Sindh Health Minister Azra Fazal Pechuho said the authorities "suspect the case to be of the Omicron variant due to the virus' behaviour". ## Omicron cases so far 'mostly mild': EU

NEWS DESK

THE HAGUE: The European Medicines Agency (EMA) said Thursday that cases of Omicron so far appear to be "mostly mild", but cautioned it was still investigating whether the variant could cause severe disease. "Cases appear to be mostly mild, however, we need to gather more evidence to determine whether the spectrum of disease severity caused by Omicron is different (to) that of all the variants that have been circulating so far," said Marco Cavaleri, EMA's head of biological health threats and vaccines strategy. The highly-mutated variant sparked global panic when it emerged last month, prompting fears it could be more contagious, cause more severe illness or evade vaccines. The World Health Organisation said this week early signs suggested it might indeed be more infectious. But the makers of the Pfizer/BioNTech vaccine said that the third dose of their jab offered effective protection against the variant and that it was developing an Omicron-specific shot that should be ready in March 2022.

Uyghur Tribunal accuses China of genocide

Reading the tribunal's judgement, Sir Geoffrey said there was "no evidence of mass killings" in Xinjiang, but he said that the alleged efforts to prevent births amounted to genocidal intent

AGENCIES

BEIJING: China has committed genocide against the Uyghur people in Xinjiang, an unofficial UK-based tribunal has found. The Uyghur Tribunal cited birth control and sterilisation measures allegedly carried out by the state against the Uyghurs as the primary reason for reaching its conclusion on Thursday. Sir Geoffrey Nice, a prominent British barrister who chaired the tribunal hearings, said its panel was satisfied China had carried out "a deliberate, systematic and concerted policy" to bring about "long-term reduction of Uyghur and other ethnic minority populations". He added that the panel believed senior officials including the Chinese president Xi Jinping bore "primary responsibility" for the abuses against Muslim minorities in the Xinjiang region. The tribunal's panel was made up of lawyers and academics. Its findings have no

China slams nations over Olympic boycott

NEWS DESK

BEIJING: China has warned countries who have announced a diplomatic boycott of the Beijing Winter Olympics that they "will pay the price for their mistaken acts". The US, UK, Australia and Canada will not send government representatives to the Games because of concerns over China's human rights record. This includes widespread allegations of abuse against the Uyghur minority group. France, host of the next Summer Games, said it would not join the boycott. The Winter Olympics are set to take place in Beijing in February. "The United States, Britain and Australia have used the Olympics platform for political manipulation," Wang Wenbin, a spokesperson at the Chinese foreign ministry, said. Chinese state media claimed on Wednesday that Beijing "never planned to invite US and Western politicians who hype the 'boycott' topic". The US was the first country to announce a diplomatic boycott, with Australia, Canada and the UK following suit. The move by these countries stops short of preventing athletes from attending - something which has been welcomed by International Olympic Committee (IOC) President Thomas Bach.

gal force and are not binding on ministers, but its organisers said at the outset they intended to add to the body of evidence around the allegations against China and reach an independent conclusion on the question of genocide. The Chinese government denies all accusations of human rights abuses in Xinjiang. Responding to the tribunal's ruling on Thursday, a spokesman told the BBC the body was a "pseudo tribunal" and a "political tool used by a few anti-China elements to deceive and mislead the public". Reading the tribunal's judgement, Sir Geoffrey said there was "no evidence of mass killings" in Xinjiang, but he said that the alleged efforts to prevent births amounted to genocidal intent. The panel also said it had found evidence of crimes against humanity, torture, and sexual violence against the Uyghur people. Speaking to the BBC after the judgment, Sir Iain Duncan Smith, the former Conservative Party leader and co-chair of the Inter-Parliamentary Alliance on China, said it was time for the UK government to accuse China of genocide. "The British government said the evidence needed to be assessed by a competent court, well it doesn't get more competent than this," he said. "The government now needs to stop messing around. The genocide taking place in Xinjiang has got to dominate our relationship with China." Conservative MP Nus Ghani called the conclusion of the tribunal "groundbreaking". "This tribunal was set up to the highest legal standards and the evidence that that was put forward today shows that there is enough proof beyond reasonable doubt that there was an intent to commit genocide," she told the BBC. "What is particularly troubling is the evidence that this genocide is in particular targeted at women, and focused on preventing births." The Chinese state has been accused of crimes against humanity and genocide in Xinjiang.

PRA, FCCI liaison stressed to solve tax related problems

PRA is comparatively a new entity which was passing through its initial evolutionary phase and hence there was room for improvement in its laws and operation etc.

ISHFAQ MUGHAL

FAISALABAD: Close liaison between Faisalabad Chamber of Commerce & Industry (FCCI) and Punjab Revenue Authority (PRA) is imperative to resolve tax related problems with mutual consultation, said Mr. Usman Jappa additional Commissioner PRA Faisalabad.

Addressing an awareness session in FCCI, he said that PRA is comparatively a new entity which was passing through its initial evolutionary phase and hence there was room for improvement in its laws and operation etc. Contradicting the allegation of double taxation, he said that earlier the Federal Board of Revenue (FBR) was collecting income tax, GST and custom duty on behalf of the federal government in addition to Provincial tax on services. However, after 18th amendment PRA was constituted to collect the tax on services. He clarified that Pakistan Revenue Automation Limited (PRAL) was collecting both Federal and Provincial taxes as the domain of Federal and Provincial has been clearly identified.

He said that PRA was working for the last few years but still there was a gap between PRA and the business community. He said that an awareness session has been arranged to redress the genuine grievances and reservations of the business community. He said that he is always available and would like to revisit FCCI to settle down the remaining problems of the business community.

Earlier Senior Vice President FCCI Mr. Imran Mahmood Sheikh said that Government was trying its optimum best to facilitate the business community and Pakistan Single Window was an innovative step to provide all facilities to the business community under one roof but the taxation at Federal and Provincial level will further complicate their issues.

He said that chambers across the country are regulated through the Directorate General of Trade Organizations by the Ministry of Commerce. "We use a uniform and set pattern for the membership of all active tax payers", he said and added that if any addition and deletion is required in this procedure, PRA must contact Ministry of Commerce through Punjab Government.

Mr. Qaisar Iqbal of PRA gave a detailed presentation while Mr. Zeeshan, Mr. Muhammad Fazil, Chaudhary Khadim Hussain Maan and Mian Abdul Waheed took part in the question answer session.

Rana Abrar Ahmad Chairman FCCI standing committee on Liaison with PRA offered vote of thanks while Vice President Rana Fayyaz Ahmad presented FCCI shield to Mr. Usman Jappa additional commissioner PRA.

Experts call for coping with NTSC

Mr. Khalid Taimur Akram, Executive Director, CGSS presented an Overview of Learnings and Outcomes from CGSS-HSF joint events on Non-Traditional Security Challenges

DNA

LAHORE: Center for Global & Strategic Studies (CGSS), Islamabad & Hanns Seidel Foundation Pakistan in collaboration with Department of Political Science and IR & Regional Integration Centre, University of the Punjab, Lahore organized a One Day University Workshop on "Non-traditional Security Challenges" in Lahore.

The event commenced with welcome remarks by Ms. Meher Ghaswas, Head of Program Management, Hanns Seidel Foundation Pakistan. She stated that today's workshop on NTSC aims to discuss nontraditional security challenges being faced by Pakistan, amongst academia and policy experts. With an increasing population and depleting resources, it is important for the policy experts and youth to come up with solutions together in addressing such challenges.

