Electricity cost rejected: PALSP

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan Association of Large Steel Producers urge the Govt not to increase the cost of electricity for the steel sector which is already facing a crisis like situation.

The govt has made this announcement under the diktat of IMF to increase the cost of electricity by Rs 5.65 per unit before October this year and it will be 36% increase in the cost of electricity. Early this year, the Govt had increased the cost of electricity by 16%.

This decision will have disastrous consequences for steel industry of the country in particular and the local steel industry in general. Steel is energy intensive sector and one of the major consumers of electricity and this major increase in electricity cost will create crisis like situation for the struggling steel sector.

In the month of February this year, the govt. increased the energy tariffs by issuing SRO No. 192 dated 12th February 2021. By this SRO Rs. 1.95 / kwh was increased in variable charges and Rs. 40 / kw / month increase in fixed charges. The consumer suffers extra burden and pay heavy fixed charges for electricity connection. Where all cost of distribution system (grid, cable, substation, transformer etc.) has to be paid by consumer. without homes

LAHORE: Food, shelter and clothing have been described as the basic human needs by almost all psychologists and sociologists from the early times as these are vital to the self-esteem, security, belonging, actualization and contentment in life.

Prime Minister Imran Khan has been well cognizant of the fact that low income strata of the society could not own home due to various factors. Therefore, soon after his government came into power in 2018, he announced to build five million homes in the country to provide shelter to the people without homes. He also foresaw that the revival of housing sector will bring about economic boom in the country.

Absence of effective foreclosure laws hindered banks from financing in the housing sector but the introduction of ordinance by President Dr. Arif Alvi on July 29, 2019 'An Ordinance to provide for the Efficient Recovery of Mortgage-Backed Securities by Financial Institutions' laid the foundation of a new era in home financing in the country. – APP

Devcom-Pakistan international webinar urged India to support the revival of South Asia Association of Regional Cooperation (SAARC) with the human rights watchdog established within to get favoured nation status and global appreciation

STAFF REPORT

ISLAMABAD: Expert while speaking at a webinar on Saturday urged the governments to reactivate the South Asia Association of Regional Cooperation (SAARC) to curb the militancy and terrorisms, bilateral conflicts and transboundary challenges confronting the region because of climate change. Occupied Kashmir is the flashpoint between the two nuclear nation states where violation of human rights are at its peak.

The panel of experts urged the nondemocratic forces to give a chance to people to strengthen democracy and democratic institutions within their countries. Democracy ensures basic human rights that lead to peace in a society. But, unfortunately the hegemonic approaches and decision making of the governments have excluded the voices of the people. Only the vested interest prevail at the cost of human rights. Development Communications Network (Devcom-Pakistan) organized the international webinar on the theme "Ensuring human right for peace in the region". The panel of experts included former senator Farhatullah Babar, Lt. General (retd) Talat Masood, Justice (retd) Ali Nawaz Chowhan, General Secretary Human Rights Commission of Pakistan Harris Khalique, Devcom-Pakistan Executive Director Munir Ahmed, an expert from Tehran Dr Yahya Jahangiri, Desert Resource Centre (India) Founder Director Anshul Ojha, Secretary General Human Rights Alliance, Kathmandu (Nepal) Bidur Subedi, Joint Secretary SAARC Human Rights Foundation (Dhaka-Bangladesh) MD Tanbirul Islam, and President International Human Right Movement (London-UK) Rana Basharat Ali Khan.

Seasoned politician and a former senator Farhatullah Babar said some hidden-hands always disrupted the peace efforts in the region primarily between Pakistan and India. Hatred is the political slogan to win vote bank while the region is suffering from poverty, hunger and the impact of climate change. A just and a strong parliamentary system will ensure the fair distribution of resources ultimately addressing human rights. Democratic governments are less likely to go to war. Mr. Babar said Pakistan needed to work to strengthen democracy, democratic institutions and parliament. We have seen lately the adverse impact of hybrid democracy. The state institutions need to understand the importance of people's voices and concerns. Even the Supreme Court of Pakistan has stressed upon the freedom of expression but media bashing is on. Now, the citizens are barred to the right to criticism too. Devcom-Pakistan Director Munir

