News Desk

ALMATY: Kazakhstan's President Kassym-Jomart Tokayev has described deadly violence last week as an attempted coup d'etat. He told leaders of a military alliance of ex-Soviet states the action had been co-ordinated by a "single centre", but did not name those responsible. Russia's President Vladimir Putin said Kazakhstan had been targeted by international terrorism, but provided no evidence for this claim.

He added that Russia would never allow revolutions in the region.

Troops from Russia and other countries are currently in Kazakhstan to restore order. The demonstrations, triggered by a rise in fuel prices, turned into the worst unrest the country has seen in its 30 years of independence. Dozens of people are reported to have died, including 16 members of the security forces. The protests started on 2 January and grew to reflect discontent at the government and former President Nursultan Nazarbayev, who led Kazakhstan for three decades and is still thought to retain significant influence. Correspondents say the recent violence may be linked to a power struggle within the ruling elite. A week after violence erupted, the authorities say the situation has now stabilised, with troops continuing "clean-up" operations and guarding strategic facilities. A state of emergency and a nationwide curfew remain in place. Almost 8,000 people have been detained throughout the country, the Interior Ministry said on Monday. The security talks between leaders of the Russian-led Collective Security Treaty Organisation (CSTO) military alliance came as Kazakhstan began an official day of mourning to commemorate those killed in the unrest.

"Armed militants who were waiting in the wings joined the protests. The main goal was obvious: the undermining of the constitutional order, the destruction of government institutions and the seizure of power. It was an attempted coup d'etat," Mr Tokayev said. Forces in Kazakhstan for 'limited' time: Putin

ALMATY: Russian President Vladimir Putin said Monday that a Moscow-led military detachment deployed to counter unrest in Kazakhstan would remain in the Central Asian country for only a "limited" period. "A contingent of CSTO peacekeeping forces has been sent to Kazakhstan – and I want to emphasize this – for a limited time period," Putin said during a meeting of leaders from ex-Soviet countries, during which he added that Kazakhstan had been targeted by "international terrorism" and vowed that Russia would not allow "revolutions" in the region.

Last week, US Secretary of State Antony Blinken questioned Kazakhstan's decision to seek Russian military help, as the first of about 2,030 Russian-led troops arrived in the country. Officials in Moscow gave assurances their presence was temporary.

Mr Blinken urged the Kazakh authorities to respect the rights of protesters while maintaining law and order. – Agencies

What is cryptocurrency?

GULRUKH KHAN

cryptocurrency (or "crypto") is a form of payment that can circulate without the need for a central monetary authority such as a government or bank. Instead, cryptocurrencies are created using cryptographic techniques that enable people to buy, sell or trade them securely.

Cryptocurrencies can be exchanged for goods and services, though they often are used as investment vehicles. Cryptocurrency is also a key part of the operation of some decentralized financial networks, where digital tokens are an important tool for carrying out transactions.

The most popular cryptocurrency, Bitcoin, has had a historically volatile price. In 2021, it hit an all-time high above $69,020 before falling back (Source Binance Exchange).

Cryptocurrency is decentralized digital money that's based on blockchain technology. You may be familiar with the most popular versions, Bitcoin and Ethereum, but there are more than 10,000 different cryptocurrencies in circulation. Let's have a look at the price of 1 BTC over the years. 2010 0.5$, 2011 10$, 2012 10$, 2013 745$, 2014 310$, 2015 360$, 2016 1000$, 2017 19000$, 2018 3809$, 2019 12069$, 2020 28000$ 2021 69020$

Its Start from nothing. In 2009 You 1000 BTC was equal to 0.03 USD.

How Does Cryptocurrency Work?

A cryptocurrency is a medium of exchange that is digital, encrypted, and decentralized. Unlike the U.S. Dollar or the Euro, there is no central authority that manages and maintains the value of a cryptocurrency. Instead, these tasks are broadly distributed among a cryptocurrency's users via the internet. You can use crypto to buy regular goods and services, although most people invest in cryptocurrencies as they would in other assets, like stocks or precious metals. While cryptocurrency is a novel and exciting asset class, purchasing it can be risky as you must take on a fair amount of research to fully understand how each system works.

Bitcoin was the first cryptocurrency, first outlined in principle by Satoshi Nakamoto in a 2008 paper titled "Bitcoin: A Peer-to-Peer Electronic Cash System." Nakamoto described the project as "an electronic payment system based on cryptographic proof instead of trust." That cryptographic proof comes in the form of transactions that are verified and recorded on a blockchain. What Is a Blockchain?

A blockchain is an open, distributed ledger that records transactions in code. In practice, it's a little like a checkbook that's distributed across countless computers around the world. Transactions are recorded in "blocks" that are then linked together on a "chain" of previous cryptocurrency transactions.

"Imagine a book where you write down everything you spend money on each day," says Buchi Okoro, CEO, and co-founder of the African cryptocurrency exchange Quidax. "Each page is similar to a block, and the entire book, a group of pages, is a blockchain."

With a blockchain, everyone who uses a cryptocurrency has their own copy of this book to create a unified transaction record. The software logs each new transaction as it happens, and every copy of the blockchain is updated simultaneously with the new information, keeping all records identical and accurate.

To prevent fraud, each transaction is checked using one of two main validation techniques: proof of work or proof of stake.

How Can You Use Cryptocurrency?

You can use cryptocurrency to make purchases, but it's not a form of payment with mainstream acceptance quite yet. A handful of online retailers like Overstock.com accept Bitcoin, but it's far from the norm. Until crypto is more widely accepted, you can work around current limitations by exchanging cryptocurrency for gift cards. At eGifter, for instance, you can use Bitcoin to buy gift cards for Dunkin Donuts, Target, Apple, and select other retailers and restaurants. You may also be able to load cryptocurrency to a debit card to make purchases. In the U.S., you can sign up for the BitPay card, a debit card that converts crypto assets into dollars for purchase, but there are fees involved to order the card and use it for ATM withdrawals.

Can I purchase crypto in Pakistan?

Unfortunately, the residents of Pakistan cannot buy Bitcoin on Binance (or any other crypto exchange) using their debit or credit cards as the local banks have restricted transactions to or from crypto exchanges with a reason that virtual currencies do not qualify as a legal tender in the country.

Is Cryptocurrency ban in Pakistan?

Despite the growing crypto culture in Pakistan, the country does not have a solid law-work to regulate these virtual coins. Pakistan's Sindh High Court has directed Prime Minister Imran Khan's government to speed up the regulation of cryptocurrencies. How to Buy Bitcoin in Pakistan (Step-by-step guide).

Download the Binance app or go to the website to create an account. Create an account and verify it. ... Once verified, you can start purchasing by selecting the Buy Crypto -> P2P Trading option. Enter the amount in PKR and select a trader for buying the USDT.

ing Russia, Central Asian region, Africa, Turkey, South East Asian Nations (ASEAN). He said that acquisition of new markets and focus on diversification was very important to take our exports to the higher levels. He said that it was essential for Pakistan to upgrade its industrial sector for producing value-added products for exports. However, the withdrawal of tax exemptions through a mini-budget would create more problems for upgradation of industries and urged that the government should reconsider its decision.