Mr. Khalid Taimur Akram, Executive Director, CGSS presented an Overview of Learnings and Outcomes from CGSS-HSF joint events on Non-Traditional Security Challenges. He stated that CGSS in collaboration with HSF has organized almost six high-level national events on NTS issues. We are working through comprehensive research assessment on NTS issues amid policy recommendations to compose a robust policy plan. Moreover, we are working to promote awareness and constructively add into the curriculum development on Non-traditional security challenges through extensive research. He mentioned that we have been successful in developing profound understanding and analysis and bridging gap between academicians and stakeholders via providing them an integrated platform to discuss relevant subject. First session of the Workshop commenced with the speech of Prof. Dr. Iram Khalid, Chairperson, Department of Political Science and International Relations, University of the Punjab, Lahore who discussed "Evolution of Traditional Security to Non-Traditional Security". She stated that the fundamental goal of NTS should be to overcome the dichotomy between traditional and non-traditional security paradigms. Despite the maturation of scholarship and policy attention on NTS issues, however, pervasive questions remain about the relationship between non-traditional and traditional security sectors, what or whom is being secured, and the conceptual and practical value of "securitising" more generally. Challenges in the food, energy, environmental, and health sectors, among others, threaten the lives of countless vulnerable communities and the future progress upon which societies across the world depend. The charge of NTS is to explore these issues coherently and in ways that can add value to the policymaking and civil society communities. Dr. Tahira, Assistant Professor, Department of International Relations, University of Sialkot, Sialkot discussed "Impact of climate change on water security: Policy Recommendations". She explained the interrelationship between climate change and water. She stated that planning is needed in this regard. "We need to enhance and strategize our water policy. We need to opt for precautionary measures so that the risk of spreading infections can be reduced". She stated that through usage of technology and enforcement of legislation, things can be improved.

Only dialogue can help resolve Kashmir issue

Mr Shah Mahmood Qureshi, Foreign Minister of Pakistan, and Patron of the Institute commended the effort of the Institute for this initiative

DNA

ISLAMABAD: “Kashmir has kept the peace of South Asia hostage... We hope for India to have such a government that can resolve the conflict through logic and sanity. It is the only problem between India and Pakistan. Till last minute, Pakistan will try to resolve the conflict through dialogue,” stated the Prime Minister of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan, Mr Imran Khan in his inaugural address at the first-ever mega-event by the Institute of Strategic Studies Islamabad (ISSI), “Islamabad Conclave-2021.” While speaking at the occasion, the Prime Minister stated that Pakistan’s peace overtures towards India have been considered a weakness by the Modi government. He went on to say that dialogue is the best solution for conflict resolution. He was of the view that the RSS and the Hindutva ideology is a tragedy for the Indians themselves and this has led to unprecedented marginalisation in the country. He highlighted that regional connectivity is important and without peace in Afghanistan, this cannot materialise. He termed the CPEC a great opportunity for Pakistan and reiterated that Pakistan does not want to be a part of any bloc as the new Cold War has been intensifying between major powers. He emphasised the need for peace in Afghanistan and the urgent need for humanitarian aid for the Afghan people. Talking about the challenges of Climate Change, he stated that Pakistan has undertaken great initiatives in this regard and is one of the vulnerable countries in this respect. He commended the effort made by the ISSI in promoting intellectual activities like the Islamabad Conclave 2021. Mr Shah Mahmood Qureshi, Foreign Minister of Pakistan, and Patron of the Institute commended the effort of the Institute for this initiative. He shed light on the global and regional landscape and outlined Pakistan’s vision for peace. He went on to say that we are witnessing a pivotal moment in history, as the world and international order is undergoing a profound transformation. Foreign Minister further explained that Globalisation and multilateralism have been undercut by unilateralism and there is a return to nationalistic agendas. The Kashmir conflict between India and Pakistan poses the threat of transforming into a nuclear flashpoint, he said. Ambassador Aizaz Ahmad Chaudhry, Director General ISSI, in his introductory remarks gave a briefing about the working of the Institute and the ambit of its activities. He highlighted the Institute’s effort regarding the dissemination of Pakistan’s narrative and the efforts towards bridging the gap between policymakers and academics. While highlighting the theme of the Islamabad Conclave, “A Peaceful and Prosperous South Asia,” Ambassador Chaudhry outlined the objectives of the Islamabad Conclave especially, for narrative building, global engagement, bridging the gaps and tripod security paradigm.

ISLAMABAD: Khawaja Muhmmad Asif, Parliamentary Leader of Pakistan Muslim League & Former Defence Minister and Foreign Minister, called on the High Commissioner of Sri Lanka and expressed his condolence on the tragic incident that took place in Sialkot, the constituency he represents in the Parliament. ## Ending corruption responsibility of State, society’: President Alvi

ISLAMABAD: President Dr Arif Alvi on Thursday, terming corruption an impediment to the country’s growth, said it was the collective responsibility of all tiers of the State and society to ensure its eradication. “Strict laws, effective prosecution, and prompt dispensation of justice besides societal pressure are the important factors in checking corruption,” he said in his address at the seminar on ‘Corruption Free Pakistan: Pride of Nation’, held here at the Aiwan-e-Sadr. The event organized by National Accountability Bureau (NAB) was held in connection with the International Anti-Corruption Day aimed at creating awareness among the masses to fight corruption in society. President Alvi said allowing greed to take over morality results in the adoption of corrupt practices and put a detrimental impact on society. He condemned the abuse of entrusted power for private gains and emphasized self-accountability to eliminate corruption. The president lauded NAB for taking action against corruption, however, pointed out that the efforts of the anti-corruption watchdog alone could not prove effective unless supported by all segments of society. He stressed the respective roles of parliament and executive in making strict laws and their implementation to check corruption. A combined action can eradicate the menace of corruption from the country, he added. He also laid emphasis on prompt decisions by the judiciary on the cases of corruption because delays caused dispensation of justice. Dr Alvi said the pressure of society, and religious and spiritual beliefs also helped a person not get deviated from the righteous path. He said media, through whistle-blowing about corruption, could play a positive role, however stressed that it should be about the actual exposure of fraud rather than pursuing out-of-context journalism. The president said Pakistan was taking effective steps against corruption and appreciated NAB for making a huge recovery of Rs 821 billion. Chairman NAB Justice (retd) Javed Iqbal said NAB was committed to ending corruption in the country and had carried out 1,194 convictions with a total recovery Rs 821 billion, including the Rs 538 billion in the last four years. ## A Tragic Land

If warning could do wonders, the endless ringing of humanitarian organisations' alarm bells about an unprecedented food crisis in Afghanistan would have long brought smiles on over 3.5 million angst-ridden faces. As winter bites, the war-devastated country is fast sinking into yet another pit of suffering. With the UN putting on the alert of about 23 million Afghans braving emergency levels of food insecurity, the World Food Programme cautioning, "we are on a countdown to catastrophe," and now Washington lamenting that hunger would "kill more people than all the bombs and bullets of the past two decades," what more do we need to hear to finally raise our eyelids to the frightening development before us. Since temperatures have already begun to dip below freezing point, it is no longer a question of some far-fetched tragedy that might happen if the odds are stacked against us. To the beautiful land's great misfortune, its patience when it comes to walking on the same thorny path over and over and over again is about to be tested for the nth time. When the international community is asked to ease restrictions on Kabul, it raises the security card. Now, the resumption of aid to ensure the survival of about one million children should not have been broadcasted here, there and everywhere in an ideal world. But since Afghanistan's young hills and old wounds are not valued much in this great game of politics, the imminent anarchy, widespread destitution and the nightmarish cursing from hell warrant little response. Had it been any other state, especially one in the ever-so-prestigious First World, never-ending donations from the soft-hearted would have long averted the crisis. However, the rugged terrain's distance from the sacred land keeps encouraging widespread oblivion to parents selling daughters to feed their younger children, people stealing sacks of grains from beggars on gunpoint and children running after shoppers in hopes for a tiny morsel of bread. Afghanistan is used to living in sheer helplessness. But, the curtain is now down, the power show is done with, and the spotlight haunts all of us. For, they may sleep on an empty stomach but would the world be able to live a life of guilt?