Ahmed said the countries need to ensure citizens participation in the decision making for the maturity of the political process. Fair distribution of resources and just policies shall bring the socio-political equilibrium to ensure human rights. Women and marginalized communities and segments are under severe stress. Bilateral and multilateral conflicts are nowhere on the priority agenda of the governments. The only regional platform SAARC is dormant for years. In the absence of SAARC what else could be the platform to discuss the regional frameworks of collaboration on militancy, terrorisms and transboundary climate impact and water scarcity. Ahmed said we need to learn from China that has successfully dealt with poverty, doing trade efficiently with the countries China has conflicts. The Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) has successfully integrated trade and commerce issues with the development of the region in a broader framework of cooperation. India shall support the revival of SAARC with the human rights watchdog established within to get a favored nation status and global appreciation. Justice (retd) Ali Nawaz Chowhan, stressed to strengthen the human rights institutions to improve the situation. The National Commission of Human Rights (NCHR), a statutory body under the parliament of Pakistan, is abandoned for the last three years.

IMF commitment

HE government's commitment to the International Monetary Fund (IMF) to revive the Fund programme will have an extreme effect on the public's lives. This means that the upcoming budget might not be a 'people-friendly' one. It will be a great challenge for the government as well in deciding what segments of society can absorb the shocks of the new taxes. The government's pledge to IMF to increase electricity rates and sales tax are a real blow to the lives of ordinary citizens.

The government, on one hand, claims to be aware of the miseries of the poor. On the other, it is burdening the people with unbearable taxes. Moreover, the petroleum levy on oil products that will be taken to the maximum level might become the straw that will break the back of the camel. The public should brace itself for unprecedented food inflation, job losses, inadequate social services and pay cuts. A shrinkage in incomes and purchasing power might contract the economy even further; the government is taking fiscal decisions that will have lasting ramifications but is only looking at short-term gains. This is not the best way to approach economic policy. While we are going time and again to the IMF for loans, the government has yet to overhaul the tax structure. Unfortunately, there is little, if any, deliberation made by the government on making it more progressive. What is beyond comprehension is the fact that the current government had promised the people to transform Pakistan into a welfare state. But the state has not even begun to create an equitable tax regime.

Our Prime Minister (PM) often stresses the importance of wealth creation. However, is it possible to create wealth if the poor are left with nothing at the end of the month for saving or investing or buying assets? The economic minds of the government must explain why quick fixes to overcome revenue shortfall are being prioritised over the higher principle of creating a robust economy with jobs and wealth being created.

New FBR chairman

HE government's deliberations for the new FBR chairman have culminated in the selection of Asim Ahmad, a member of the Inland Revenue Service posted at the FBR headquarters. This is the fifth FBR Chairman to have stepped in during this government's three-year tenure. However, on at least two occasions, the government is hardly to be blamed; Shabbar Zaidi had stepped back of his own volition and Javed Ghani reached the superannuation age.

The new chairman has a mammoth task on his hands, much like his predecessors. The IMF's projection for next year's tax collection stands at Rs6 trillion. With the government not having worked on making any significant policy changes to improve tax collection or allow for widening the tax net, Mr Ahmad will be required to increase collection without any major improvements to the system itself.

There is also the matter of taxing the wealthier segments of society. The government must increase wealth and property taxes as a long-term measure to both increase collection rates and make the tax brackets more equitable.

The new chairman will also be carrying the many problems the institution is best by on his shoulders. One of the bigger impediments to collection is corruption in key commercial collection points such as Karachi. In the past three years, the large collection targets have all but ensured that FBR officials work around the clock to meet collection targets with rules, procedures and corruption investigations taking a backseat. This is something that the government must help the FBR leadership work on in the year to come. The FBR is an instrumental part of the state and its proper functioning can help Pakistan reduce reliance on foreign loans and acquire the funds needed to both develop the country and improve key economic indicators. Beyond the targets, there is a need to look at how best to advance its functioning. It is hoped that the new chairman will be given the time and impetus to bring about some significant improvements.

