Speaking to journalists in Bannu, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa today, Fazl said that the court has the authority to make decisions; however, legislation is the right of the Parliament.

Pak condemns India's persecution of Yasin

Mr. Malik has taken the desperate decision of going on a hunger strike unto death

KHAYAM ABBASI

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan strongly condemns India's recent move of implicating Hurriyat leader Muhammad Yasin Malik in two more fictitious cases, which have been crafted around incidents that took place more than thirty years ago and have been reopened under the draconian Terrorist and Disruptive Activities Act (TADA) in a clear attempt to perpetuate Yasin Malik's political victimization. Mr. Yasin Malik is already serving out a life-sentence awarded to him after a sham trial by an Indian court on May 25, 2022. Regrettably, Yasin Malik is also being denied the right of personal appearance in the ongoing trial, in complete contravention of legal and democratic norms. Once again, India has employed judiciary as a tool to damage the morale of the Kashmiris by making their true leadership a target of flagrant prejudice. Left with no legal recourse and faced with blatant denial of his rights, Mr. Malik has taken the desperate decision of going on a hunger strike unto death from 22 July 2022. The inhuman incarceration of Mr. Yasin Malik, his sham trials under fabricated cases, his fallacious conviction and the malevolent attempts at defiling the legitimate struggle of the Kashmiris for their right to self-determination as "terrorism" is nothing but further corroboration of India's known credentials of being a serial violator of human rights and usurper of the fundamental rights of the Kashmiri people.

Imran Khan threatens mass movement if mandate stolen

Zardari to Elahi: snub Imran and join us

ALI HAMZA

LAHORE: Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) co-Chairman Asif Ali Zardari has told Punjab chief minister candidate and Pakistan Muslim League-Q leader Pervaiz Elahi to snub Imran Khan and join him, warning that otherwise their political fight would turn into personal animosity. As the word goes that even the calmest person has an extent, it has ostensibly happened with PPP co-chair after 'U-turns' he experienced on Elahi's part. Zardari, who is deemed as the kingmaker in local politics, a placid individual, and the one who is tasked to shift the balance of votes in favor of PML-N's Hamza Shahbaz, has apparently freaked out at what Elahi has done in the past. Elahi was nominated as the chief minister for Punjab by its political rival - PML-N - just because of Zardari's efforts - and certainly his persuasive abilities - when the PTI government was near to losing the power in the center and then in

Russia starts gas supplies to Europe

A total shutdown of imports or a sharp reduction in the flow from east to west could have a catastrophic effect

AGENCIES

BERLIN: Russia on Thursday restored critical gas supplies to Europe through Germany via the Nord Stream pipeline after 10 days of maintenance, but suspicion lingered that the Kremlin would trigger an energy crisis on the continent this winter. Germany, which is heavily dependent on Russian gas, had feared that Moscow would not reopen the pipeline after the scheduled work and accused Moscow of using energy as a "weapon". The showdown came amid the worst tensions in several years over Russia's invasion of Ukraine. Germany believes Russia is squeezing supplies in retaliation for Western sanctions over the war. Klaus Mueller, head of Germany's energy regulator, the Federal Network Agency, said that by late morning gas flows were on track to return to 40 percent of the pipeline's capacity - the same reduced level as before the maintenance work. "But given the missing 60 percent (of supply) and political instability, there is no reason to sound the all-clear," he tweeted. German Economy Minister Robert Habeck angrily dismissed Russian claims that it was a guarantor of Europe's energy supply, saying that Moscow had become a growing "insecurity factor" in the sector.