China and Taliban

M Akram Zaheer

Taliban's direct contacts with Xinjiang are minimal. Virtually all attacks in China are entirely local and unrelated to international terrorist networks. The border is closed and there is no fear of a literal spread from neighboring Badakhshan

THE security situation in Afghanistan has deteriorated since the United States and its European allies decided to withdraw from a two decades-long mission in the country. The US presence was viewed by China as a geopolitical threat, as was the Soviet military presence in the 1980s. China has concerns on a number of issues. Its ongoing concern, the last time the Taliban was in power, is that Afghanistan could become a safe haven for militant groups that could potentially target China. China's economic and political interests in the region as a whole have grown significantly since the BRI project. Many scholars see China as an opportunity to increase its influence in the region after the talks between Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi and Taliban leaders. The Chinese government has long sought to strike deals with the Taliban, focusing mainly on relations with Uyghur groups. The recent meeting between Mullah Baradar and Wang Yi in Tianjin was extremely popular; the two sides have been in talks for decades. However, Beijing is pragmatic about the realities of power in Afghanistan; it has always been uncomfortable with the Taliban's ideological agenda. China wants to see them compromise with the other political forces in the country, not revive them after a military victory. The Chinese government fears the implications of its success in Afghanistan for militancy in the face of the threat, including the Pakistani Taliban that may challenge to CPEC. Beijing is also concerned about the threats of confusion in Afghanistan, which is seen as a strategic trap that has undermined other major powers heavily involved. So, as it watches what is happening now, there is a need to play a more active political role to deal with the consequences of United States and NATO's withdrawal, Beijing feels a lot of fear about it. For China, There are certainly considerable trade and economic interests in Afghanistan. Major investment project such as the Aynak copper mine and the Amu Darya energy project, which are stalled for years. There has been a lot of talk about Afghanistan's participation in the Belt and Road Initiative, including China-Pakistan Economic Corridor ties, but Beijing believes stability in Afghanistan must be proceed for serious economic commitments. Beijing has also chosen not to build cross-border infrastructure via the Wakhan Corridor, despite requests from the Afghan government.

If Afghanistan has a security and political environment, China will certainly play an important investment role - but it will be very cautious. At present, Beijing is very concerned about the recent attacks on Chinese nationals working on projects in Pakistan. Therefore, to think about new project in Afghanistan, may be dangerous.

Taliban's direct contacts with Xinjiang are minimal. Virtually all attacks in China are entirely local and unrelated to international terrorist networks. The border is closed and there is no fear of a literal spread from neighboring Badakhshan. Potential cross-border issues focus on Central Asia and Pakistan not with China, which is one of the main reasons, Chinese security presence on the Tajik border with Afghanistan. In the long run, Chinese concerns about the Islamic Movement in East Turkestan are mismatched with the threat shown by any Uyghurs trapped in a militant network in the region

The civil war in Syria has seen the Turkestan Islamic Party emerge as a more capable actor than its predecessors and has a presence in Afghanistan. China is also concerned about the return of fighters from northern Syria. Since the late 2000s, China has also been the target of various other militant and terrorist groups in Xinjiang and partly to Pakistan. The Taliban whatever promises they make to the Chinese government and are ready to turn a blind eye to the situation in Xinjiang but the environment have created in which many of these groups are likely to thrive. While it is incomprehensible to expect attacks on Chinese soil, but it is also clear that threats against soft Chinese targets in the region have increased..

The Afghanistan situation brings back a massive influx of refugees in Europe, and all that are political. Afghans are already appearing in large numbers in Turkey as they flee violence and the consequences of the Taliban takeover. Unsurprisingly, many European states have seen more gradual and circumstantial US evacuations than the current scenario. Afghanistan is a wonderful country where the interests of China, Europeans and Americans are relatively intertwined. Beijing wants to see it as a stable political settlement and has been instrumental in reconciliation talks on various issues.

China's close ally in the region, Pakistan, has been the main host and support for the Taliban, providing them with an additional avenue of influence, whether it is always ready to use it effectively or can in In the coming years, however, Beijing will focus on securing its bilateral interests in Afghanistan and use its diplomatic energy in the region to deal with current events particularly withdrawal of United States from Afghanistan. There will certainly be opportunities for European states to trade with China on Afghanistan. It is expected that Beijing will place such a priority on such active cooperation with Europe at this time.

Pakistan card initiative

ON Wednesday, the government announced that it will be launching the Pakistan Card initiative which would encompass the government's welfare initiatives including Ehsaas Ration Card, Health Card and Kisan Card. The launch of this initiative is being considered an important milestone towards the prime minister's vision of building a welfare state. Initially it was reported that PM Imran Khan will be visiting Peshawar for the launch, however that may not be the case anymore because of concerns raised by the opposition and the ECP in light of the upcoming local government elections. Given that the announcement of development schemes is restricted following the issuance of the election schedule, the planning authorities should have anticipated this. Nevertheless, it is encouraging to see the government continuing its focus on healthcare and making it more accessible for citizens all over the country. The government's health initiatives have steadily grown over time. In fact, the health card initiative was first introduced in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa where it grew considerably over the years. Today, the KP government is now offering provision of free health coverage—covering all major diseases—to the entire population of the province and has thus far treated 6,030,000 patients under the programme. To ensure that this initiative is a success and that all those in need are able to avail these resources, it is important that citizens are made aware of these services. This would require increased engagement and targeted awareness campaigns around the country regarding the Pakistan Card initiative. Inadequate health coverage—especially for the most vulnerable amongst us—is a country-wide issue. This is a great step forward in streamlining the welfare efforts of the government. A few years ago, providing access at such a scale would have been considered impossible, so the government must be commended for its efforts in this area. Improving our health care facilities and increasing access to them for the underprivileged across the country will also help us achieve our development goals going forward.

Paradigm shift in culture: A horrible reality

Munaza Kazmi

The women once having shyness in eyes now talk about mera jism mere marzi, however the meaning would be different but the choice of words are beyond admiration. Girls came from remote villages on the pretext of education well we all know what education they are getting in the dirty hostels and horrible flats

CULTURE! "the system of shared beliefs, values, customs, behaviors, and artifacts that the members of society use to cope with their world and with one another, and that are transmitted from generation to generation through learning." However, Culture is the cornerstone of any civilized society and evolves over time with its values and norms. It is not a fixed concept, however, and can change for many reasons. One force that can cause a culture to change is the exposure to other cultures' political and economical philosophies, social structures, religions, languages, and styles of education.

Talking about the culture of Pakistan, which seems quite diverse, and somewhat transforming, reasoning the involvement of different ethnic groups and its rich dynamic history. However, how far much diverse and changing it was, the ever constant object was the hint of respect, civilization, discipline and to which in Urdu we say, "Te-hzeeb". Pakistani culture starting from its pleasant language Urdu, the beauty of its calligraphy, the softness of words, the way of delivery, the love and utmost respect in the dialect, that have no substitute.

Then our family culture, the warmth of togetherness, the cuddles of grandma, the knowledge sharing, moreover the satisfaction in eating together; The joint family structure. Our delicious foods, from spicy biryani to the lip-smacking jalebi, from muton karahi to yummy gulab jamun; the art of cooking, delight in learning recipes from mothers, planning food parties, the joy of sharing. And the shyness in the eyes of little women, the respect for the family, the authority of brother, the honor in seclusion, the proper way of carrying oneself, the knowledge of forbidden.....

Are you thinking that am telling you about a long-forgotten tale of 1960's or 1980's.... Perhaps you are right, am talking about the peeling colorful Pakistani culture, leaving behind the strained, unimaginable, and wicked shadows of the intoxication of the Western civilization, and culprit we our self are. Vine Deloria, an American scholar once said, "Western civilization, unfortunately, does not link knowledge and morality but rather, it connects knowledge and power and makes them equivalent."