Indonesia's national strategy of Artificial Intelligence

Dr. Mehmood Ul Hassan Khan

Indonesia's Industry Minister Airlangga Hartato said it will be key to encourage added value and high technology downstream industries to become a competitive player in the new global context. In order to turn Indonesia into a competitive nation, it will require the development and integration of connectivity, technology, information and communication. This should lead to a more efficient economy as well as higher quality output in the industry sector." It hopes the initiative will boost GDP by 1-2 percent in the next few years, adding to an already impressive 5 percent GDP growth rate Indonesia has enjoyed over the last several years

RTIFICIAL Intelligence (AI) has become "part and parcel" of our lives. Survival and future growth of "humanity" has direct correlation with the AI which actually, paves the way of achieving the goals of smarter economy, smart governance, digitalization of economy/society, massive industrialization, diversification of economy and last but not least, innovative future orientations. In this context, Indonesian government announced its national strategy for the development of AI. It termed it "safe" and widely "beneficial". For achieving the desired goals of technological revolution, innovative transformation, digitalization transmission, and highest standards of higher education and to cope with deadly diseases, and expedite research Indonesia published a blueprint, known as Stranas KA, for the national development of AI between 2020 and 2045. The head of Indonesian national research and innovation agency (BRIN) shared the future plans of his government pertaining to AI mainly in education and research, health services, bureaucratic reform, and food security as well as mobility and smart cities.

It would start a giant automation process in the country. By outlining the national strategy for the development of AI he termed it vital for an independent, advanced and prosperous Indonesia, one that can be reformed or reinvented) from a natural resource-based country to an innovation-based country. The agency and broader government outlined five sectors of its focus, the first being AL as well as Internet of Things (IoT), advanced robotics, augmented reality, and 3D printing. Stranas KA is a framework that provides a road map to unite many of the digital developments taking place in the country and aligns closely with Visi Indonesia 2045, its broader development strategy. According to Indonesian Stranas KA, for the national development of AI (2020- 2045) there are five priorities of it mainly health services, bureaucratic reform, education & research, food security and mobility & smart cities. There are four focus areas i.e. industrial research & innovation for the development of research ecosystem and artificial intelligence innovation platform in order to accelerate bureaucratic and industrial reforms, infrastructure & data development, create a data ecosystem and supporting infrastructure for AL to contribute to national priorities, talent development, nurture AI talent that is competitive and has good character, and last ethics & policies to create ethical artificial intelligence in accordance with national values.

being carried out in diverse sectors of economy and civility too mainly agriculture and education, with machine learning helping to streamline production, anticipate forest fires, and rejuvenate traditional teaching faculties. The national strategy identifies 186 programs, pilot schemes, and policies. The national strategy focuses a number of unique' datasets that can help it develop AI. It also recognizes some potential pitfalls of its immediate growth. Indonesia does not have the provisions to regulate the technology, nor an official agency to oversee AI development. It fears that without proper supervision, close monitoring, and refinement, AI can become as much an obstacle to development as it can a contributor. The country also leans heavily on imported technology and holds its own concerns with regard to data misuse and cyber-security. To combat these limitations, the guidebook advises that country focuses on infrastructure and data, research and industrial innovation, ethics and policies, and talent development while setting up a data ethics board to oversee implementation of much-needed data privacy and security systems.

To overcome this deficiency the government advises the formation of a data ethics board to oversee AI development, as well as for the regulation and setting of national standards for AI innovation. AI developers and experts have urged the government to consider all the risks and prepare a comprehensive strategy for the future growth of AI. In this connection, development of fundamental infrastructure and expertise of cloud computing systems should be developed to prevent data leaks. Indonesian companies have the highest rates of AI adoption in SE Asia. Being prominent regional expert of geopolitics/economic I suggest that Indonesian government should prioritize trade, higher education and industrial affairs, as these will yield the best economic benefits and prepare the next generation for the burgeoning vision of modern Indonesia. The government should work towards creating a better internet infrastructure, nurturing high-quality talent and providing additional infrastructure to bolster technological development such as an indigenous cloud computing system to prevent any leak of confidential information. Reforms of higher education based on AI should be regularized to prevent AI algorithm errors that may harm humankind Indonesia plans to robust its Artificial Intelligence Industry (AII). Indonesia has a literacy rate of 95 percent and a geographical location that lends itself to being the perfect next step in the Asian Ai revolution, Indonesia is primed for the future. Indonesia's government announced an initiative in 2018, "Making Indonesia 4.0" which essentially is a government sponsored program that seeks to speed up the automation of the Indonesian society. Through investments in AI, robotics and technology-based Indonesian firms as well as encourage investment from leading Japanese, Chinese and Korean tech firms Indonesia's Industry Minister Airlangga Hartato said it will be key to encourage added value and high-technology downstream industries to become a competitive player in the new global context. In order to turn Indonesia into a competitive nation, it will require the development and integration of connectivity, technology, information and communication. This should lead to a more efficient economy as well as higher quality output in the industry sector.' It hopes the initiative will boost GDP by 1-2 percent in the next few years, adding to an already impressive 5 percent GDP growth rate Indonesia has enjoyed over the last several years. The government wants technology to represent more than one quarter of Indonesia's total economy. Indonesia's population is already extremely digitalized. The population averages 5 hours per day on their phones as compare only 3 hours for Japan and 193 million out of a population of 264 million have a smartphone. However, only half of mobile phone users in Indonesia use their phones for mobile transactions. Before 2011, Statista.com shows that less than half of the country even had a mobile phone and less than 10 percent had smartphone technology.