'Russia storing weapons at nuclear plant'

KYIV: Kyiv on Thursday accused Moscow of storing heavy weapons at Europe's largest nuclear power plant in occupied Ukrainian territory, after Russia said Ukraine's troops had fired on the facility. Ukraine state energy company Energoatom said on social media that Russia had moved over two dozen pieces of military equipment and ammunition into the engine room of the first reactor. "The occupiers continue to cynically violate all norms and requirements regarding fire, nuclear and radiation safety of the NPP operation, keeping heavy military equipment, ammunition, weapons and explosives just in the engine room of the power unit of the largest nuclear power plant in Europe," it said. Russia earlier on Thursday accused Ukraine of firing this week on the Zaporizhzhia plant, claiming a "catastrophe" was narrowly avoided "by luck".

KPK, Japan & UNDP launch policing plans for merged areas

STAFF REPORT

ISLAMABAD: Khyber Pakhtunkhwa (KPK) Police, government of Japan, and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) Thursday launched the policing plans for the merged areas of the province. The first ever policing plans were introduced for seven districts of merged areas that included Bajaur, Mohmand, Khyber, Orakzai, North Waziristan, South Waziristan, and Kurram. The plans provide a road map for the smooth transition of the post-merger local policing system to the formal policing and justice system in the merged areas, a news release said.

The plans also present a context-specific framework to deliver people-centred policing services through collaborative partnerships with local communities and other agencies of the criminal justice system. Furthermore, the plans also propose recommendations to federal, provincial, and district-level decision makers in addressing resource and capacity gaps. The launch event highlighted the importance of joint efforts between KP Police and development partner to foster a people-centred policing system in the merged areas. The efforts were crucial to restoring public security services, rule of law, sustainable peace, and development in the region. Speaking at the event Inspector General of Police KPK Moazzam Jah Ansari said, "I extend my sincere gratitude to my team in KP Police and UNDP for their exceptional work in developing the very first policing plans for the merged areas." He said the plans presented a necessary road map to guide the post-merger transition in policing and better service delivery to the people. On behalf of the KP Police, he extended his thanks to UNDP for its technical advice and assistance, and the government of Japan for its generous funding. Japanese Ambassador to Pakistan WADA Mitsuhiro thanked UNDP and KP Police for their pioneering efforts to strengthen policing in the merged areas.

"Improving the local police service in merged areas is a key priority in ensuring a smooth transition to equitable public security and justice delivery in the post-merger districts. Therefore, the development of the police plans is a crucial milestone in achieving this essential objective," he maintained. UNDP Pakistan Resident Representative Knut Ostby said the policing plans would guide the trajectory for a better policing system that is responsive to the needs of local communities. In addition to this, the infrastructure support to build new police stations and training former Levies and Khasadars who were recently integrated into KP Police will complement and add value to this crucial transition phase in the merged areas. The initiative also includes infrastructure development support to build five new police stations in districts Bajaur, Mohmand, North Waziristan and Kurram, and train 278 former Levies and Khasadars who were recently integrated into the KP Police.

Khan suffering from 'Zardari phobia': Sherry

ISLAMABAD: Federal Minister and Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP) Vice President Senator Sherry Rehman on Thursday said PTI Chairman Imran Khan was still suffering from 'Zardari phobia' as he was accusing PPP co-Chairman Asif Ali Zardari of bribing his party's members of the Punjab Assembly. Responding to the allegations levelled the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf chairman against the PPP leader, Sherry said in a statement said blaming Asif Zardari for vote buying was like that of hoax accusations hurled by Imran Khan against 'Mr X' and 'Mr Y'. "Imran Khan considers Asif Ali Zardari behind his every failure and accuses him of defection of his party members and MPAs," she added. The minister alleged that Imran Khan in fact showed his distrust in his assembly members as evident from his allegations of 'buying and selling their allegiance' by Asif Ali Zardari. "A few days ago, he criticized the Supreme Court and now he wants it to get his (party members) number completed in the assembly." First the PTI leaders pressurized the Election Commission by accusing it of rigging, and was now pleading the same to stop the horsetrading of their party members, Sherry Rehman said. She claimed, "The PTI leaders are asking the apex court and the ECP to interfere in their internal political affairs." Instead of blame game, she advised, the PTI should fix its internal political affairs. - APP