Hence, the flip side of the coin shows a more menacing picture. The increasing trend of westernization has taken our local culture hostage in numerous aspects.

Let's start with the language, that is known as the identity of any nation. By far, the greatest impact that westernization has had on our culture is on the language. Our mother tongue Urdu is being replaced by English as a more common language used in conversations. This is happening because of the number of English medium schools in our society and the excessive use of email and messaging amongst the youth, which is usually in English or in a combination of English and a native language. It frequently, however, is communicated in Roman characters, diminishing the importance of Urdu script.

Moreover, the influence of colonial mindset is immensely drastic that a large part of society, specially youth feel ashamed speaking Urdu. In fact, we have started using English as a tool to distinguish between high and low class, we think it as a criteria to judge people, irrespective of their education and background. Those who speak English proficiently are considered among the elite class, despite the fact that Urdu was the official language of Pakistan until English was added only a few years back. Next, the extended or joint family system, a trademark of Pakistani social culture, is losing its value and seems to be vanishing altogether, replaced by a culture of individuality. The youth of today believe in independence and individuality. As a result, we have seen a rise in the psychological disorders, divorces, suicides, and crime. Food, another lifeline of a culture, which in our transforming society is being hitting very badly. The traditional concept of home-cooked food is being replaced by fast food meals from restaurants like KFC, Pizza Hut, and McDonalds and others inspired by the fast food model. Pakistani dishes, which were famous for their flavor, are hardly acceptable to today's youth. As of today, we see cold drinks being used to such an extent that they are part of almost every meal, even in formal dinners. The introduction of energy drinks and sodas also has played a part in diminishing or I should say put an end to the consumption of traditional drinks.

Talking about the element of respect, discipline and our Tehzeeb seems as another island. Our very basic "Salam" being replaced by "Hello", the kids seems in uniforms now just carry paper books not the knowledge or education since they have surpass all the elements of regard or Lehaza as we say in Urdu. The youth if we consider, that is said to be the defining pillar, is now a days can't even hold their own balance, flying in air with effect of drugs, how would they even pick a brick for Pakistan.

The women once having shyness in eyes now talk about mera jism mere marzi, however the meaning would be different but the choice of words are beyond admiration. Girls came from remote villages on the pretext of education well we all know what education they are getting in the dirty hostels and horrible flats. The idea of socializing, liberation upon the curse of media have almost destroyed our culture. Now a days the half-naked dresses are common in stores even the advertising campaign of breakout and outfitters our everyday brands are showing half-naked women. I question if in the past they couldn't make sale, the exposure of body is had become that essential that they have forgotten about our basic norms. And where is the control center, if it's PEM-RA or any another institution, why the authorities are blind or if waiting for complete destruction. Moreover, it is the responsibility of parents to look into the matter, since only giving birth is not the solution, we have to answer another Authority in the end, to which I believe we had forgotten.

Increased exposure to internet, television, movies, and video games has increased drug abuse, violence, and related vices. The Pakistani youth, which forms the majority of the population, are quickly being influenced as they are the most vulnerable. The influences mentioned above are in no way the only areas where westernization has had an impact. Westernization has influenced every aspect of daily life, ranging from cuisine to basic human rights.

To that extent, even the minute details of daily life have been affected by westernization effects on Pakistan's culture. However, Westernization has been part of the modernization process, but it is crucial to examine, otherwise it may lead to the disruption of cultural values and customs.

Report shows how Israel killed truth of Gaza protests

Ray Hanania

The ICC investigation and accusations that Israel is whitewashing war crimes are likely among the main reasons the Tel Aviv government is seeking to ban six human rights organizations, confiscate their computers and evidence, and arrest their staff. It wants to silence the critics who have gathered evidence that contradicts and exposes the Israeli government's lies. Israel's so-called investigation was not conducted by an "independent" group, as it contends, but was in fact carried out by the same group accused of the killings: The Israel Defense Forces

ON March 30, 2018, Palestinians in the Gaza Strip began holding weekly protests against Israel's harsh blockade. The timing was symbolic, as it commemorated the day in 1976 when six Palestinian citizens of Israel were killed while protesting against Israel's plans to seize thousands of acres of Arab-owned land for "state purposes." Palestinian protesters called the Gaza protests the "Great March of Return" and the world saw thousands of civilians waving Palestinian flags while marching to the border of Gaza, which is essentially an open-air prison managed and controlled by Israel. The protests ended in December 2019.

During the near-two-year period, tens of thousands of Palestinians in Gaza gathered every Friday at the border with Israel to protest. Israeli soldiers, positioned safely behind armored fortifications, used sniper rifles to shoot dead 223 protesters, while wounding 8,000 more. Among those killed by the heavily armed Israeli soldiers were journalists, women, children (46 victims were under the age of 18), elderly people and emergency first responders, including several nurses. In response to rising international outrage, Israel announced it would conduct its own investigation into the killings.

This week, two human rights groups — B'Tselem and the Palestinian Center for Human Rights — released the results of an inquiry into Israel's investigation, concluding that the probe was a ruse and none of the officials responsible for ordering the shootings were ever investigated. The 31-page B'Tselem and PCHR report, "Unwilling and Unable: Israel's Whitewashed Investigations of the Great March of Return," can be read in full online. Meanwhile, Israel is seeking to create a legal defense in anticipation of an unfavorable outcome at the International Criminal Court, which is investigating its abuses in the Gaza Strip. Israel is hoping to undermine the ICC probe by asserting, falsely in this case, that the charges were investigated and that it has been accountable and fair.

The ICC investigation and accusations that Israel is whitewashing war crimes are likely among the main reasons the Tel Aviv government is seeking to ban six human rights organizations, confiscate their computers and evidence, and arrest their staff. It wants to silence the critics who have gathered evidence that contradicts and exposes the Israeli government's lies. Israel's so-called investigation was not conducted by an "independent" group, as it contends, but was in fact carried out by the same group accused of the killings: The Israel Defense Forces. Israel asserts that it wants peace, but in reality it is the single greatest contributor to the violence. Far more Palestinians are injured and killed at the hands of Israeli soldiers, police and armed settlers inside Israel and in the Occupied Territories.

Individuals who are bewildered by how US politicians pander to Israel — closing their eyes to its human rights violations and violence, while exaggerating Palestinian violence — have a responsibility to help them see the truth. Every American who believes in human rights and opposes violence of any kind should make a copy of the 31-page report and mail it to their member of Congress. They need to speak up. They need to help open the eyes of members of Congress who are willing to turn away from justice in order to receive hundreds of thousands of dollars in campaign contributions from pro-Israel political action committees. As long as Israel has Congress in a campaign finance headlock thanks to PAC contributions, the truth will be killed almost as fast as it injures and kills Palestinians. For the record, between 2008 and 2020, Palestinians have killed 251 Israelis, while Israel has killed 5,590 Palestinians. That figure does not include the 115,000 Palestinians who have been injured, compared with the nearly 5,000 Israelis who have been hurt.

information of the Taliban's interim government in Afghanistan. "Initially, when we entered Kabul (in mid-August this year), there was no security and communication system, and that helped Daesh to carry out attacks and target mosques, and public places to spread fear among the civilians," the Taliban spokesperson said, adding that the vacuum provided them an opportunity to target civilians. "Earlier, Daesh had the support of former government forces but now we have destroyed their hideouts as these terrorists have no place in Afghanistan because the Afghan people have rejected their ideology," Mujahid said, adding the arrested people are in jail and the government will deal with them under the Sharia law. Responding to a question regarding the ongoing economic crisis in Afghanistan, Mujahid said the US had blocked their assets in August causing the economic crisis. "The US move to freeze our assets was an act against international law," he said. However, he hoped that after the recent meeting of Afghan acting Foreign Minister Amir Khan Muttaqi with the US officials in Doha, Qatar, Washington will release their funds soon.