Indonesia is already home to a number of AI firms today. In fact 4 of the globe's technology unicorns are based in Indonesia. Recently funded Ai firms include Snapcart which just received USD $14m in funding for their smart receipts platform and four conversational Ai firms: Kata.Ai, BJTech, Bahasa.ai & Prosai.ai. The AI scene in Jakarta is exploding, with the government hoping for over 1,000 tech startups by the end of 2020. Stranas KA is planned to take advantage of Indonesia's rapid development and youthful demographic. Thriving start-up sector with world-famous unicorns like Gojek, its rapidly growing internet penetration rate (more than 64 per cent), and the relatively high adoption rates of technology by the private sector, including large enterprises would create hope for the Stranas KA to achieve the goals of the AI in the country.

The Stranas KA provides a foundation for AI development and unifies multiple ongoing technology-related projects under one national program. However, it still needs to tackle issues around the quality of internet connectivity especially in rural and eastern regions and data protection.

Indonesia joins the ranks of countries worldwide with na-

One of the foremost priority of Indonesian government is to upgrade and replace the nation's unsupportive bureaucratic. To achieve this goal President Joko "Jokowi" Widodo outlined plans to replace a number of civil service positions with AI in 2019. It would a big step towards e-governance and smarter economy in the days to come.

From Aristotle to modern philosophers Descartes, Spinoza, Leibniz, Hobbes, Locke, Hume, Berkeley, Kant, Marx, and Wittgenstein bureaucracy by design, composition and orientation is a passive class which has been creating serious socio-economic and geopolitical issues in the evolution of human civilization. But governments/states have the authority and capability to remodel it by re-designing forward-thinking processes, protocols, and business orientation.

In this regard, AI may be an ideal choice to overhaul it. Indonesia's government has introduced an innovative concept of e-bureaucracy in the country so that caravans of socio-economic prosperity, economic sustainability, political stability and societal cohesion may be achieved by implementing people and business's friendly policies through an interactive mechanism of the AI. The government will employ an online single submission (OSS) system and the Single Map policy for accomplishing this vision. Various AI projects are tional AI strategies like Singapore, South Korea, and Canada. Economic development is often the key goal among many countries' AI strategies Indonesia's plan stands out for leveraging AI to address specific problem areas. Indonesia aims to use AI to help tackle its struggles with poor nutrition among infants and to implement government services digitally. According to consulting firm Kearney and Singapore-based investment firm EDBI (2020-2021) Artificial intelligence could add US$366 billion to Indonesia's gross domestic product in the next decade and almost $1 trillion in added GDP across Southeast Asia.

Financial services and retail have been the early adopters of AI in Indonesia which would be further increased in the days to come. The logistics and supply chain sector may also be sole beneficiary of the development of the AI in Indonesia. Indonesian e-commerce platform Tokopedia succeeded to increase the total number of transactions by 202 percent and increase revenue by 179 percent month-over-month after implementing AI-based product recommendations.

