prime minister's office had not responded to Al Jazeera's request for comment.

Home Secretary Priti Patel told

UK broadcaster Sky News on Wednesday that she had not been in the meeting.

The UK is gradually easing lockdown restrictions under a plan underpinned by the success of the national vaccination campaign, which has seen more than 28 million people receive a first dose to date - one of the quickest rollouts in the world.

But tensions are running high with the European Union over supply as the bloc is considering imposing a vaccine exports ban on the UK.

It is understood that the move is aimed at ensuring the EU does not export more vaccines than it imports.

On Tuesday, an EU official said the European Commission will extend the bloc's powers to potentially block vaccine exports to the UK - and other areas with much higher vaccination rates. The measures will also block companies from backloading contracted supplies.

The EU's own vaccination campaign, plagued by shortages and delays, lags behind the UK and other nations including the United States and Israel.

Johnson's comments, which an unidentified source told The Sun were not connected to the EU future, could inflame the row.

His remarks also drew criticism online, as politicians and public figures took to Twitter to condemn the prime minister's reported sentiments.

Andy Burnham, member of the opposition Labour Party and mayor of Greater Manchester, tweeted: "Celebrating 'greed' in a pandemic? Same old Tories."

Labour MP Peter Kyle said vaccines had been delivered by "scientific brilliance and astonishingly hard work".

"Two traits that elude [Boris Johnson]," he tweeted.

Francis O' Grady, general secretary of the Trades Union Congress (TUC), which represents unions in the UK, said: "What an insulting way to thank our brilliant scientists, researchers, NHS staff and volunteers."

Bill passed allowing Putin 2 more terms

FOREIGN DESK

MOSCOW: Russia's lower chamber of the parliament - the State Duma - adopted on Wednesday the third reading of a bill, allowing acting President Vladimir Putin to run for two more terms.

Apart from resetting previous terms of acting presidency, the bill sets requirements for presidential nominees - such as Russian citizenship and a minimum age of 35. The nominees must have permanently resided in Russia for at least 25 years, and never had citizenship or a residence permit of another state.

This provision does not apply to Russians who "previously had the citizenship of a state that was adopted or part of which was adopted in the Russian Federation under the federal constitutional law." Also, the bill introduces an age limit of 30 for a person who holds the chair position of the Central Election Commission, as well as the condition of being a Russian citizen.

Last year, Russia held a vote on constitutional amendments, and following the vote, Russian lawmakers started making the existing legislation in line with the new version of the constitution.

YEREVAN: The Armenian parliament on Wednesday lifted the state of war declared in the aftermath of soaring tensions with neighbor Azerbaijan in the Nagorno-Karabakh region.

The development comes as Armenian Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan called snap elections in the country after months of anti-government protests sparked by his handling of last year's Nagorno-Karabakh conflict. On Sept. 27, 2020, Pashinyan declared war with Azerbaijan.

Relations between the former Soviet republics have been tense since 1991 when the Armenian military occupied Nagorno-Karabakh, a territory recognized as part of Azerbaijan, and seven adjacent regions.

When new clashes erupted in September last year, the Armenian army launched attacks on civilians and Azerbaijani forces and violated several humanitarian ceasefire agreements.

During the 44-day conflict, Azerbaijan liberated several cities and nearly 300 settlements and villages from the Armenian occupation.

The two countries signed a Russian-brokered agreement last November to end fighting and work toward a comprehensive resolution.

The truce is seen as a victory for Azerbaijan and a defeat for Armenia, whose armed forces have been withdrawing in line with the agreement.

Uzbekistan: Vaccination to start on April

DNA

TASHKENT: Mass vaccination against coronavirus will begin on April 1 in Uzbekistan, the Deputy Head of the Sanitary-Epidemiological Welfare and Public Health Authority Nurmat Atabekov told media.

According to him, at the first stage, it is planned to vaccinate 330 thousand people using the AstraZeneca (Covishield) vaccine. On March 17, Uzbekistan received 660,000 doses (two doses per person) of this drug as part of the global COVAX program. The next batch of AstraZeneca vaccine is due in early April (WHO and UNICEF representatives said that this will happen in May).

Nurmat Atabekov said that the date of April 1 was chosen taking into account the preparation of the primary health care system for vaccination. In total, in Uzbekistan, at the first stage, it is planned to vaccinate over 4.1 million people. Vaccination will be voluntary in an approved manner, for those aged 65-74 years, 75-84 years old, 85 years old and older, health workers, citizens with chronic diseases (18-65 years old), school teachers, preschool education personnel, military personnel and employees law enforcement.

US, Pak drug authority digitize records

SHUJAAT HAMZA

ISLAMABAD: The United States Mission to Pakistan, in cooperation with the Government of Pakistan, presented a new records management system to digitize more than four million records for the Drug Regulatory Authority of Pakistan (DRAP). The system, developed by the U.S. Agency for International Development's (USAID) Global Health Supply Chain program, will create digital archives and barcode paper files, which are critical to accountable tracking of DRAP's files. DRAP sought USAID's support to digitize the records, and USAID provided training to the DRAP staff on records management best practices. "This digitized system that USAID and the Government of Pakistan have created modernizes, streamlines, and harmonizes data archives, which directly supports data accessibility and visibility," said USAID Deputy Mission Director Michael Nehrbass. "It will also ensure transparency of information and records management, which ultimately will help ensure access to quality-assured medicines and commodities in Pakistan."