Barca to 'start from scratch' after CL exit

They had reached the last 16 in each season since 2003-04 when they did not qualify for the competition at all. # Iran sticks to stance as nuclear talks resume

“Iran is serious about reaching an agreement if the ground is paved (towards a deal)...The fact all sides want the talks to continue shows that all parties want to narrow the gaps”

VIENNA: Iran's top negotiator said on Thursday he was sticking to positions Tehran set out when nuclear talks broke off last week, while European Union and Russian envoys called for more urgency as world powers resumed negotiations in Vienna. The indirect US-Iranian talks in Vienna, in which other diplomats from the remaining parties to a now tattered 2015 deal - France, Britain, Germany, Russia and China - shuttle between them because Tehran refuses direct contact with Washington, aim to get both sides to resume full compliance with the accord. However, last week's discussions broke off with European and U.S. officials voicing dismay at sweeping demands by Iran's new,

Israel's FM in Egypt for talks on Gaza, Iran

CAIRO: Israeli Foreign Minister Yair Lapid met President Abdel Fattah al-Sisi on Thursday during a rare visit to Egypt for talks on the blockaded Gaza Strip and Iran's nuclear programme, the two sides said. Egypt was the first Arab country to sign a peace treaty with the Jewish state in 1979, after decades of enmity and conflict. "I thank President Sisi, whose contribution to the region and the relations between us is of historic proportions," Lapid tweeted. "I presented the president my 'economy for security' programme for Gaza and the steps taken by the Israeli government with regards to the Palestinian issue," he added. Egypt's presidency also said the Palestinian issue was a key priority. In his meeting with Sisi, Lapid noted "Iran's attempts to become a country with a military nuclear capability as well as its continued use of terrorism, and the threat this poses to the Middle East". His visit comes a month to the day after both countries struck a security deal to boost Egyptian troop numbers around the border town of Rafah in the restive Sinai Peninsula. – APP

ment if the ground is paved (towards a deal)...The fact all sides want the talks to continue shows that all parties want to narrow the gaps." Speaking to reporters, Enrique Mora, the European Union's coordinator for the talks, said the sides "don't have all the time in the world". "What I felt this morning was from...all delegations a renewed sense of purpose in the need to work and to reach an agreement on bringing the JCPOA back to life," Mora said, using the deal's formal name, the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action. Russia's envoy said the short meeting had been constructive and that all sides agreed on the need to restore the accord "successfully and swiftly."

Under the 2015 accord with major powers, Iran limited its nuclear programme - which the West feared would be used to develop weapons, something Tehran denies - in return for relief from U.S., European Union and U.N. sanctions. Trump pulled the United States out of the deal in 2018 and reimposed harsh U.S. sanctions, and Iran began violating the nuclear restrictions a year later. Indicating that Washington may be losing patience, President Joe Biden's administration is moving to tighten enforcement of sanctions against Iran with the despatch of a senior delegation to the United Arab Emirates next week, the U.S. State Department said as talks resumed on Thursday. – Agencies

Economy is growing fast, says Ch Fawad

Addressing a news conference in Islamabad on Thursday, along Food Minister Syed Fakhar Imam, he said it is expected that the country will continue its GDP growth with 5 percent during this fiscal year. He said the sales of tractors, vehicles and other agricultural machinery have been increased. Chaudhry Fawad Hussain has said that Sindh was being ruled by a government that had nothing to do with the welfare of the people. He said that the policies of the Sindh government were badly hurting the people of the province. The minister said that flour and sugar prices were the highest in Sindh as compared with the rest of the country and the people of Sindh were deprived of health card and ration program. He said that the people of Sindh were deprived of this facility due to the anti-people policies of the PPP government, and the public representatives of Sindh including MNAs and MPAs should ask their Chief Minister for which reason he was taking revenge from the people of the province. "Flour is being sold at Rs 1100 per 20 kg bag in the whole country except Sindh, as people of Karachi and Sindh were forced to purchase it at Rs 1460 per bag. The price of sugar across the country is Rs 90 per kg, but in Sindh it is being sold between Rs 97 and Rs 100", he added. He said that Transparency International's post-Covid-19 survey was encouraging because for the first time, there was no evidence of corruption committed by the political government. Chaudhry Fawad said that the people of Pakistan had a government after a long time which was not accused of any type of corruption. He said that even the opponents of the Prime Minister in Pakistan believed in his uprightness. "Trust in political government is being restored today, 89 per cent people have expressed confidence on the performance and initiatives of the government after outbreak of the coronavirus which was big achievement", Chaudhry Fawad said. He said there were very few examples in the world that a country's economy was developing at 5 per cent per year after the pandemic. "Our economic growth figures are also being acknowledged by the IMF, and there is likelihood that Pakistan will go beyond 5 per cent growth rate," he said. The agriculture sector due to the policies of the government earned about Rs 400 billion additional amount last year, he said, adding farmers earned Rs 118 billion in wheat, Rs 138 billion in cotton, Rs 46 billion in rice and Rs 3 billion in maize and Rs 96 billion in sugarcane. The minister said that demands of tractors, vehicles, agricultural equipment and urea fertilizer increased due to surplus income in agriculture sector. The price of urea fertilizer in Pakistan was Rs 1700, whereas its price in the international market had crossed Rs 10,000 mark, he said. The minister said that a truck loaded with urea fertiliser was sent abroad, it would earn Rs 8 million.

Afghanistan to host Netherlands in Qatar for three ODIs

“Afghanistan will also host Australia and Pakistan in the ODI league before travelling to India, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka for the remaining series”

KABUL: Afghanistan will play three one-day internationals against the Netherlands in Qatar next month, the country's cricket board announced on Wednesday. The ODIs will be part of the International Cricket Council's Super League, which serves as qualifying for the 2023 World Cup. "Afghanistan will host the Netherlands in three ODIs on January 21, 23 and 25 to be played in Asian Town cricket stadium in Doha, Qatar," a press release from the Afghanistan Cricket Board said. Nine of the top 10 ranked ODI teams are taking part in the one-day league from which seven teams will qualify for the World Cup, with India getting a direct entry as the hosts. The Netherlands series will be Afghanistan's second ODI league series after they beat Ireland 3-0 in Abu Dhabi last year. "Afghanistan will also host Australia and Pakistan in the ODI league before travelling to India, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka for the remaining series," said the statement. Afghanistan qualified for the 2015 and 2019 50-over World Cups. They also took part in the Twenty20 World Cup in October-November, losing three of their five games and failing to qualify for the semi-finals. Qatar has become the new base for Afghanistan cricket since the Taliban took over the government in September. They previously played their international matches at neutral venues in India and the United Arab Emirates. ICC last month set up a working group to observe and review cricket in Afghanistan after the Taliban barred women. That prompted Australia to postpone last month's Test match against Afghanistan, demanding the ban on women should be lifted. ICC rules demand all member countries must have active men's and women's teams. – APP