To conclude, Indonesian national policy for the national development of AI between 2020 and 2045 has strategic importance which would further enhance elements of fairness, accountability, and transparency among the ranks, organs, organizations and departments of its government in the near future. It would further accelerate its country-wide drive of massive industrialization. It would revolutionize its government, society, industry, IT, ICT and patronize immense growth of digitalization of economy in the near future. Moreover, it would enhance its agriculture productivity. It would give new innovative outlook to his tourism industry. It would fasten elements of research, higher education, science & technology and saver living in the country. It would start a new concept of living with nature by implementing smarter cities in the country. Moreover, it would further enhance inter-cities & rural connectivity and would be beneficial for the generation of new jobs in the country. All in all the largest economy of the South East Asia, Indonesia is poised to lead the region also in terms of Artificial Intelligence (AI) in the near future for branding a prosperous, independent, innovative and modern Indonesia in the very near future.

Pak-Russia relations will change the region

Attiya Munawar

There is no denying the fact that relations between Pak and Russia have been strained for a long time. India has always used these relations against Pakistan. Russia was a superpower compared to the US in the case of the Soviet Union

N view of the Iran-China agreement, the grow-In view of the ing proximity between Beijing and model, and the recent developments in the region, Foreign Minister's visit to Pakistan is a matter of special significance. It is the first visit by a Russian foreign minister to Pakistan in nine years. There is a lot of talk in the national and international media that Pakistan's focus is now on the East. This process of looking towards the East is positive for Pakistan. Pakistan, Iran, Russia, China, Turkey and Central Asian countries together form a new political bloc. Russia, on the other hand, has made a concerted effort to reshape and expand relations with Pakistan. This development could be a game-changer for both Pakistan and South Asia. Critical strategic dynamics and policy changes in South Asia could change the perceptions that drove Pakistan into an anti-Russian camp during the Cold War between Russia and the United States.

There is no denying the fact that relations between Pakistan and Russia have been strained for a long time. India has always used these relations against Pakistan. Russia was a superpower compared to the United States in the case of the Soviet Union, so India stayed close to it but when the United States through Pakistan smashed the Soviet Union in the background, India stepped up its efforts to move to the US camp. India is a big market, so the United States also wants good relations with India. India extended a hand to the United States for relations, then the United States welcomed it at the expense of Pakistan since thenthe United States in relations with Pakistan has grown cold. While India has made it possible to pursue its interests by getting closer to the United States, it has not spared any effort to fill the ears of the United States against Pakistan. This has led to a breakdown in the warmth of Pakistan-US relations. The United States cut off aid to Pakistan and began to make unreasonable demands on Do more. Pakistan has been threatened to teach a lesson in the Trump era while on this occasion, Pakistan has patiently continued its efforts to keep the relations and the situation normal, which is why the US-Taliban peace agreement was signed, but India and the Afghan administration are trying their best to sabotage this agreement. This peace agreement is still in force, but its future is in question. At present, in view of the changing situation in the region, the United States has also come closer to India as it needed a parasitic country in the region to compete with China. At the behest of the United States, India continues to be at loggerheads with China and other neighbors. On the other hand, Russia's distance from India has become a major reason for Russia's closeness to Pakistan. Russia and Pakistan have gradually come so close that the Russian Foreign Minister is on a long visit to Pakistan. Earlier, Russian forces had conducted exercises in Pakistan now Russia is also becoming part of the CPEC. It had a dream to reach the hot waters which Pakistan had thwarted by force, but now an atmosphere of friendship and reconciliation, Pakistan is welcoming Russia to use the port of Gwadar.

Russia's announcement to provide Pakistan with modern special weapons in the fight against terrorism in response to Pakistan's goodwill message is a significant development as Pakistan has long had its weapons needs from the United States and Western countries. Since then, it has stepped into the field of automatic armaments with the cooperation of China and is rapidly moving towards self-sufficiency. There was almost no cooperation with Russia in this area but for the past few years, the procurement of modern weapons including helicopters has progressed while India under US auspices, is stockpiling arms in the region. Pakistan has relied on China's cooperation to compete with India. If Russia moves forward to meet Pakistan's needs for modern weapons, it will be a great help in maintaining the balance of power in the region.

The warmth in Pakistan-Russia relations will make a significant difference in the regionbut the US-India alliance could pose further threats to peace, especially in South Asia. To address this, the major powers and countries of the region must unite, which has become a natural environment. For lasting peace in the region, a defense bloc comprising China, Russia, Pakistan, Iran and Turkey should be formed which may include Malaysia and Saudi Arabia as the opportunity arises. Pakistan is one of the most important countries in the region yet Pakistan's foreign policy is no longer the rarity and breadth that its role demands. Unlike in the past, Pakistan's changing foreign policy is important as is the relationship with distant friends from neighboring countries far more important which can improve the situation in the region and make Pakistan's role more prominent and important.