Jamshaid Akhtar Sheikh Senior Vice President and Muhammad

Capital's air revives healthy after downpour

ISLAMABAD: The federal capital's air quality was recorded clean and healthy after months of polluted air amid declined ratio of hazardous environmental pollutants in the atmos phere after week-long rainfalls lashed out the metropolis, reveals the 24 hours ambient air quality report of Pakistan Environmental Protection Agency (Pak-EPA)'s on Monday.

According to the report, since the October 2021 increased ratio of environmental pollutants causing bad air and degraded atmosphere were leading to smog. The National Environmental Quality Standards (NEQS) by EPA set a threshold of 35 microgrammes per cubic meter for particulate matter of 2.5 microns (PM2.5), 120 microgrammes per cubic meter for sulphur dioxide (SO2) and 80 microgrammes per cubic meter to ensure clean ambiance. The report highlighted that the past 24 hours average of PM2.5 was recorded 35.41 microgrammes per cubic meter which was reported higher than the NEQS levels during 8 hours average at 61 microgrammes per cubic meter from 1600 to 2400 hours. The other parameters of daily quality report included SO2 and NO2 which are generally released from industrial emissions. The 24 hours average of SO2 was 18.7 microgrammes per cubic meter and 9.41 microgrammes per cubic meter of NO2 and both effluents were recorded within the permissible limits.

When contacted the EPA official informed that the air quality remained hazardous due to increased vehicular emissions and prolonged dry weather that resulted in huge accumulation of suspended particles of air pollutants in the atmosphere.

The official further informed that the air quality was healthy for all age groups whereas during bad air or increased pollution the general public was advised to wear face covering

LB polls in Islamabad to beconducted through EVM

The federal minister said that it was the vision of Prime Minister Imran Khan to conduct undisputed, accurate and transparent elections in the country while the EVM technology would fulfill all these requirements

KHAYAM ABBASI

ISLAMABAD: Federal Minister for Science and Technology Senator Syed Shibli Faraz Monday said the local government elections in Islamabad would be conducted through Electronic Voting Machine (EVM) as agreed by Election Commission of Pakistan (ECP). "Ministry of Science and Technology (MoST) will provide a specific number of EVMs to the Election Commission of Pakistan (ECP) by next week for testing purpose so that ECP could train its staff and convey its observations", the minister said during a presser. "The legislation regarding EVMs has been completed and now we have entered into the phase of implementation. The question of either EVM will be used in the elections or not is now meaningless", he said. The minister stat-ed that the ECP has conveyed the MoST about their requirements including the number of required EVMs for the local government elections in Islamabad.

While the MoST has written a letter to ECP mentioning the breakdown of machines, which would be delivered to the ECP, he added. The local government elections in Islamabad are likely to be held in the month of April as per the law. The federal minister said that it was the vision of Prime Minister Imran Khan to conduct undisputed, accurate and transparent elections in the country while the EVM technology would fulfill all these requirements. Referring to the elections held in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa last month, Shibli Faraz said that 2,34,000 votes were rejected and this number was higher than of votes of winning candidate while the election results were also delayed. However the use of EVM could have ensured zero wastage of votes and accuracy of results, if used.

For ensuring accuracy of election results, it is necessary to count from rejection of votes, the minister said, adding "Through EVM, the results are obtained soon after the polling process ends".

Referring to the false news spread through some section of media, Shibli Faraz said, "Now conducting election through EVM is going to become a reality. ECP and MoST which represent the government side are enjoying complete working relationship and heading towards the stage of implementa-tion of EVM successfully".

The minister said that the authorities in ECP have also advised the Chief Secretary Punjab to take administrative measures for conducting local body elections through EVM. "Local government elections will reflect that free and fair elections can be possible through EVM", he said each and every vote and prevent This is the mandate of ECP to conduct transparent and effective elections in the country and can seek support from any relevant department in this regards while MoST is fully supporting ECP through enabling it for achieving this target in the larger interest of the country.

The MoST developed a prototype of the EVM and as per the ECP requirements conveyed by ECP on April 17 while the additional features were also incorporated after testing of EVM. To a question, the minister said that inspite of doing criticism for the sake of criticism; the opposition should send its technical teams to get insight into the EVM technology and become a part of this national agenda, realizing the fact that the world is moving towards technology.

abad High Court (IHC) on Monday ordered Capital Development Authority (CDA) to stop operation against slums in Sector E-11 and also sought report from the authority regarding residential scheme for lower income people. The court also ordered to halt CDA's operation in the area till the end of current winter season. Chief Justice Athar Minallah heard the case. Amicus curiae Adnan Haider Randhawa, Umer Ijaz Gilani and Danial Hassan appeared before the court. At the outset of the hearing, the CDA's lawyer informed the court that the authority had served notice to NLC blocks factory in E-11 and the machinery was being shifted following the orders. The chief justice instructed the CDA not to vacate the lands from slums' residents in E-11 in winter season. The court also asked the chairman CDA to tell it tomorrow regarding the housing scheme for lower income community under the CDA's master plan.

The chief justice remarked that the people of slum area had also rights but this city was being built for elites only. The CDA was not even implementing its own laws despite this court repeatedly pointed out. Justice Minallah observed that it was a tragic that no one in CDA ever read the city's master plan. It was the responsibility of this court to protect the rights of every citizen, he said, adding that everyone was equal in eyes of law. - APP

Pakistan in extensive economic crisis

MURTAZA AYUB

ters through media platforms .

AKISTAN'S economy is D facing multiple challenges soaring prices of essential commodities such as oil, gas, wheat, and sugar and usually high shipping charges on its foreign trade.

And regionally struggling with the economic and financial fallout of situation in Afghanistan and domestically it is trying to come to grips with a falling rupee value and lack of resources to keep the prices of electricity, gas, and oil. Before analyzing what else the government can do to overcome this shock, it is essential to investigate the origin of the challenge.

Its first component consists of a quicker than expected recovery of industrial production in major economies amid COVID-19.

Increased global situation for energy and other commodities as a result of this recovery has, in turn triggered a hike in prices of fuel. The impact of high commodity prices has been compounded by their expensive landing costs in Pakistan. And then the depreciating value of the rupee against the US dollar is making Pakistani imports further expensive.

The PTI administration has found itself left with no option but to go back to the IMF with request for resumption of the $6bn loan programme blocked since March. As per the report, Pakistan's gross external financing requirement stands at $23.6 billion in 2022-23. The development comes despite the very conservative estimates accessed by the IMF. Pakistan is now reportedly trying to make a last-ditch effort to strike a staff-level agreement with the IMF to adjust the gap of external financing requirements. According to World Bank report Pakistan has joined the list of top ten nations with the largest foreign debts. However, with the suspension of program loans from World bank and Asian Development Bank now, Pakistan is further at risk of economic crisis.

With the 2023 elections in sight, the government was reluctant to introduce the unpopular measures suggested by the global lenders. The strict programme conditions, especially the ones related to electricity pricing and tax reforms, were also seen as a major obstacle to the government's plan to grow a shrinking economy in time for the next elections.