Lithuania braces for China led corporate boycott

FOREIGN DESK

FRANKFURT: China has told multinationals to sever ties with Lithuania or face being shut out of the Chinese market, a senior government official and an industry body told Reuters, dragging companies into a dispute between the Baltic state and Beijing. China downgraded its diplomatic ties with Lithuania last month, after the opening of a representative office by Taiwan in Vilnius. Lithuania's ruling coalition had agreed in November last year to support what it described as "those fighting for freedom" in Taiwan, putting its relations with China at risk. China views self-ruled and democratically governed Taiwan as its territory and has stepped up pressure on countries to downgrade or sever their relations with the island. China's foreign ministry spokesman Wang Wenbin said on Thursday that China followed international trade rules and again criticised Lithuania for its stance on Taiwan. "It has created the false impression of Taiwan being separate from China, gravely harmed China's sovereignty and territorial integrity, and started an egregious precedent among the international community," he said. "China will firmly safeguard its sovereignty, territorial integrity and core interests." Taiwan has other offices in Europe and the United States but they use the name of the city Taipei, avoiding reference to the island itself. Lithuania's direct trade with China is modest, but its export-based economy is home to hundreds of companies that make products such as furniture, lasers, food and clothing for multinationals that sell to China. "They (China) have been sending messages to multinationals that if they use parts and supplies from Lithuania, they will no longer be allowed to sell to the Chinese market or get supplies there," Mantas Adomenas, Lithuania's vice-minister for foreign affairs, told Reuters. "We have seen some companies cancel contracts with Lithuanian suppliers." He did not name any companies or suppliers affected. The Lithuanian Confederation of Industrialists, which represents thousands of Lithuanian companies, confirmed that some multinational companies that buy goods from Lithuania suppliers were being targeted by China. "This week was the first time we saw direct Chinese pressure on a supplier to drop Lithuanian-made goods," Vidmantas Janulevicius, the Confederation president, told Reuters. "Previously, we only had threats it could happen, now they became reality." "For us, the most painful part is that it's a European company," said Janulevicius, referring to the multinational. "Many Lithuanian businesses are suppliers for such companies." He did not name any companies. Lithuania is looking at setting up a fund to shield local companies from Chinese retaliation, a senior government official told Reuters. The Lithuanian government is in talks with the companies at risk of fallout from the China dispute about offering possible financial support, such as loans, the government official said. Lithuania has also appealed to the European Commission for support. In a letter sent earlier this week to top officials at the Commission and seen by Reuters, Lithuanian foreign minister Gabrielius Landsbergis asked for support in rebuffing China. "A strong reaction is necessary at the EU level in order to send a signal to China that politically motivated economic pressure is unacceptable and will not be tolerated," the letter said. The European Commission responded in a statement that the EU was ready to stand up against all types of political pressure and coercive measures applied against any member state.

Travis Head century puts Aussies in firm command

BRISBANE: Travis Head blasted the third-fastest century in Ashes history to crush England hopes on the second day of the opening Test at the Gabba on Thursday. At the close of play a dominant Australia were 343-7, a lead of 196 on England's dismal first-innings total of 147. Head was on 112, alongside Mitchell Starc, who was not-out 10, on another inspiring day for England in Brisbane. England had threatened a comeback after tea when Ollie Robinson took two wickets in consecutive balls, but Head's aggressive innings put paid to any hopes of a miracle recovery. The 27-year-old Head, controversially recalled to the Australia side ahead of veteran Usman Khawaja, justified his selection by passing 100 off only 85 balls. He smashed two sixes and 12 fours in his century - the third-fastest in the Ashes behind only Adam Gilchrist's 56-ball ton in Perth in 2006 and Gilbert Jessop's 76-ball effort at The Oval in 1902. "I'm still pinching myself - I can't quite work out what transpired over the past couple of hours," Head said. "I took some chances - technically and mentally I was really composed, really relaxed," he added. "I found the first 20 runs really tough, but the game opened up and I was able to take the chances, which is pleasing." Head attacked from the outset and was particularly harsh on spinners Jack Leach and Joe Root, the English came to the crease with Australia 189-3 after Steve Smith edged Mark Wood to keeper Jos Buttler just before tea. He then watched David Warner (94) and Cameron Green depart to Robinson's accurate seamers after the break, with Australia still only 89 runs ahead. Earlier, Warner rode his luck in the first two sessions. The gritty Australian batsman was bowled by a no-ball by Ben Stokes before lunch, then dropped by Rory Burns in the first over after the break, before Haseeb Hameed bungled a simple run-out. Warner's good fortune began when Stokes bowled him when he was on 17, but the all-rounder had overstepped to give the Australian opener a mighty reprieve. Television replays showed that Stokes had also overstepped on the first three balls of his over, but nothing was called. It later transpired that technology issues were at the centre of the no-ball drama. England needed to take all their chances to keep their hopes of salvaging anything from the first Test after their disastrous start on Wednesday, when they were bowled out in just 50.1 calamitous overs. They started well when Robinson claimed his first Ashes wicket, Marcus Harris, with the score on 10. England went into the Test without veteran seamers Jimmy Anderson and Stuart Broad, surprising many, including Australian captain Pat Cummins. But the seam attack of Robinson, Chris Woakes and the outright pace of Wood were able to keep the Australian batters pinned down early on with some tight and accurate bowling. – Agencies

"The incident should be probed at the highest level and the perpetrators should be given punishments as per the law," he said and added that torture on political workers is unacceptable. The incident occurred a day before Prime Minister Imran Khan will officially inaugurate the Green Line Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) service, a project which was conceived during the tenure of PML-N.

West Indies cricket team arrives amid heavy security

Pakistan were forced to play their home international matches abroad – mostly in the United Arab Emirates – until 2015 when normal service tentatively resumed

KARACHI: The West Indies cricket team arrived in Pakistan on Thursday for a visit which local officials hope will scotch bitter memories of a New Zealand tour abandoned on security grounds. The Windies will play three Twenty20 and three one-day internationals – all in Karachi – starting on Monday, their first visit since 2018. A Pakistani official said a 26-member party had flown to Karachi early on Thursday before being escorted by heavy security to the team hotel. The series comes three months after New Zealand quit their first tour to Pakistan in 18 years shortly before the opening match was due to start following a security alert. That was followed by England's decision to withdraw visits by their men's and women's teams scheduled for October. Pakistani officials were furious with the cancellations, arguing security measures were lock-tight. The cricket-mad nation endured a long spell without a visit from an international team following a terror attack on a bus carrying the Sri Lankan team in Lahore in 2009. Pakistan were forced to play their home international matches abroad – mostly in the United Arab Emirates – until 2015 when normal service tentatively resumed.

US orders
arms embargo on Cambodia

FOREIGN DESK

BANGKOK: The U.S. has ordered an arms embargo on Cambodia, citing deepening Chinese military influence, corruption and human rights abuses by the government and armed forces in the Southeast Asian country. The added restrictions on defense-related goods and services, issued by the State and Commerce departments, are due to be published and take effect Thursday.

A notice in the Federal Register said developments in Cambodia were "contrary to U.S. national security and foreign policy interests." The aim of the embargo is to ensure that defense-related items are not available to Cambodia's military and military intelligence services without advance review by the U.S. government, it said. The latest restrictions follow the Treasury Department's ordering in November of sanctions against two senior Cambodian military officials for corruption and come amid increasing concern about Beijing's sway. At the time, the U.S. government issued an advisory cautioning American businesses about potential exposure to entities Cambodia and its military that "engage in human rights abuses, corruption and other destabilizing conduct."

2 Azeri killed land mine in Karabakh

NEWS DESK

BAKU: Two Azerbaijan construction workers were killed when a mine planted by Armenian forces exploded in the Karabakh region on Thursday. The workers, identified as Vusal Gandiyev and Orkhan Khanatov, were killed in the Shusha region, according to Azerbaijan's Interior Ministry. In a separate incident, an Azerbaijani soldier was killed in "another provocation committed by Armenian armed forces ... in the direction of the Kalbajar region" on Wednesday night. "The Armenian military-political leadership bears full responsibility for the escalation of tensions," the Azerbaijani Defense Ministry said in a statement on Thursday. Azerbaijan has been making efforts to clear the Nagorno-Karabakh region of land mines planted by Armenian forces during their nearly three decades of occupation. Baku handed over 10 captive soldiers to Armenia this month in exchange for minefield maps, while it earlier received maps of 92,000 mines laid in Fuzuli and Zangilan and 97,000 in Aghdam after releasing 30 Armenian nationals. The two countries were involved in a 44-day conflict over Upper Karabakh that started in September last year and ended with a cease-fire brokered by Russia on Nov. 10.