'Terrorist act' at Iran nuclear...

The Iranian nuclear deal, known as the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA), has been in intensive care since Donald Trump pulled the US out of it. Mr Trump said the accord was based on "a giant fiction that a murderous regime desired only a peaceful nuclear energy programme" and reinstated crippling economic sanctions in an attempt to compel Iran to negotiate a replacement. Iran, which insists it does not want nuclear weapons, refused to do so and retaliated by rolling back a number of key commitments under the accord. It has since accelerated the breaches in an attempt to increase pressure on the US. They have included operating advanced centrifuges to enrich uranium, resuming enrichment to 20% concentration of the most fissile II.235 isotope and huilding a stockpile of that material.

US defense secy in Israel amid Iran talks

TEL AVIV: Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin was in Israel Sunday on the first high-level visit from the new US administration, after talks restarted on reviving the 2015 Iran nuclear deal. Austin's visit comes just days after Washington said it had offered "very serious" ideas on reviving the hobbled agreement that is staunchly opposed by Israel. Austin's first scheduled stop on the two-day trip was a meeting with Israeli Defence Minister Benny Gantz. Israel under hawkish Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has been a fierce critic of the Iran nuclear deal, dating back to when it was being negotiated during Barack Obama's administration. Netanyahu applauded when Trump withdrew from the deal and imposed sanctions on Tehran, which responded by stepping back from several of its commitments under the deal. In the latest breach of its undertakings in the troubled agreement, Tehran announced on Saturday that it had started up advanced uranium enrichment centrifuges.

President Hassan Rouhani inaugurated a cascade of 164 IR-6 centrifuges for producing enriched uranium, as well as two test cascades - of 30 IR-5 and 30 IR-6S devices respectively - at Iran's Natanz uranium enrichment plant, in a ceremony broadcast by state television. An "accident" took place at Nantaz on Sunday but caused no casualties or damage, the Fars news agency reported. In an address marking the eve of Holocaust Remembrance Day, Netanyahu said on Wednesday that Israel would not be bound to a nuclear deal that would enable the Islamic republic to develop nuclear weapons. "An agreement with Iran that would pave the way to nuclear weapons - weapons that threaten our extinction - would not compel us in any way," said the veteran right-wing premier. Biden has said he is prepared to return to the agreement, arguing the deal had - until Washington's withdrawal - been successful in dramatically scaling back Iran's nuclear activities. – DNA

Jordan king, prince in first appearance since crisis FM Ayman Safadi then charged that a group of plotters had linked up with foreign parties to destabilise Jordan, but declined to identify them. After mediation talks, however, Hamzah voiced his loyalty to the king

AMMAN: Jordan's King Abdullah appeared in public Sunday alongside his half-brother Prince Hamzah, state TV showed, their first joint appearance since a palace crisis involving the prince rocked the kingdom.

The images showed a group of Hashemite royals at a mausoleum where their ancestors are buried, on the 100th anniversary of the founding of the desert kingdom. The palace Twitter account published a picture of the group at a cemetery with the caption "HM King Abdullah II, HRH Crown Prince Al Hussein... (and) Hamzah bin Al Hussein... visit tomb of HM the late King Abdullah I". All were dressed in civilian clothes, apart from Hussein, the heir to the throne, who wore military dress. Jordan was marking 100 years of national survival Sunday as a resource-poor country in a war-ravaged neighbourhood, but the palace crisis and the coronavirus pandemic have overshadowed celebrations. The government had accused Hamzah – a former crown prince who was sidelined as heir to the throne in favour of Abdullah's son Hussein in 2004 – of involvement in a conspiracy to "destabilise the kingdom's security". At least 16 people were arrested. But Abdullah said Wednesday that Hamzah, who has signed a letter pledging his loyalty to the king following mediation by an uncle, was safe in his palace under his "care". In an address read out in his name on state television, the king added that "sedition has been nipped in the bud". Jordanian political analyst Labib Kamhawi told AFP the appearance of the king and Prince Hamzah together "sends a clear message that the crisis file within the royal family has been closed". "It shows the Royal family is united." But, he added, the fact that Prince Hamzah stood behind the king and his uncle prince Hassan and Crown Prince Hussein... and not beside the king means he is now a normal prince, not on the level of a king or his crown prince". Hamzah had been appointed crown prince and heir to the throne in 1999 in line with his father's wishes, but Abdullah stripped him of the title in 2004 and named his own eldest son Hussein in Hamzah's place.