The IMF open and constructive discussions with Pakistan's finance team including Shaukat Tareen seem to be yielding the desired results. The Sixth review of the programme is expected to be over soon with the IMF releasing two outstanding tranches amounting to $1bn once it completes the validation of the data on power and gas tariffs and tax collection shared by Pakistan. The IMF deal is crucial for Pakistan to sustain its external sector in the short to medium term since the growing trade gap is fueling the current account deficit and bringing the already meagre foreign exchange reserves under massive stress. But it is bad news for ordinary people. Besides making electricity a lot more expensive, the IMF is likely to force Pakistan to implement measures to boost income, consumption, and import taxes to pull up its revenue target also abolish or reduce all kinds of subsidies and hike interest rates. The brunt of these inflationary actions will affect directly low-middle-income families already struggling with finances. The writer is a student FTER several years of delay, the countrywide National Socio-Economic Registry Survey has been completed and has identified more than 34 million poor families to be eligible for financial assistance. The survey has been completed by the Ehsaas Programme, a flagship social safety and poverty alleviation programme launched by this government in March 2019.

This registry was an utter necessity. An important criticism of the Benazir Income Support Programme (BISP), which was the largest social welfare programme in the country before Ehsaas, was of corruption, based on the fact that the process of identification of families to receive financial assistance was not transparent. One of the promises of the PTI government before coming into power was that it would retain and improve BISP. A transparent, accurate and fair process of identification of beneficiaries was necessary in order to make Ehsaas a credible programme, and it is regrettable that this was not concluded sooner. Moreover, this was also imperative considering the government spent more than Rs 200 billion on its social safety initiatives through the Ehsaas Programme.

If the government expected to continue approving a large number of funds for the programme, it was requisite to have a more efficient process. This kind of data collection, collected digitally, in a country where technology is not always up-todate, and surveys and census often lead to controversy, is a milestone, which has also been praised by the World Bank.

Apart from identification, having a basis of assessment for specific data on poverty in Pakistan, based on households and livelihood, is mandatory for policy planning for any country. The survey includes households' information in terms of geographic data, demographics, socioeconomic status, education, health, disability, employment, ene-rgy consumption, assets, communications, agri-landholdings, water-sanitation-and-hygiene (WASH) and livestock. This is crucial data collection that the government and non-government organisations can utilise for a number of policies, including targeted subsidies, specific loans and cash transfers.

Repressive measures

HERE was more concerning news from Afghanistan this week as it was reported that the Taliban's religious police have put up around Kabul ordering Afghan women to cover up. Apparently, the poster, which includes an image of the face-covering burqa, was slapped on cafes and shops this week by the Ministry for the Promotion of Virtue and Prevention of Vice. Since taking over power in August, the Taliban have increasingly curtailed freedoms of women and girls, and this is only the latest example.

Defending the measure, some officials have pointed out the no one will be punished for not covering, as it is just meant to be an "encouragement" for Muslim women to follow Sharia law. However, given the Taliban's history of meting out punishments publicly, few people will find comfort in the above explanation. Many are right to point out that they are trying to spread fear among the people. One must also question the logic of this governance approach. It appears obvious that the Taliban have not learned from their previous stint and also from the examples of other militant groups that came into the governments. Such repressive policing measures will alienate the population from the government, and that is perhaps something the Taliban should avoid given the dire economic situation in the country.

The government's priorities also need to be reconsidered. Over the past couple of weeks, there have been reports of women bathhouses being closed in the north of the country, restrictions being placed on the distance women can travel, and of shopkeepers being asked to remove the heads of all mannequins. Surely, these are not the most pressing issues facing the new Afghan government at this point in time.

Such measures will also not help the Taliban's already fragile relations with the international community. There has already been a lot of hesitance when it comes to engaging with the Taliban and offering humanitarian assistance, and these suffocating measures will further solidify their concerns. International recognition will be extremely hard to attain if things continue in this manner and the Taliban do not fulfill their promises regarding human rights.

Is now the time for a third political party in US?

Dalia Al-Aqidi

History has shown that the party that lost the presidential election has an advantage in been failing on the ground for the past year. American and international media outlets view the US as a deeply divided country and believe that its democracy is at a crossroads, especially with the remarkable rise in crime rates mainly in states governed by Democrats, such as New York, California, Oregon, Minnesota and Illinois. Crimes like targeting the police, thefts, assaults on public and private property, and murders have become a daily occurrence.

Last September, it was reported that 41 percent of Biden voters and 52 percent of Donald Trump voters support the idea of dividing the country in two, based on a study published by the Center for Politics at the University of Virginia, emphasizing that, since 1945, the number of nations in the world has nearly tripled.

Canadian novelist Stephen Marche, author

American people that he has failed to fulfill, which weakened his political party, as shown in recent approval rating polls. He has realized that uniting the country is not as easy as he thought, given the fact that the Democratic Party has never been divided the way it is today. This could be applied to the Republican Party too.

The divisions within the two leading political parties caused by the respective narratives of the far left and far right play a vital role in shaping the future of the country. This highlights the urgent need for more moderate voices on both sides that will put the country's interests ahead of the political interests of the parties.

In 2021, for a brief period, the progressives with their socialist attitude became a heavy burden on the Democratic Party. They were offset by the dominance in the Republican Party of the extreme right-wing groups that insist on rejecting the results of the 2020 presidential election and promoting conspiracy theories. The storming of the US Congress on Jan. 6, 2020, and the riots that led to the burning of cities and properties should be a real wake-up call for the politicians to step back and look at the big picture. The two parties must unite their ranks and get rid of all kinds of extremism before even thinking of leading the people of a country that is on the brink of a civil war, as several experts are projecting. If this step seems far-fetched, then maybe it is time for a third political party to emerge that could combine the moderate voices of both sides and fight the new radical movements that threaten the destruction of the biggest superpower of the 21st century. That being said, the outcome of the November midterms will likely shape the future of America for many years to come.

A continuing disaster

Muhammad Akhter

The Palestinian people, under the oppression of the Zionist powers, lost their territories due to American backing in late 1940s Kashmir was left without their special status, which was granted to the valley under Articles 370 and 35A of the Indian Constitution. Two years ago, on August 5, 2019, the fascist Modi regime revoked those provisions of the India Constitution.

It is worthy to note that the UN Security Council, through its resolution, recognized the right of Kashmiris to self-determination and directed India to hold a plebiscite in the Occupied- territories of Kashmir. The UN reiterated its stance to India through various resolutions, but, India has habitually put a blind eye on these resolutions thus far. Nonetheless, the world leaders concerned with the protection of human rights, including the United States and international organisations, e.g. the UN, have not been able to play their effective role in stopping Indian atrocities in Indian illegally occupied Jammu and Kashmir (IIOJ&K). In India-occupied Kashmir, people are sacrificing their lives in the face of atrocities by Indian security and paramilitary forces. On the one hand, the security forces have turned the Indian-occupied Kashmir valley into an open prison and the world's most militarised zone. Facing the wrath of state-sponsored terrorism on the other size, Indian minorities have also deprived of their fundamental rights and religious freedoms. In this regard, a report by the Human Rights Organisation of Occupied Kashmir has revealed to the United Nations that the occupying forces in Indian-occupied Kashmir have martyred over hundred thousand Kashmiri people in 32 years, out of which some eight thousand five hundred thirty two Kashmiris had been subjected to extrajudicial killings. A few years ago, a delegation from Amnesty International, an international human rights organisation, visited the Indian-occupied Kashmir and discovered the mass graves of Kashmiris who were martyred by the Indian occupation forces. Most importantly, the so-called champions of human rights, international organisations and world leaders must be aware of the fact that since August 5, 2019, there has been a continuous military siege in the Indian-occupied valley, during which about 484 Kashmiris, including women, have been martyred. The brutal use of force, including bullets, pellet guns and tear gas, on peaceful protesters has injured more than 2,000 people and disgraced 118 women over the past two years. In the recent past, the Kashmiri leader Syed Ali Shah Gilani's demise during his detention at the same span of subjugation and oppression, is a serious question mark on the credibility of the so-called champions of human rights. It is also a matter of fact that Gilani's dead body was also taken away from his family by the Indian occupation forces. It should be noted that Pakistan has been supporting the struggle of Kashmiris for the last 74 years, raising its voice on every relevant forum and in the United Nations for the people of Kashmir. On Because of this, India has been at loggerheads with Pakistan from the day one up till now. Briefly put, Pakistan has never closed the door of dialogue with India, this is India, which has been running away. For the sake of regional and global peace and security, the United Nations must stand in the way of India's expansionist ambitions to implement its resolutions to resolve the Kashmir's long-festering issue.