Both sides will facilitate the establishment of BDS/GNSS centers in the Arab states, hold training courses on satellite navigation technologies, and exchange visiting scholars. Each year, China will offer scholarships to three to five students majoring in navigation and communications from the Arab states, said the action plan.

China and the Arab states will also carry out joint BDS/GNSS tests and evaluations, and promote the application of BDS in international search and rescue, among other initiatives. — APP

New German foreign minister
warns Russia over Ukraine

"The territorial integrity and sovereignty of Ukraine aren't up for negotiation for us"

AGENCIES

PARIS: Germany's foreign minister warned Russia on Thursday that it would pay a "high political and economic price" if it makes any militaristic moves against neighboring Ukraine.

Foreign Minister Annalena Baerbock emphasized the need to coordinate a common European position when dealing with hostile neighbors such as Russia, which has amassed troops near the border with Ukraine.

"The territorial integrity and sovereignty of Ukraine aren't up for negotiation for us," Baerbock said in Paris while making her first foreign trip, a day after taking office. She added that the highest priority must be to avoid a military escalation.

"Russia would pay a high political and economic price for a renewed breach of Ukraine's statehood," Baerbock told reporters during a joint news conference with French Minister for Europe and Foreign Affairs Jean-Yves Le Drian. "We can only find solutions down the diplomatic route, and we are both ready to become personally deeply engaged (on this matter)."

Russia insists it has no plans to invade Ukraine unless it is "provoked." In a phone conversation Thursday with Angela Merkel, Russian President Vladimir Putin thanked the now-retired German chancellor for "years of fruitful cooperation," according to the Kremlin's readout of the call.

Putin underscored Merkel's "significant contribution to the development of the Russian-German relations" during her 16 years in office and said she was always welcome in Russia.

Merkel, in turn, wished Putin success in "establishing a dialogue" with new German Chancellor Olaf Scholz, the readout said.

In France, Baerbock said a possible diplomatic boycott of the Winter Olympics in China was another "big topic" on Thursday. The White House and the British and Australian governments have said none of their diplomats will attend the Beijing Games, decisions intended to protest Chinese human rights abuses.

Germany wants to decide how to proceed "in unison with our European friends," she added. Le Drian also said a common European stance regarding a diplomatic boycott of the Olympics was needed. The French foreign minister spoke shortly af-

Russia blasts US stance

MOSCOW: Russia accused the United States on Thursday of refusing to cooperate in a longstanding row over their respective embassies, two days after the issue was raised in a call between presidents Vladimir Putin and Joe Biden.

Deputy Foreign Minister Sergei Ryabkov said that despite reaching an understanding on some "peripheral" issues, the two countries were deadlocked in the dispute over the size and working of their diplomatic missions.

"Overall this whole bloc of issues is at a deep impasse and practically cannot be resolved because of the lack of U.S. cooperation," Ryabkov was quoted by Interfax news agency as saying.

The U.S. and Russian embassies have come under staffing pressure as each side has cut the other's representation in a series of tit-for-tat exchanges as bilateral relations have sunk to their worst point since the end of the Cold War.

The Kremlin has said Putin proposed to Biden that the two countries should resolve the stand-off by lifting the staffing limits they had imposed.

Tuesday's call was dominated by tensions over Ukraine, with Biden voicing concern about a Russian military build-up near the border with its former Soviet neighbour and telling him Moscow would face serious economic consequences if it invaded. Putin has said talk of an invasion is "provocative" and accused Ukraine and NATO of fanning tensions.

Biden said the next day he hoped for an announcement by Friday of high-level meetings with Russia and major NATO allies to discuss Moscow's concerns and the possibility of "bringing down the temperature along the eastern front".

Ryabkov described this as a "unilateral" statement, implying the U.S. side had not discussed it with Moscow. — Agencies ter French Education and Sports Minister Jean-Michel Blanquer said Paris would not join such a boycott.

"Sports is a world in itself, which must be protected from political interference, otherwise...we can end up by killing the competition," Blanquer said on French news channel BFM-TV.

During the wide-ranging news conference with her French counterpart, Baerbock stressed that the sexual assault allegations made by Chinese tennis player Peng Shuai against a former Communist Party official should be taken seriously.

"If a woman makes such allegations, then they should be heard, including internationally," said Baerbock, who is Germany's first female foreign minister.

3 Turkish
soldiers killed in Iraq

AGENCIES

ISTANBUL: Three Turkish soldiers were killed in an attack by Kurdish militants during cross-border operations in northern Iraq on Thursday, the Turkish Defence Ministry said, adding six of the militants were "neutralised".

"Targets identified in the region were struck in an air operation and six terrorists were neutralised according to initial indications. Operations in the region are continuing," the ministry said. "Neutralised" is commonly used to mean killed.

Turkey's operations in Iraq target the Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK) militant group, which has bases there and which is designated a terrorist group by Turkey, the United States and European Union.

The group launched an insurgency in southeast Turkey in 1984 in which more than 40,000 people have been killed.

WHO warns against vaccine
hoarding

WEB DESK

GENEVA: The World Health Organization warned wealthy countries on Thursday against hoarding COVID-19 vaccines for booster shots as they try to fight off the new Omicron variant, threatening supplies to poorer countries where inoculation rates are low.

Many Western nations have been rolling out boosters, targeting the elderly and people with underlying health issues, but worries about the fast-spreading Omicron have prompted some to expand their programmes.

The WHO recommended boosters instead for those with health issues, or those who have received an inactivated shot.

The jury is still out on how effective current vaccines are against Omicron. They have so far proved hugely successful in slowing the spread of the coronavirus and the severity of illness, but low rates of inoculation pose the risk of more dangerous and more vaccine-resistant variants emerging.

"As we head into whatever the Omicron situation is going to be, there is risk that the global supply is again going to revert to high-income countries hoarding vaccine," the WHO's vaccine director, Kate O'Brien, told a briefing.

Uzbekistan: Energy efficient buildings' prospects

"Energy-efficient materials and technologies in Uzbekistan: the state of the market and its development prospects for promoting green construction in the country"

DNA

TASHKENT: he main priority of the government of Uzbekistan is the widespread introduction of energy-saving technologies and the use of alternative energy sources in the economy, social sphere and construction industry.

To speed up the process, since 2017, a joint six-year project of the United Nations Development Program (UNDP) is being implemented in Uzbekistan jointly with the Ministry of Construction of the Republic of Uzbekistan with grant support from the Global Environment Facility (GEF) "Assistance in the development of construction of energy-efficient rural housing in Uzbekistan." As part of the second component of the project, today on 9 December 2021 Tashkent is hosting a business forum "Energy-efficient materials and technologies in Uzbekistan: the state of the market and its development prospects for promoting green construction in the country."

The main national partner organizations took part in the event - the Ministry of Construction, the Ministry of Energy, the Ministry of Economy, the Ministry of Finance, the Center for Hydrometeorologi-cal Service under the Ministry of Emergency Situations (Uzhydromet), the State Committee for Land Resources, Geodesy, Cartography and State Cadastre, the State Committee for Ecology and environmental protection, Qishloq Qurilish Invest LLC, Qishloqurilishloyiha LLC, Qishloq Qurilish Bank JSCB, regional and district authorities, representatives of design engineering companies, institutes and educational institutions, international organizations, domestic manufacturers and others. The event was also attended by representatives of international financial institutions - Asian Development Bank (ADB), Islamic Development Bank (IDB), European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) and KfW.

The main goal of the project is to provide the rural population of Uzbekistan with improved and affordable living conditions that do not harm the environment. For these purposes, about US$136.6 million has been allocated.