Hamzah in a video message published by the BBC on April 3 claimed he had been placed under house arrest and accused Jordan's rulers of corruption and ineptitude. Foreign Minister Ayman Safadi then charged that a group of plotters had linked up with foreign parties to destabilise Jordan, but declined to identify them. After mediation talks, however, Hamzah voiced his loyalty to the king.

"Prince Hamzah pledged before the family to follow in the steps of the ancestors, remain loyal to their mission, and to put Jordan's interest, constitution and laws above all considerations," the king said Wednesday. A probe into the events continues, the king added. The crisis laid bare divisions in a pro-Western country usually seen as a bulwark of stability in the Middle East. Jordan borders Israel and the occupied West Bank, Syria, Iraq and Saudi Arabia. It hosts US troops and is home to millions of exiled Palestinians and many Syrian refugees. The king's address followed orders issued by Amman prosecutor Hassan al-Abdallat that banned the publication of any information about the alleged plot in order to keep the security services' investigation secret. The UN human rights office said Friday it was concerned about a lack of transparency surrounding the alleged plot.

Mian Anjum Nisar said that the FBR's reforms initiatives were not bearing fruit, as the revenue collecting agency could increase the number of sales tax return filers by just 8 percent in first six months of the current fiscal year, mainly due to 40 percent rise in the type of those filers, who haven't paid any tax. implying that bad governance and weak tax management of the tax department still persist. India's Delhi shuts all schools

FOREIGN DESK

NEW DEHLI: The Delhi government on Friday announced the suspension of all ongoing examinations in schools in the wake of the sudden surge in COVID-19 cases in the national capital. Announcing the closure of all schools (government and private), Delhi Chief Minis ter Arvind Kejriwal tweeted that "In the wake of surge in COVID-19 cases, all schools (government and private) in Delhi shall remain shut til further orders.

Meanwhile, an official circular issued by the Directorate of Education of the Delhi government said that all examinations in schools shall remain suspended till further orders.

"In view of the sudden surge in COVID-19 cases in Delhi, all schools are hereby informed that conduct of all academic and examination activities through physical mode shall remain suspended with immediate effect till further orders," read the government circular.

der Leven tweeted Friday "Europe stands for freedom. And freedom of press may be the most sacred of all. Journalists must be able to work safely. My thoughts are with the family of George Karaivaz. I hope the criminals are soon brought to justice," she said. Karaivaz had worked for some of Greece's leading newspapers and TV channels in a 32-year career. double taxation through integration of provincial and federal government laws and harmonization of FBR and Punjab Revenue Authority, he added.

It is unfortunate that just 30 percent of the total sales tax return filers are paying taxes while 70 percent of the filers have paid nil tax. The government's new measures seem to be inadequate to convince people to file tax returns due to arm-twisting by the FBR, creating unnecessary controversy due to continuous raids on business premises.

Chairman.

Mian Anjum Nisar said that only direct taxes can improve tax collection, as the existing tax system is heavily skewed toward indirect taxation. He said the sustainable solution to Pakistan's problems lies in the structural reforms, as we can see very large inefficiencies in tax collection, which needs to be removed.

So, the tax compliance must be improved and tax base should be broadened, which cannot be achieved with a single policy change, but by a systemic approach. It is a matter of concern that people want to pay additional tax on a business or personal economic activity but are not willing to become part of the tax system.

Kyrgyz vote on constitution boosting presidential powers

FOREIGN DESK

BISHKEK: Voters in Kyrgyzstan went to polls Sunday for a constitutional referendum widely expected to see incumbent leader Sadyr Japarov's powers expanded while allowing him to run for office a second time.

Japarov, a 52-year-old populist, has brushed aside political opponents since coming to power on the back of an October political crisis in which he was first released from jail by supporters, beginning a dizzying rise to the leadership.