the midterms, as its supporters are more motivated to hit the polls

ITH the beginning of the new year, members of the Republican and Democratic political parties have begun sharpening their swords in preparation for the US' 2022 midterm elections. The November vote is considered the most crucial step for both parties as they aim to prove that the outcome of the 2020 presidential election was either the right or the wrong choice for democracy.

History has shown that the party that lost the presidential election has an advantage in the midterms, as its supporters are more motivated to hit the polls, while this year's elections will also reflect how Americans are responding to President Joe Biden's leadership and the progressive agenda that has

of the "Next Civil War," last week told CNN that it is time for the left to think about secession. The US is a textbook case of a country headed for civil war. A recent poll showed that only 20 percent of Americans have faith in their electoral system and another showed that about 34 percent think violence against the government can be justified. So, in such conditions, where the threat of violence is real and growing and the threats against members of Congress increased 107 percent last year, separation becomes a real option, according to Marche. However, it is extremely dangerous to promote the idea of dividing America based on political affiliations, since the very core of this country is based on diversity and inclusivity. Instead of putting options on the table that will empower global totalitarian states and dictatorships such as China, one should examine the problem and promote real solutions. When President Biden took office a year ago, he made promises to the

The devaluation trends of rupee in 2021

the rupee's downhill journey will not reach a steady point in the following months and

Anum Gul

The currency has dropped so much value in the previous four months, plunging from 169.55 to a dollar to the latest 176.74

AKISTAN'S official currency is struggling. The rupee continues to collapse against the dollar, and its drops are now sending shockwaves across the economy. The currency has dropped so much value in the previous four months, plunging from 169.55 to a dollar to the latest 176.74.Specialists are considering it the greatest drop in a single period in recorded history since the currency was associated with the dollar in the early 1980s.

Rupee downfall has been significantly more prominent in the previous three years. It was about 104.70 to the dollar on 1st Jan, 2017, but the country's monetary management was criticized for deliberately propping it up using tactics that were more administrative than financially wise.

Through a slew of policy initiatives, it was permitted to establish its natural equilibrium, and it appeared to settle down to a little more than a hundred for a few months. However, despite interventions by the State Bank of Pakistan, it has been declining.

Downhill Ride of Rupee

Now, international forecasts indicate that further shedding is on the cards. Fitch has raised its rating on the rupee and now expects it to trade at about 190 to the dollar over the next year. According to one point of view, these changes are nothing out of the norm. Experts analyze the splitting of the rupee along political lines and point out how the situation has stayed approximately the same across numerous regimes. In a recent column in a local newspaper, Dr. Farrukh Saleem, an economic and financial expert who was briefly linked with the current government, provided the following figures.

Highest Gaps in Import and Export

For years, beginning in July 1949, almost one year after the death of the Quaid, our officials opted to maintain the rupee overvalued by not depreciating it, despite the UK weakening the pound by 30%. Except for the United Kingdom, every other Commonwealth country did so. Pound sterling became cheaper in Pakistan, and import reliance began under the pretense of the popular 'import substitution approach' of the time. Since then, our country has seen greater import growth, slower or stagnant export growth, growing foreign debt to pay the difference between imports and exports, and, as a result, boomand-bust growth cycles.

Most, if not all, of our finance ministers are concerned about currency flexibility.

Historically, our exchange rate has benefited imports at the cost of exporters. Nonetheless, we persist to criticize our low export performance. We appear to prefer grieving rather than making the difficult decision to make foreign exchange consistently pricey. Should we also applaud ourselves for our exceptional import growth performance? Many economists tend to make absurd claims, such as 'depreciation relates to a rise in debt.' They failed to see that by failing to depreciate in a timely manner, we fueled import demand in the first place, which was largely supported by expanding foreign debt.

Vagaries of the Rupee

No matter how many dollars the State Bank floats on the market to help balance the situation, they are all absorbed by individuals who trade in currency illegally. Local market factors triggered by the rupee depreciation and rush for the dollar are also in action. Saving in dollars provides a hedge against inflation and protects against the whims of the rupee. There are expenses associated with the rupee depreciating. Take a loan for example. According to statistics, the currency devaluation itself has increased Rs1.9 trillion to the country's domestic deficit. Because international loans must be paid in dollars, the rupee depreciation is not good news for a government with limited reserves. There are credibility problems as well. The rupee was the highest appreciating currency in Asia seven months ago. It is now the worst of the lot.

Currency depreciation isn't always a negative thing if it boosts exports. So yet, this has not occurred. While exports have increased, imports have far outpaced them, sending the rupee into a tailspin. Securing the national currency and allowing it to approach its true value is a critical economic aim. The status of the currency is a clear indication that Pakistan's route to long-term economic recovery would be lengthy and convoluted.

N December 10, 2021, the International Human Rights Day was observed across the world. On that occasion, gross human rights violations perpetrated in different parts of the world were strongly condemned by international organisations championing the cause of human rights. Yet again, the resolutions were passed, but nothing more than that. However, when it comes to the human rights of Kashmiris and Palestinians, who have been deprived of their lands for the last seven decades and have been oppressed by the Indian and Israeli forces, no voice was raised on the international forum, thus giving us a good idea of the world's double standards regarding human rights.

The Palestinian people, under the oppression of the Zionist powers, lost their territories due to American backing in late 1940s. The rise of Zionists pitted against the Arab states in the Middle East, while the United Nations, the representative body, also played a hypocritical role in favour of Israel. The U.S. fully helped the state of Israel to pursue its expansionist ambitions more aggressively. On this basis, the Israeli forces have tried almost every oppressive means to oppress the Palestinians and have not spared even the first holy place of the Muslims in Jerusalem. The Israeli atrocities being carried out against the helpless and unarmed Palestinians continue today and they are bombarded with bullets every day, (e.g. Giza Strip that was brutally bombarded in May 2021).

In December 2017, the former President of the US, Donald Trump announced plans to move the U.S. embassy to Jerusalem. That move took place on May 14, 2018, which reflects its anti-Muslim prejudice, for which the UN General Assembly passed a resolution calling on the United States to reverse its decision. Up to now, the Palestinian people are suffering from Israeli atrocities in their quest for freedom, but the leaders and organizations chanting slogans for the protection of human rights have never been concerned about the protection of Palestinian rights.