A lot of work has been done since the start of the project. Based on the Resolution of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan PP-4028 from 24 November 2018, a subsidized green mortgage lending scheme was developed to increase demand for energy efficient (EE) and low-carbon (LC) rural housing. One-story and multi-story EE and LC affordable rural houses have been built in five regions of Uzbekistan.

And also the construction of a demonstration pilot house with practically zero energy consumption was launched in the Yashlik mahalla in the city of Nurafshan in the Tashkent region. In November 2019, a business forum was held in Tashkent on the topic: "Energy efficient solutions in Uzbekistan: current state and development prospects." The event made it possible to demonstrate the available financial mechanisms of a market economy, exchange views and experiences, and discuss the prospects for "green construction" and "green economy".

In addition to presenting the achieved results of the Project's work and its future plans, the business forum allowed evaluating new approaches and solutions, updating the base of energy-efficient materials and technologies, getting acquainted with innovations in the field of building materials, exchanging knowledge and experience with representatives of various manufacturing companies and suppliers of energy-efficient materials and technologies.

"The natural energy resources used by humanity are gradually drying up, while the cost of extracting and processing primary fuel and energy resources is increasing, and their irrational use negatively affects the environment. Efficient use of resources through the use of innovative approaches in construction, as a solution to this problem, is currently one of the priority areas in Uzbekistan."

This project aims to reduce energy consumption in the residential sector by improving the thermal performance of the structures themselves, as well as introducing energy efficient and low carbon technical solutions. Such measures ensure the saving of natural and financial resources, and the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions into the atmosphere.

We hope that this forum will help to develop the necessary recommendations for further actions in order to strengthen cooperation with stakeholders in promoting EE and LC solutions in the housing sector of Uzbekistan, said the project manager, Timur Ibragimov.

During the presentations and roundtable discussions, issues were raised such as market development and improvement of the supply chain for EE and LC technologies and materials, energy efficient design solutions, strengthening the regulatory framework for the implementation of energy efficient and low-carbon technologies and materials in housing construction in Uzbekistan.

Also, within the framework of the business forum, a specialized exhibition of energy efficient materials and technologies from local and foreign manufacturers was organized. The Forum has become a platform for domestic manufacturers, suppliers, construction companies and design organizations to discuss the necessary measures to expand available market solutions, accelerate the introduction of new EE and LC technologies, exchange ideas and strengthen cooperation.

The Festival focuses on independent Pakistani films and includes feature films, short films, documentaries and animated films. The first film screened was Sharmeen Obaid-Chinoy, Sitara, 2019 Sitara takes the audience on a journey through the old city of Lahore in the 1970s, where a fourteen-year-old girl called Pari dreams of becoming a pilot. Pari's story is told through the perspective of her six-year-old sister, who like the audience is unaware of the traditions and barriers that lay in the paths of women from this family. Nida Kirmani & Dostain Baloch, Khel Khel Mein, 2021 This is the story of three young people from the area of Lyari in Karachi—an area that is known for being one of the most conflict-ridden parts of the city. However, Lyari is also one of the oldest, most diverse and vibrant parts of the city.

Each of the young people featured in this documentary are pushing gender boundaries in their own unique ways. Haya Fatima Iqbal, The Sky is Far, The Earth is Tough, 2021 Shahbano, Zarb Ali and Nusrat are all residents of district Ghizer, which is one of the most prone districts to climate disasters and is host to a simmering mental health crisis. It has had the highest rates of suicides in the past seven years. The film explores how climate change has an impact on the mental health of mountain communities affected by climate disasters, through a human lens. Nauman Khalid, One Way Glass, 2021. 'One-way Glass' is the story of a hapless migrant Pakistani woman trapped in a violent loveless marriage. The film follows her path to freedom via the revelation that her husband, like her, leads a clandestine parallel life. Madyha Leghari, Hairless, 2019 A fictional city grapples with an inexplicable, complete loss of hair. Posited both as an extension and the boundary of a body, hair occupies a liminal position between the animate and inanimate "dead" matter. Since the influence of evolutionary thought in the nineteenth century, comparative hairlessness in humans has been the subject of extensive cultural debate and resultant shift in its value. "Excessive" human hair is variously associated with sexual inversion, the primitive, the criminal, the pathological, the diseased, the beast or even the lunatic.

The film satirizes these accounts by removing the supposed evolutionary obstacle posed by hair. However, the resultant world is that of tactile longing, sensory deprivation, and eco-anxiety. Manele Labidi, Arab Blues, 2021 Selma, a psychoanalyst, deals with a cast of colorful new patients after returning home to Tunisia to open a practice. In this sophisticated comedy, Manele Labidi opens a fascinating window into modern Tunisia at a crossroads, with a story of contrasts, contradictions and culture clashes, full of vitality and humor. The event has been carefully curated to create a thoughtful and immersive experience for the viewer, ending with a discussion with a panel discussion with filmmakers.

The guest of honor was Assistant Superintendent of Police Amna Baig, an Islamabad-based police officer in charge of the law enforcement's Gender Protection Unit - a government initiative to facilitate women and transgender individuals in their fight against discrimination and injustice.

"Even though gender-based violence is pervasive, it is not inevitable," Charge d'affaires Aggeler said at the event. "It can and must be prevented. This is why we take this time each year to reinvigorate our efforts against gender-based violence and to call for greater collective and individual action to prevent and respond to all forms of violence against women." She added that it was in this spirit that the Embassy nominated Assistant Superintendent Baig for the 2022 U.S. Secretary of State's International Women of Courage Award, which recognizes women from around the globe who have demonstrated exceptional courage and leadership in advocating for peace, justice, human rights, gender equality, and women's empowerment. ## Dr Nudrat wins ADR lawyer award

The awards were organized by Ministry of Law and Justice, Women in Law Initiative, Group Development Pakistan with support from the Australian High Commission and British High Commission

DNA

ISLAMABAD - Pakistan's 1st Women in Law Awards 2020-21 and Symposium on Diversity and Inclusion were held in Islamabad. Dr Nudrat Piracha won the best Appropriate Dispute Resolution (ADR) Lawyer award. The awards were organized by Ministry of Law and Justice, Women in Law Initiative, Group Development Pakistan with support from the Australian High Commission and British High Commission and were distributed by the law minister's office. Dr. Nudrat E. Piracha is the first woman in Pakistan to have qualified as a Doctor of Juridical Science (S.J.D), which is the highest degree in law awarded to people with exceptional academic and professional record. She is a Fulbright scholar, a Weinstein JAMS International Fellow for 2018, and the first lawyer from Pakistan to become a Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators, UK.

Dr Piracha is partner at the firm Samdani & Qureshi, Islamabad. In the past, she had dealt with corporate issues, commercial and investment arbitrations and has cross-border issues and transactions. She also worked on cases like Bayindir concerning an approximate claim of USD 800 million, Agility concerning an approximate claim of USD 650 million, and advised the government concerning annulment of the Riko Dik dispute valuing approximately 6 billion dollars. She is also advising the government as a member of a twelve-member committee on improving the international investment regime of Pakistan and eight member committee on international law. She is also author of treaties on investment arbitration, which is referred to by giants in the field as a "uniquely impressive tome." She has been referred to by Judge Charles N. Brower (Judge of the International Court of Justice, Iran-U.S. tribunals and arbitrator for over fifty years) as truly a "Wonder Woman" of international law. Pakistan in international cases has lost significant battles before international forums. The resistance against ADR has been witnessed during its development stages in other more developed countries as well. There is a dearth of expertise in the area in Pakistan and people are comfortable with what they know and understand. It is often thought that the users of the system are not sufficiently trained to effectively pursue international ADR. But ADR is the need of this time and age and cannot be avoided for too long, and internationally acclaimed professionals like Dr Piracha are an asset to the country.