He confirmed his dominance by posting a landslide victory in a presidential election in January that also saw voters indicate a preference for presidential over parliamentary rule in a parallel vote, boosting his drive to overhaul the basic law.

Two of his opponents on the ballot and a former prime minister were arrested in the weeks after the vote as Japarov and his allies further cemented their control.

The new leader's proposed constitutional amendments promise a presidency in line with impoverished Kyrgyzstan's Central Asian neighbours, ending a decade-long experiment with a mixed system. Local critics have dubbed the draft document a "khanstitution" for its expansion of presidential powers of appointment at the expense of parliament, which will be downsized from 120 to 90 lawmakers if the changes pass.

BEIJING: China-Pak agricultural cooperation proved as a great source deepening people-to-people bond, says a report published by China Economic Net (CEN) on Saturday.

According to the report, " China and Pakistan will ring in the 70th anniversary of their diplomatic relations in the coming month. As China-Pakistan Economic Corridor (CPEC) enters the second phase, an increasing number of advanced Chinese agriculturfriendship in a practical way. "Agricultural cooperation is closely linked to people's livelihood as an ample supply of high-quality meat, eggs, milk, rice and flour, etc. can make Pakistani people healthier. This is the most fundamental way of deepening the friendship because that benefits Pakistani people directly," said maize-soybean strip intercropping study leader Professor Yang Wenyu of China's Sichuan Agricultural University. Maize-soybean strip intercropping technology, widely recognized by farmers, governments, scientific research institutions and enterprises in Pakistan, is flourishing across the country this year. "In Pakistan, a great number of people depend on animal husbandry for their livelihood. Soybean, the premier protein choice for livestock, poultry and aquaculture production globally, is rarely planted in Pakistan while the demand for soybeans keeps rising.

Pakistan is China's brotherly friend so we started to help Pakistan revitalize soybean production," Yang told China Economic Net.

He is providing generous support for this technology's development in Pakistan both technically and financially.

Maize-soybean strip intercropping technology fits Pakistan's conditions to a tee. "Intercropping doesn't occupy extra land. Moreover, Pakistan's high temperature and strong sunlight make it less likely to succeed in sole cultivation of soybeans. In the intercropping system, maize can shade and cool soybeans to realize high yields," Yang analyzed the success of applying this technology to Pakistan.

"To further boost soybean production, Chinese seeds, machinery and herbicides related to this technology are going to arrive in Pakistan soon," Yang added. Maize-soybean strip intercropping's progress in Pakistan also drives student and faculty exchanges between the two countries.

By 2020, under the MOU signed between Sichuan Agricultural University and PMAS-Arid Agriculture University in 2018, 47 Pakistani students have got scholarships from Sichuan Agricultural University.

"The overwhelming majority of my overseas students are from Pakistan. Pakistani students are studious as well as patriotic. My postdoctoral Muhammad Ali Raza who is promoting maize-sooybean strip intercropping technology in Pakistan on behalf of our team is really hard-working.

He had an opportunity to study in the U.S. but he chose to work in his motherland to develop this technology," Yang appreciated Pakistani students a lot.

PM's stance on vulgarity wrongly interpreted: Ashrafi

ABID RAZA

LAHORE: Special Representative to Prime Minister on Religious Affairs Hafiz Muhmmad Tahir Mehmood Ashrafi said on Sunday the stance of Prime Minister Imran Khan about vulgarity had been wrongly interpreted by some segments of society.

Addressing a press conference, he said that some elements launched a baseless campaign against the prime minister by angling his statement and attempted to show as if prime minister had committed a crime.

He said that Imran Khan was head of an Islamic democratic country and he rightly declared vulgarity as a major cause of sexual assault or rape.

He said the prime minister did not declare woman responsible for rape, adding that some elements elaborated the stance of prime minister incorrectly and tried to portray that Imran Khan was against women.

Ashrafi said that American think tanks had already said that vulgarity was the reason of rape and the Islamic world also supported the stance.

He said that Muslims would practice their religious duties under the SOPs during the coming holy month of Ramazan, adding that some political friends after failing in their sit-in or long-march, alleging the government that it would shutdown the mosques during the holy month. Ashrafi made it clear that the government was not going to shutdown any mosque or Madrissah.