The atrocities being committed by the Indian security forces in Indian-held Kashmir, has been a talk of the town. The people of the Indian-occupied Kashmir, who have been fighting for independence from Indian rule for the last 74 years and have made immense sacrifices, have been left in the lurch, reeling at the mercy of their fate. Moreover, at the behest of the Hindutva ideology, Kashmiris' human rights and freedoms were first taken away by illegal occupation of the Kashmir Valley at the time of creation of Pakistan in 1947 and then in August 2019 when

Muhammad Waseem eyes world title after WBA win

BEIJING: Foreign ministers from Saudi Arabia and other Middle Eastern states are visiting China this week for meetings with officials from the world's second largest economy, a leading consumer of oil and source of foreign investment.

The Chinese Foreign Ministry on Monday gave no details of the agendas for the visits, but said they were expected to "deepen relations between the two sides."

The meetings running through Friday will include the foreign ministers of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Oman and Bahrain, along with the secretary general of the Gulf Cooperation Council. Iran's Foreign Minister Hossein Amirabdollahian will also be in China at the end of this week, ministry spokesperson Saeed Khatibzadeh said in Tehran. It wasn't immediately clear if he would join the meetings with the others. Khatibzadeh said the foreign minister left for Oman today. - Agencies terrorism plan" of IS had been averted in Quetta, the spokesman said.

The operation was conducted by Balochistan's CTD in Quetta district in the jurisdiction of Manzoor Shaheed police station, he added. The CTD said it acted on information provided by a source that an IS member named, Asghar Samalani, having head money of Rs2 million in the department's Red Book, was present along with other militants in the general area of QDA graveyard on Quetta's East ern Bypass.

"They were moving to attack a sensitive installation in Quetta. On receiving the information, a CTD team reached the place and intercepted the terrorists," the spokesman said. The militants were asked to surrender by the CTD personnel, but they started firing indiscriminately and lobbed grenades. A shootout ensued in which six IS men, including Sumalani, were killed while four to five others managed to escape taking the benefit of darkness. Efforts were being made to identify the remaining IS members, the spokesman said. An FIR has also been lodged at a CTD police station in Quetta.

KARACHI: There is a scar right above Muhammad Waseem's left eye, right under his brow, but there is a smile on his face and his eyes are a home to humility, just the things that set the World Boxing Association (WBA) number one apart from the rest of the athletes. "I still remember sleeping with the mosquitoes at the national coaching centre, and now I'm going for the world title soon," smiles Muhammad Waseem, as we remembered his early training days when we first met in 2010.

Call it a wonder as he stands tall with the record of being the only Pakistani holding the World Boxing Council's silver champion flyweight title twice. He is now looking to take on the fight for unified world championship after defeating Colombia's Rober Barrera (24 wins, 13 Kos and 4 defeats) 115-113, 115-114 and 117-111 in a unanimous decision in Dubai, which was also the WBA world title eliminator bout.

Artem Dalakian is the current WBA world champion, meanwhile Julio Cesar Martinez holds the WBC world title, and it is the world champion's belt that Waseem is eyeing most ardently.

"It was my favourite fight really. This one and the one against Geimel Magramo," Waseem told The Express Tribune, while sitting right next to his beautiful wife Dr Tabinda, as he had been in Karachi for the 2022 Commonwealth Games build-up event of Queen's Baton Relay that went to different places in Karachi.

Waseem believed that it was his duty to come but mostly just so to see the children in Lyari as the relay's last stop in the City of Lights was the sports-crazy locality.

"I just stayed. I think I couldn't care about the stage either, but it was the children, the aspiring boxers of Lyari that held my heart. I wanted to make sure that they left satisfied, with pictures taken and hands shaken. That was my goal." Waseem is more than a national hero, in fact mostly an unsung hero too, if one looks closely.

The fight against Magramo back in November 2016, exactly five years ago from his last fight was also him defending his WBC silver flyweight title. He knocked out Jether Oliva that year to become the first Pakistani to hold a WBC title.

An impeccable career as a professional (12 wins, eight through knock-outs and only one defeat) that Waseem has created now is a result of an undying drive and an evidence of his strength of character. Despite hurdles, he carries on to move forward, and win too. Coming back to the ring after the last fight that was in December 2020 against Jeny Boy Boca was not easy either.

Against Barerra, this was Waseem's reply to his own conscience as a boxer and an athgan last year, was a huge inspiration behind it," explained Waseem. only turned to pro boxing from amateur recognized global body International Boxing Association (AIBA).

"Coming back after almost a year, the pandemic had not been an easy time for anyone, but also because there were challenges. We couldn't train abroad, the travel restrictions, the visa, I even trained in Islamabad tying rocks to my feet and running because we don't have world class facilities. However, I'm lucky to have coach Danny Vaughan, who had been a huge support and the man behind me winning my last fight especially," said Waseem. Barrera had been a formidable opponent for the 34-year-old, and made sure that he dominated leaving Waseem out of breath in the ninth and 10th rounds.

"In the 10th round, I was almost at the verge of giving up. I was just trying to stay on my feet and he was firing everything he got," remembered Waseem. "But then at the end of the round, Vaughan just motivated me to a point that I had to come back into the fight as a greater boxer."

Partly the last minute inspiration that Vaughan mentioned was Waseem being a married man now, and keeping the honour of his mane, and his family is more important than before. "He just made a point that I needed to win to keep my pride. Also the reason why I was in the ring in the first place, my family and my new life that I be-

MELBOURNE: Novak Djokovic returned to the tennis court Monday for training, having won a legal battle to stay in Australia and play in the Australian Open after his exemption from strict coronavirus rules was questioned. But the government is still threatening to cancel his visa and deport him.

Federal Circuit Court Judge Anthony Kelly reinstated the Diokovic which was pulled after his arrival last week because officials said he didn't qualify for an exemption to a rule that all non-citizens be fully vaccinated. Djokovic's lawyers say that since he recently recovered from COVID-19, he didn't need to be inoculated.

Twenty-three people lost their lives in the tragic incident, while tourists were stuck in snow for more than 20 hours but no one bothered to help them," Shahbaz said. He added that people kept calling for help but neither the traffic police nor any other body was there to assist them.

"The Murree tragedy was nothing but an administrative failure and it demonstrates the incompetency and criminal negligence of the incumbent government," he said.

He further said that it was not the first time that Murree received heavy snowfall and this time, snowstorms had been forecast, so the authorities concerned could have taken preventative measures beforehand.

Referring to the Federal Minister of Information and Broadcasting Fawad Chaudhry's earlier statement in which he appreciated the 'boost in Murree's tourism,' Shahbaz said: "When the tragic incident happened a 'Neru' was sleeping in Islamabad, while the other one was busy rigging Punjab's local body elections." The judge ruled the No. 1 player had not been given enough time to speak to his lawyers before the decision was made and ordered the government to release him from a Melbourne guarantine hotel where he has spent the last four nights. But government lawyer Christopher Tran told the judge that the immigration minister "will consider whether to exercise a personal power of cancellation."

That would mean that the nine-time Australian Open winner and defending champion could again face deportation and could miss the tournament, which starts on Jan. 17. It could also bar him from the country for three years. Late Monday night, Djokovic tweeted out a photo that showed him and his team standing on one of the main show courts of the tournament. He was already back to training, his brother told reporters in Serbia.

"I'm pleased and grateful that the Judge overturned my visa cancellation. Despite all that has happened, I want to stay and try to compete @AustralianOpen," Djokovic said in the post.