President for industry experts' inclusion in varsities

Rector of IIUI, Professor Dr Masoom Yasinzai, and senior officials of the University attended the meeting

ISLAMABAD: President Dr Arif Alvi on Thursday said that shifting the universities from physical to online education system, setting up university advisory boards with members from industry, agriculture and services sectors was essential for speedy progress and development of the country. The president, during a follow-up briefing on International Islamic University, Islamabad (IIUI), at Aiwan-e-Sadr, urged the universities to offer short-term online and hybrid courses to exponentially increase the supply of human resource equipped with marketable skills. Rector of IIUI, Professor Dr Masoom Yasinzai, and senior officials of the University attended the meeting. During the meeting, the president called upon the varsities to activate their senates to perpetually provide visionary and strategic guidance, in addition to setting up advisory boards with members from industry, manufacturing, agriculture and services sectors. This, he said, would help them to continuously improve upon their curricula and to undertake focused research and development activities for helping the private sector align with current and future market-driven needs. It would also help meet the ever-changing customers' needs and demands, and competing in the regional and international markets in terms of quality and cost-effectiveness of our products and services. The president said that the public sector universities should change their behaviour from a secured job attitude to pro-active. They should also endeavour to continuously improve their skills and knowledge base and carry out market-driven research and development in coordination with private sector industry leaders. He further emphasized that universities, in addition to four-year degree courses and PhD programmes, should also offer short skill-based degrees and diploma programs framed and modulated in coordination and input from the Chambers of Commerce and Industry and industry leaders to increase the supply of skilled and educated human resources to speedily narrow the supply and demand gap. President Alvi highlighted that globally, educational institutions were rapidly shifting from physical education systems to hybrid and online education systems to increase the pace of learning and exponentially increase the number of students. He said that Pakistani universities should benchmark the best online practices of the universities from the developed world and emulate and adopt these best practices for transforming the education systems to remain competitive and relevant. The president said that Higher Education Commission (HEC) should continuously review its Online and Distance Learning policy and take concrete and time-bound actions to encourage the universities to shift to the online mode of education. He also advised HEC to proactively market its 24,000 courses of discounted Coursera Programs to institutions under its purview for their faculty members and students in a time-bound manner. President Alvi said that Allama Iqbal Open University and the Virtual University of Pakistan should further improve their curriculum and processes, and offer their academic and learning products to those countries where the online and virtual education system was either in infancy or didn't exist, especially the Islamic countries. He said that the universities should take a critical review of their curriculum and their education and learning system in a holistic and thorough manner to identify behavioural, attitudinal and learning issues to eliminate the underlying reasons behind conflict, discomfort and polarization in students and faculty members to ensure that both the faculty and students were fully focused on gaining knowledge, which was the main purpose of universities. President Alvi appreciated the role of IIUI in promoting education, research, technology and innovation for the benefit of society and the Muslim Ummah. Earlier, Rector IIUI thanked the president for his continuous patronage and guidance to IIUI and briefed the meeting on steps taken by the university to implement various directions and advice given by the president to bring about marked improvement in its performance in all disciplines. - APP

POL products' import gradually reducing: Malik

Musadik Malik stressed the need for 'serious interventions' to create balance in the country's imports and exports to prevent rupee's further devaluation against the dollar and ensure economic stability