Fawad Ch. reiterates offer for dialogue

RAJA PERVAIZ

ISLAMABAD: Minister for Science and Technology Chaudhry Fawad Hussain Wednesday again invited the opposition parties for holding a meaningful dialogue on the much-needed electoral reforms. Talking to media persons after signing ceremony of a Memorandum of Understanding between Pakistan Engineering Council (PEC) and Chinese Shenzhen University, he said "I once again invite the two parties, Pakistan Peoples Party and Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz, to sit with the government on electoral reforms, so no one can cast doubt on the fairness of the elections in future." On directions of Prime Minister Imran Khan, he said, National Assembly Speaker Asad Qaiser had constituted a parliamentary committee on electoral reforms. He said the government wanted to move seriously for the electoral reforms in the best interest of the country. Fawad Chaudhry said the opposition should avoid undermining the parliament. He was of the view that if the political parties had not taken the offer of the government seriously it would be harmful to the country. "Our interests are linked with the interest of the country," he added.

Cotton farmers could benefit from Chinese experience

DNA

BEIJING: Chinese experts in an online seminar elaborated how Xinjiang Uygur Autonomous Region excel in cotton production in the world and how Pakistani cotton farmers could benefit from their experience. According to China Economic Net (CEN), Dong Hezhong, principal researcher at Shandong Academy of Agricultural Sciences, said that seed research to pick the right seed for right atmosphere, cotton-peanut intercropping and plant architecture to allow for mechanical harvest enabled Xinjiang to enhance its share in China's cotton production from less than 4% in 1949 to 76% as of today. The seminar was aimed at bolstering China-Pakistan cooperation in seed industry. The experts discussed how Pakistan could learn from China to increase production of rice, maize, soybean and cotton, especially by adopting the Chinese techniques of intercropping and double cropping.

ATHENS: The object of the axis is to highlight the dynamic elements of today's Greek society through the creativity and actions of groups, individuals, organizations, local government organizations, universities, research centers, cultural organizations, etc. At the same time, the maximum promotion of modern Greece will be sought, abroad, with presence in international exhibitions and international organizations, under the general umbrella: "1821-2021: This is modern Greece".

"Erasing a piece from the past is like erasing a corresponding piece from the future." George Seferis Many times we hear the phrase around us: "this country is not saved". Fortunately for all of us, our past denies this fatalistic and simplistic approach to the present. Many may end up in this aphorism under the pressure of the evils of the Greek state. But the bottom line is that we are here to move on. This is probably how the dissatisfaction of the Greek soul is expressed. Because the people of this country have learned to look for open horizons. And when they do not find them on land, they look for them at sea. When reality does not offer them, they look for them in the imagination. In intellectual and scientific creation. What is certain is that when a stranger hears this phrase he is surprised. Because Greece has progressed. And many find it difficult to understand how.

Now we can all take the next step together. Studying our course today, let us chart new paths.

Andreas Papastavrou Ambassador of Greece Issues a special message on the occasion

ISLAMABAD: Andreas Papastavrou Ambassador of Greece to the Islamic republic of Pakistan has issued a special message on the occasion of National Day of Greece. Here is the text of his message. 'It is a privilege to serve as Ambassador of Greece to Pakistan. In this context, it is also a unique honour to address this message of celebration to the people of this friendly country, marking the Bicentenary of the start of the National Struggle for the Independence of Greece. The history of Greece spans millennia and has known countless moments of glory. The National Struggle for Independence is one of those moments, which we are profoundly proud of.

Andreas Papastavrou Ambassador of Greece

The enormous sacrifices of our forefathers have paved the way for the creation of a democratic state, inspired by the noblest ideals of humanity, in dignity and respect for all. Having sailed in the stormy seas of the 19th and 20th centuries and having contributed more than her share to the creation of a free world, Greece is now celebrating two hundred years of her existence, as a vibrant, modern State. She is facing courageously the challenges of our times and endeavouring for a bright future. Let us all rejoice with the people of Greece on this day of celebration and let us work side by side, for a bright future is our common quest'.

Influence of Shanghai Spirit continues to grow

DNA

BEIJING: Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) has firmly established itself as an influential and responsible participant in the modern system of international relations, said Secretary-general of the SCO, Vladimir Norov. In recent years, through the joint efforts of all parties, the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) has successfully created a solid legal framework and effective mechanisms for multilateral cooperation in the fight against international terrorism, separatism and extremism, drug trafficking, organized crime, and ensuring information security, as well as strengthening trade, economic, cultural and humanitarian cooperation, he said in an article contributed to China Watch, a think tank powered by China Daily.

A fundamentally important feature of the organization is that, while fully preserving and respecting the autonomy of its members in their internal affairs and foreign policy, partnership within the SCO is based on active and cooperative interaction, joint determination of areas of overlapping interests and equal importance of opinions. Mutual understanding, equality and coordination are the key elements defining the SCO. The organization does not pursue the goal of forming a military-political alliance, is not targeted against any third countries, and does not support ideological and confrontational positions in addressing international and regional development problems.

The SCO members consistently adhere to the principle of openness in cooperation with all interested countries and international organizations, and adhere to the goals and principles of the United Nations. The interaction between the UN and the SCO has already become a successful example of effective cooperation between a global and regional organization. UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres has stressed the SCO is a strong partner of the UN, a leader in regional diplomacy and a promoter of cooperation in addressing the most pressing peace and security challenges facing Eurasia. The SCO Development Strategy 2025, adopted in 2015, aims to ensure the successful implementation of its programmes and plans for the development of multilateral cooperation in the economy, finance, investment, trade and transport project activities are being implemented.