The back and forth has gripped the world and caused a furor in Australia. where many initially decried the news that Djokovic, who has been a vocal skeptic of vaccines, had received an exemption to strict rules to compete in Melbourne. Many felt the star, who court documents say is not inoculated against COVID-19, was being given special treatment since Australians who aren't vaccinated face tough travel and quarantine restrictions. Melbourne, in particular, has faced severe restrictions and is one of the world's most locked down cities. But when border police then blocked the 34-year-old on arrival, others cried foul, saying he was being scapegoated by an Australian government facing criticism for its recent handling of the pandemic. The tennis star's brother, Diordie Diokovic, told television network Prva in Belgrade, Serbia: "This is definitely politics, all this was politics." Spanish tennis star Rafael Nadal called the controversy "a circus" and said he supported the decision allowing his rival to play in Melbourne.

Barty demolished Kazakhstan's Elena Rybakina 6-3, 6-2 to claim the 14th singles title of her career on Sunday then returned to win the doubles with Storm Sanders.

It was her first tournament in four months, since a shock third-round loss at the US Open in September, after which she opted to remain in Australia because of the pandemic. But the reigning Wimbledon champion bounced back emphatically to show why she is favourite to win her maiden Australian Open crown.

Barty beat a host of top players in a stacked top half of the Adelaide draw, including Coco Gauff (world number 19), Sofia Kenin (12) and IgaSwiatek (8) on her way to the decider. Her first-round bye in Sydney has been handed to third seed and world number four BarboraKrejcikova, with world number three Garbine Muguruza now the top seed. Former French Open champion Swiatek, who fell to Barty in the Adelaide semis, also withdrew from Sydney. "After a tense pre-season and last week's tournament in Adelaide I feel like my body needs more time to recover before @australianopen," the Pole said on Twitter. ## Kohli "at peace" with form as India gear up

CAPE TOWN: Indian captain Virat Kohli on Monday brushed aside concerns about his form as he looked ahead to the decisive third Test against South Africa starting at Newlands on Tuesday.

Without a century in his past 14 Tests, Kohli said he believed he was still making important contributions to the team.

"I don't look at myself from the lens that the outside world looks at me with," said the 33-year-old who has been a fixture in the Test team since making his debut against the West Indies in 2011. "The standards that they are talking about have been set by myself, they are not an utterance from outside. "I take a lot of pride in wanting to do the best thing for the team and wanting to perform regularly for the team.

"I have been able to do that for a long period of time." Kohli's last Test hundred came against Bangladesh in Kolkata over two years ago in November 2019 but he said he had still been contributing.

"As a player and a batsman I have been involved in many important moments for the team over the last calendar year or so," he said. "I have been part of very important partnerships when the team needed me and those moments have been crucial for us in many Test matches.

"I'm at peace with how I am playing." His opposite number Dean Elgar, whose 96 not out guided South Africa to a memorable victory in the second Test at the Wanderers last week, believes India will be a better team with Kohli back in the line-up. "Virat brings a different dynamic to the December 17-19, 2021. The premier said the Modi-led government's silence, despite the calls for genocide, begged the question whether the BIP govt supports this call, as he noted that it was high time the international community took note and acted.

The prime minister said that under the extremist ideology of the BJP Modi government, Hindutva groups have targeted all religious minorities in India.

"The extremist agenda of the Modi government is a real and present threat to peace in our region," PM Imran Khan said. As the premier tweeted, the Supreme Court of India decided to take up a case related to the hate speeches, including open calls for genocide made at the conclave, NDTV reported. "We will take up the matter," Chief Justice of India NV Ramana said, as quoted by the media outlet.

According to Time of India. as many as 200,000 Muslims gathered in the Bareilly city last week and offered themselves for what they called "mass sacrifice" in protest against the hate speeches.

Pakistan, on December 27, deplored Hindutva leaders' calls for Muslim genocide in India and lamented New Delhi's inaction over the matter. To express Pakistan's serious concerns over the calls for Muslim genocide, the Indian Charge d' Affaires was summoned to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Islamabad. In a statement, the Foreign Office said it was highly reprehensible that Hindu Raksha Sena's Prabodhanand Giri and other Hindutva figures who called for ethnic cleansing of Muslims have neither expressed any regret nor has the Indian government condemned or taken any action against them so far.

Eurozone joblessness shrinks despite Covid-19

BRUSSELS: The unemployment rate in the eurozone dropped again in November, official figures showed on Monday, as hiring withstood new coronavirus outbreaks in several member countries. The EU's Eurostat agency said the seasonally-adjusted jobless rate which measures the number of people out of work as a proportion of the active population as a whole - dipped to 7.2 percent in November from 7.3 percent in October and 7.4 percent in July.

In the 27-member European Union, which includes countries such as Poland not in the single currency bloc, unemployment fell to 6.5 percent in November from 6.7 percent a month earlier. The data were a marked improvement over a year earlier when the jobless rate stood at 8.1 percent in the euro area and 7.4 percent in the wider EU.

The agency estimates that 13.9 million EU residents were out of work in November. Youth unemployment stood at 15.4 percent in the EU and 15.5 percent in the eurozone, also down on the previous month.

The downward trend in unemployment survived fresh outbreaks of the Delta variant in countries such as Germany, the Netherlands and Belgium, suggesting that government decisions to limit restrictions had preserved their economies. Many countries are attempt ing to take a similar approach in their response to the highly contagious Omicron variant, even as daily infection rates have risen to unprecedented levels across Europe. - APP

Kazakhstan's largest city back online after clashes

The CSTO, a Moscow-led regional military bloc that has dispatched peacekeeping troops to the country, was set to hold an online summit on the crisis Monday, with the Kremlin confirming Russian President Vladimir Putin's attendance

ALMATY: Kazakhstan's largest city was back online and appeared to be returning to normal on Monday, as the nation observed a day of mourning after clashes that left dozens dead and the financial hub of 1.8 million people reeling. Almaty, the country's former capital, had been nearly completely offline since Wednesday, but local and foreign websites were accessible again Monday morning, following the worst unrest in the ex-Soviet republic's independent history.

The Collective Securi-Treaty Organisation ty (CSTO), a Moscow-led regional military bloc that has dispatched peacekeeping troops to the country, was set to hold an online summit on the crisis Monday, with the Kremlin confirming Russian President Vladimir Putin's attendance.

AFP correspondents saw public transport on the streets of Almaty for the first time since protests descended into violence earlier this week. leaving strategic government buildings burned and gutted and businesses counting the costs of a looting spree. Lyudmila, a pensioner who was waiting for a bus in the city centre and gave only her first name, said she was alerted to the internet's reappearance by a messenger call from relatives in Ukraine. "I had no idea that we were back online again," she said. She told AFP that during clashes on Wednesday night, injured soldiers had been dragged into the courtyard of the apartment building where she lived for emergency treatment. Kazakhstan has framed the violence in Almaty as an attack by "terrorist groups" and expressed displeasure at foreign media coverage of the events, which began with protests over a fuel price hike in the west of the country on January 2.

On Monday the government said foreign media reports had created "the false impression that the Kazakhstan government has been targeting peaceful protestors". "Our security forces have been engaging with violent mobs who were committing brazen acts of terror," the foreign ministry said in the statement.