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Minister of State for Petroleum Dr Musadik Malik on Thursday said import of petroleum products was witnessing a gradual decline due to effective policies and management of the incumbent coalition government, under the wise leadership of Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif. "This June, the country imported almost 9 per cent less petroleum products with effective management as compared to the same month of the last year," the minister said while addressing a news conference along with Minister for Power Khuram Dastgir Khan here. In June 2021, he said around 778,000 Metric Ton (MT) petrol was sold in the country that came down to 704,000 MT in June 2022, showing a 9 percent decrease. Similarly, there was an 8-9 percent decline in the sale of diesel oil used in heavy vehicles and agriculture machinery. "This has significantly reduced the country's energy import," he added. Besides, he said there was almost a 30 per cent projected reduction in consumption of petrol, if comparison was drawn between July 2021 and July 2022. "In July last, almost 818,000 Metric Ton petrol was consumed, and the consumption projection for the current month (July) is 580,000 MT." Likewise, he said around 730,000 MT diesel was consumed in July 2021, which was expected to be consumed approximately 500,000 MT in the current month. He expressed the confidence that the fuel import would further decline in the coming days as the Petroleum Division was closely monitoring the situation on a daily basis. Musadik Malik stressed the need for 'serious interventions' to create balance in the country's imports and exports to prevent rupee's further devaluation against the dollar and ensure economic stability. He said the good development was that the country's strategic reserves were at the record highest level despite the reduction in import of petroleum products. Sharing details, the minister said current 34-day petrol and 66-day diesel stocks were available to meet the country's energy needs. "We are creating a balance between import and maintaining reserves," he added.

Graduates also received a livelihoods kit to start their careers, including sewing machines for tailors and stove tops and a set of pots and utensils for budding chefs. The Urban Cohesion Hub is a community centre which provides a safe space where women, men, boys and girls of all backgrounds can meet for social events, recreation, education and livelihood programmes, and avail of mental health and legal support. Established with the objective of empowering refugee and host community youth, skills training programmes are offered three times a year to transition into the job market and fulfil their immense potential as active members of their host communities. These include English language training, computer courses, cosmetology, tailoring, and cooking classes. Born and raised in Pakistan, Anmol, an Afghan refugee enrolled herself in the culinary arts course. # ECP rejects PTI candidate's plea for votes recount

ISLAMABAD: The Election Commission of Pakistan (ECP) on Thursday rejected the PTI's application for votes recount in 21 polling stations of PP-7 on which the by-election was held four days ago, on July 17, 2022. PTI candidate Shabbir Awan had filed the petition in the ECP after the high court order. PML-N's candidate had beaten PTI's Awan by just 49 votes following which the latter approached the returning officer (RO), who refused to count the votes again. It was only after that the PTI candidate had moved the high court. In the brief ruling, CEC Sikandar Raja said that the petitioner, PTI candidate Shabbir Awan, could neither prove any fraud or irregularity during the polls, nor was he able to state the reasons for the recount. During the Punjab by-elections on Sunday, PML-N's Raja Sagheer had won the by-poll on the provincial assembly seat with a margin of just 49 votes, defeating Awan. The PTI had also raised questions over the delayed announcement of the result in the constituency. Subsequently, Awan submitted an application to the returning officer and requested a recount. His plea was, however, rejected drawing criticism from the PTI. Later, Awan had approached the Lahore High Court's Rawalpindi bench assailing the RO's "illegal decision" of rejecting plea for recount in PP-7. But on Wednesday, the court restrained the RO from consolidating the result of PP-7 and converted Awan's petition challenging the RO's decision to reject plea for recount into an application to be taken up by the ECP. - DNA

Evaluation of nuclear-cyber nexus imperative: experts

DNA

ISLAMABAD: There was a great need to understand and evaluate the nuclear nexus with menacing cyber activities as the lingering cyber threat was increasing day by day, said Omimah Khan, an international nuclear security researcher. She was addressing a webinar titled 'Cyber Threats and Nuclear Weapons: Unfolding the Real Problems' organized by the Institute of Regional Studies (IRS) here on Wednesday. She asserted that nuclear activities when combined with cyber activities made a very lethal combination and sought critical attention, particularly with reference to nuclear espionage, which had the potential to jeopardize the security of all state, non-state, and ideological groups.