But the authoritarian government has also struggled to firm up its own narrative. On Sunday evening the information ministry retracted a statement that had appeared in an officially run Telegram channel earlier that said more than 164 people had died in the unrest. Two private websites that had reported the news said the information ministry had told them the statement was the result of a "technical mistake". Officials previously said 26 "armed criminals" had been killed and that 16 security officers had died. In total, 5,800 people have been detained for questioning, the presidency said in a statement on Sunday. Nur-Sultan, the city that replaced Almaty as capital in 1997 and which was renamed in honour of 81-yearold founding president Nursultan Nazarbayev in 2019, saw comparatively little unrest. - APP

Polish senator sues party leader

WARSAW: A Polish opposition senator whose phone was hacked with advanced spyware has filed a civil suit against Poland's ruling party leader, Jaroslaw Kaczynski, for slander over comments suggesting that he was placed under surveillance in connection to wrongdoing. Hours after the news was reported Monday about Sen, Krzysztof Breiza's case against Kaczynski, Polish prosecutors informed Brejza's father, a city mayor, that he was under investigation as a suspect and needed to appear for questioning.

Both father and son insist that they have done nothing wrong, and accuse authorities of seeking political revenge. They also believe the ruling Law and Justice party is trying to cast suspicion on them as a way to justify the use of the surveillance software, a tool meant to fight terrorism and other serious crimes, against political opponents. The hacking revelations have rocked Poland, drawing comparisons to the 1970s Watergate scandal in the United States and eliciting calls for an investigative commission in parliament. Brejza called the decision to summon his father "revenge targeting the family" for the lawsuit and for revealing "crimes related to illegal surveillance of the opposition." He spoke Monday at a news conference in parliament alongside his wife, Dorota Brejza, who is also his lawyer. Ryszard Brejza, the mayor of Inowroclaw, a city in central Poland, said he was delivered a letter informing him that he must appear for questioning as a suspect but was not informed of what the case involves. "I feel a little like the character from the Franz Kafka novel 'The Trial.' I don't know what this concerns. I can only guess," he told the news station TVN24. - APP

Azerbaijan detects Covid-19 Omicron variant

WEB DESK

BAKU: Twelve people have tested positive for the COV-ID-19 Omicron variant in Azerbaijan. This was stated in a joint statement made by the Azerbaijani Health Ministry, the State Agency for Mandatory Health Insurance, and the Management Union of Medical Territorial Units (TABIB). The ministry reported that the SARS-CoV-2 21K Omicron was detected in 12 samples taken from those arriving from abroad. The statement underlined that vaccination is the most effective way to protect against new and rapidly spreading strains of the virus.

"As a result of the active participation of the population in vaccination, the epidemiological situation in Azerbaijan has remained stable," the statement added. The country confirmed its first COVID-19 case on February 28, 2020. The country introduced a special quarantine regime on March 25 and took a number of measures to fight COVID-19 in the country. The nationwide vaccination is free and on a voluntary basis and is in line with the "Strategy of vaccination against COVID-19 in Azerbaijan for 2021-2022".

Nobel body slams Suu Kyi convictions

The Norwegian OSLO: Nobel Committee, which awards the Nobel Peace Prize, denounced three new convictions handed down Monday against ousted Myanmar leader Aung San Suu Kyi. BAKU: Azerbaijani and Belarus officials have discussed further prospects of cooperation at a meeting in Belarus, Azertag has reported. At the meeting held between Azerbaijani ambassador Ulvi Bakhshaliyev and Speaker of the Council of Belarus Nataya Kochanova, the latter described Azerbaijan not just as a partner for Belarus, but a close friend, the report added.

"Azerbaijan is a country that connects us with friendly, economic, political, humanitarian ties. This collaboration is very important to us as we feel Azerbaijan's support in international organizations on all levels. And surely, in many ways, such good relations between our countries have developed thanks to our presidents," Kochanova said. The speaker noted that an intensive political dialogue is underway between Belarus and Azerbaijan. She stressed the importance of a closer relationship between the sides in such a difficult time. 'Our contacts should be more ef-

We have found a complete mutual understanding of the ongoing processes, in support of each other, and we will do our best to intensify cooperation. We have a good trade turnover this year: in 10 months - $ 442 million," she added.

Ulvi Bakhshaliev expressed gratitude for the organization of the meeting in the Council of the Republic. "I am very happy to be here as an ambassador. We are very grateful to our presidents for the pace that they set for our relationship. And we must try to realize the set tasks in time with the bilateral agenda," she said. ## US, Russia hold highstakes talks on Ukraine

US Secretary of State Antony Blinken stressed Sunday that Russia had to choose between dialogue and confrontation, warning on CNN that there would be "massive consequences for Russia if it renews its aggression on Ukraine"

WED DESK

GENEVA: Top US and Russian officials held crucial talks Monday on soaring tensions over Ukraine and security demands from Moscow, with little hope of a diplomatic breakthrough on the table. The high-stakes negotiations come with Russian troops massing on Ukraine's border and fears of an invasion, and Moscow demanding wide-ranging concessions from Washington and its NATO partners.

The talks launch a week of high-stakes diplomacy between Russia and the West, after Moscow amassed tens of thousands of troops at the Ukrainian border, drawing the United States and Europe into a Cold War-style stand-off. US Deputy Secretary of State Wendy Sherman and Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Sergei Ryabkov opened their meeting at the US mission in Geneva at 8:55 am (0755 GMT), officials said. A convoy of black vehicles with Russian diplomatic plates had arrived shortly before, and was ushered through the large iron gates under a billowing US flag. The two diplomats had already met informally in the Swiss city on Sunday evening, with Ryabkov afterwards telling Russian news agencies the first meeting had been "difficult". Ryabkov was quoted by state news agency RIA Novosti Monday as saying he feared Washington was not taking seriously Moscow's demand of an end to NATO's eastward expansion.

Pointing to a 2008 promise by NATO to consider membership for Ukraine and Georgia, Ryabkov said: "Are they ready to give legal guarantees that this country, as well as other countries ... will not join NATO?"

"I have a rather pessimistic forecast in this regard." Sherman in the talks on Sunday stressed "the freedom of sovereign nations to choose their own alliances," the State Department said. In the muddy trenches on the frontline in Ukraine, where Kyiv's forces have been battling pro-Russian fighters since 2014, there was little hope for diplomacy. "I doubt that anything will change," 29-year-old soldier Mykhailo said as he walked through trenches in the town of Avdiivka, just north of the separatist stronghold city of Donetsk. "Guarantees of not joining NATO will never stop" Putin, Mykhailo said, adding: "he wants to return the Soviet Union in version 2.0." Both sides have set firm lines, with Washington warning that Moscow would face severe consequences from an invasion of Ukraine and Russia demanding wide-ranging new security arrangements with the West. After Monday's talks, a meeting of the NATO-Russia Council will take place in Brussels on Wednesday, then the permanent council of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) will meet in Vienna on Thursday with Ukraine expected to dominate. US Secretary of State Antony Blinken stressed Sunday that Russia had to choose between dialogue and confrontation, warning on CNN that there would be "massive consequences for Russia if it renews its aggression on Ukraine."

"There's a path of dialogue and diplomacy to try to resolve some of these differences," he said. The United States says many of Moscow's proposals are non-starters. Blinken warned that any positive outcome from the talks would rely in part on Russia's willingness to stand down from its aggressive posture, which he likened to "an atmosphere of escalation with a gun to Ukraine's head". "If we're actually going to make progress, we're going to have to see de-escalation," US President Joe Biden's top diplomat said.

Australia's Covid tally surpasses 1M

MELBOURNE: Australia's COVID-19 tally surpassed one million on Monday as the prime minister said the country must "push through" a rapidly-growing outbreak of the omicron variant. The country confirmed over 67,000 new cases, pushing the total to 1.04 million cases, with more than half of them recorded in the past week alone. As many as 2,387 people have lost their lives to the disease. "We're dealing with serious volumes of cases but we are not seeing the same impact proportionally from previous variants in terms of the impact on hospitalizations, ICU and ventilated patients," Scott Morrison told reporters in the capital Canberra.

He said 5,097 coronavirus patients are hospitalized and 78 on ventilators, "which is well, well, well within the capacity." Morrison said "living with COVID means continuing to ensure we press ahead with the vaccination program, adding that the children's vaccination has commenced. According to Chief Medical Officer Prof. Paul Kelly, who was speaking in the news conference along with the prime minister, said Australia has over 500,000 active cases, which is "a very different situation to even a few weeks ago."

But "the vast majority of those 500,000 active cases are mild or indeed asymptomatic," he added. Australia had suppressed previous waves of the pandemic through lockdowns and strict border controls and quarantines. "So those issues about being prepared - having some paracetamol or some ibuprofen in your cupboard. Don't wait to get symptoms before you do that to treat yourself with if you have symptoms of COVID." Australia has so far fully vaccinated 92.1% of people aged 16 and above, while 94.7% have received their first dose of a COVID-19 vaccine, according to the Health Ministry. - APP

KARACHI: Death row inmate Shahrukh Jatoi - the main accused in the 2012 Shahzeb Khan murder case was once again shifted to the central jail after Geo News reported that the convict was enjoying lavish perks at a private hospital in Karachi for more than two years.

According to sources, Jatoi was living on the upper floor of Qamar-ul-Islam Hospital in Karachi, which was reportedly rented by Jatoi's family for the imprisoned convict. Per details, Jatao was living a normal life despite being convicted in a murder case. After the news was broadcast on media, the jail administration took swift action and Jatoi was put behind bars in no time. According to footage, convict Jatoi appeared to be making full use of television, airconditioner, and a refrigerator among other facilities, in a private hospital room - a clear violation of rules and procedures of the Pakistan Penal Code.

Sources said that Jatoi was staying at a private hospital in the Gizri area of Karachi for more than two years instead of Karachi's central jail. He was apparently living a "luxurious life on the upper floor of the private hospital." They further mentioned that Jatoi was also allowed to leave the hospita premises and no police official was seen on duty. Per the report, the upper portion of the private hospital was rented by Jatoi's family. They said that Jatoi was transferred from the jail to a private hospital on the "orders of the Sindh Home Department and an influential person was behind this breach of rules." – APP

Explosion kills 9 children in Afghanistan

NANGARHAR: An explosion in eastern Afghanistan near the border with Pakistan on Monday killed nine children and wounded four, according to the office of a Taliban-appointed governor. A statement from the governor's office said the blast took place when a cart selling food items struck an old, unexploded mortar shell in the district of Lalopar, in eastern Nangarhar province. No other details were immediately available. The province is the headquarters of Taliban rivals, the militant Islamic State group (IS), which has staged several attacks targeting Afghanistan's new rulers since the Taliban took over the country in mid-August. However, the IS has operated in Afghanistan since 2014, carrying out dozens of horrific attacks and most often targeting the country's minority Shia Muslims. Afghanistan is among the countries with the most unexploded land mines and other ordnance from the country's decades of war and conflict. When the ordnance detonates, the victims are often children. - Agencies

ISLAMABAD: Federal Minister for Finance Shaukat Tarin assured on Monday that after the passage of the State Bank of Pakistan (SBP) Amendment Bill 2021, the central bank will still remain under the government's control.The finance minister's comments came during a meeting of the Senate Standing Committee on Finance Revenue and Economic Affairs, with Senator Talha Mehmood in the chair.

The finance minister said the government will nominate the names for the SBP's board of directors. "The government will also have the authority to appoint the members of the board [...]

State Bank of Pakistan will not be independent." The National Assembly's Monday session will take kick off at 4pm, but the SBP bill is not under consideration as per the 48-point agenda issued by the National Assembly Secretariat. Tarin is set to seek approval of the House for the controversial Finance (Supplementary) Bill, generally known as the "mini-budget", with the Opposition set to meet before the session to block his move.

Meanwhile, speaking during the session, Tarin said if Senate is not considered part of Parliament, then why not shut it down."I am an elected Senator, you insulted me in a light tone," the finance minister said as he spoke to the committee's chairman, Senator Mahmood. The finance minister told the committee that there would be a slight increase in inflation after the passage of the so-called mini-budget, as he talked about the bills which are a pre-requisite to resume the $6 billion External Fund Facility (EFF) of the International Monetary Fund (IM-F)."Why shouldn't I impose taxes on cosmetics and drinks [...] agricultural products should also be taxed," the finance minister, adding that the government expects Rs100 billion in income from income taxes. Tarin said the government has delayed the talks with IMF and has given them a later date of January 28 or 31, which was originally scheduled to take place on Jan 12.

UN Resident and Humanitarian delegation led by its Coordinator Julien Harneis called on Chief Minister Syed Murad Ali Shah at the CM House here Monday.

UN delegation discussed the Indus River Basin management and the impact of the climate change.

"Indus delta being devastated with the scarcity of water in the river. The water won't reach to downstream Kotri due to its unavailability and it is the sole reason we are opposing big dams," the chief minister said.

"Indus river is the economic lifeline of Pakistan," he said. Heavy rains are negatively affecting the agriculture while damaging roads and localitie," he said. "Moreover, the water used by the industries and agriculture crops have polluted the sub-soil water. We want to save Indus river from this environmental impact," Murad Ali Shah said.

"The seawater is moving on the land, eroding the soil, agriculture land and human settlements," he said.

"We want the United Nations to sign Framework 2023-27 with Pakistan,' CM Shah further said. This program will help development in environment, health sectors. It will also help the River Basin Management," Murad Ali Shah said. "We extend help to the countries in river management and betterment of the environment," UN official Iulien Harneis said. "We intend to join hands with the Sindh government to ensure the river management," he added.

Last 7 years 'warmest on record' globally: European Union PARIS: The last seven years have 1000-years heatwave in North Amerabove pre-industrial levels, measured been the hottest on record globally "by a clear margin", the European Union's climate monitoring service reported Monday, as it raised the alarm over sharp increases in record concentrations of methane in the atmosphere.

Countries around the world have been blasted by a relentless assault of weather disasters linked to global warming in recent years, including record-shattering wildfires across Australia and Siberia, a once-inica and extreme rainfall that caused massive flooding in Asia, Africa, the US and Europe.

In its latest annual assessment, the Copernicus Climate Change Service (C3S) confirmed that 2021 had joined the unbroken warm streak since 2015. It found that last year was the fifth warmest on record globally, marginally warmer than 2015 and 2018. Accurate measurements go back to the mid-19th century. The annual average temperature was 1.1 to 1.2 degrees Celsius between 1850 and 1900, C3S said. That was despite the cooling effect of the natural La Nina weather phenomenon. Overall, the monitoring service found the last seven years "have been the warmest years on record by a clear margin". "2021 was yet another year of extreme temperatures with the hottest summer in Europe, heatwaves in the Mediterranean, not to mention the unprecedented high temperatures in North America," said C3S Director Carlo Buontempo. - Agencies