Ms Khan mentioned real life cases of cyber sabotage to the nuclear capabilities of states to enunciate the vulnerability to cyberattacks. Mentioning the Manhattan Project (1940) espionage, and the hacking of strategic defence nuclear plans by the German hackers who worked for the Soviet KGB in 1986, Ms Khan asserted that the two events not only demonstrated the theft of nuclear information but also the psyche of the state leaders. To enunciate further the degree of vulnerability, she quoted the unprecedented Chinese espionage on the American W88 thermonuclear warhead, where Chinese hackers, with their extraordinary cyber skills, stole highly sensitive and crucial data for years. A strategic attack on nuclear infrastructure was by definition a non-discrete cyberattack, and was highly pertinent in the contemporary world, she said. She highlighted the most recent instance of Stuxnet, a malicious computer worm developed in 2010, which in July 2020 attempted to disparage the nuclear facility in Natanz, Iran by interfering in the uranium enrichment process at the Natanz plant.

With that, given the situation of Pakistani nuclear facilities at high risk of a cyber-attack, Ms Khan suggested for a serious need for Pakistan to work on the strategic development of nuclear reinforcements. She asserted that Pakistan needed to integrate all stakeholders, i.e., private, administrative, and international, and take them on board to analyze the strategic challenges and ascertain the factors leading to these challenges. Furthermore, Pakistan needed to increase its diplomatic activities at international fora with respect to its exposure to cyberattacks in order to gain maximum support and assistance. Lobbying for a collective resolution at multilateral fora with the aim of asserting that a cyber-attack on the nuclear arsenal of one state is an attack on all states was the need of the hour, she said. Lastly, she underscored that there was an urgent need in the country to revise and reconsider its policy options before another cyber 9/11 or cyber Pearl Harbor occurred.

Solar tube wells powered by Chinese technology successful

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Solar tube wells powered by Chinese technology is a success story in Pakistan, and the same technology will be used in the KP's southern district of Tank, Gwadar Pro reported on Thursday. To resolve the long-standing water problem in the area, the Government of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa (KP) has decided to set up solar-powered tube wells in the area. Talking to Gwadar Pro, Engineer Muhammad Suhail said that the solar tube wells are the easiest way to permanently resolve the drinking water issue in Tank. Several villages in Tank lack portable water and villagers rely on rain-fed ponds, causing water-borne diseases such as hepatitis, cholera, typhoid, diarrhea, etc. In many areas of the district, people and animals drink water from the same rain-fed ponds. However, the provincial government has come up with an idea to resolve the long-standing water issue of Tank with photovoltaic technology. "Solar tube wells powered by Chinese technology is a success story in Pakistan, and the same technology will be used in this project," he added. "Twenty-eight solar-powered drinking water tube wells have been approved for the district," said Faisal Amin Khan, Minister for Local Government, Elections and Rural Development Department. He said that tenders have been issued and work will start shortly. According to Mr. Khan, another 25 more tube wells are in pipeline under Chief Minister's special package for city and villages in Tank, adding "These will resolve the long-standing water issue". According to Mr. Suhail, solar energy is one of the cheapest and most viable solutions for the energy crisis in Pakistan. Under Annual Development Programme 2022-23, the Government of KP has allocated Rs 150 million for the construction of water supply sanitation schemes, and solar electrification of solar tube wells in Tank. Solar is one of the key business areas in KP province. The government solar projects in the public sector include the electrification of 4,000 masjids and the solarisation of 8,000 schools and basic health units in the province. Besides, the government has approved five feasibility studies of a total of 249.5 MW solar projects in the private sector.

Pakistan's ICT exports to keep growing

In addition to big cities, Pakistan also needs to look for opportunities in other far flung cities where youths can work as freelancers and provide other outsourced services

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan's ICT exports could grow by 30% over the next few years as long as we provide well-trained human resources, infrastructure for ICT projects in universities, support industry in terms of tax incentives and take full advantage of ICT cooperation opportunities under the CPEC framework. This was stated by Prof. Dr. Waqar Mahmood, Director of Al-Khwarizmi Institute of Computer Science (KICS), University of Engineering and Technology (UET) in an interview with Gwadar Pro. Pakistan's telecommunication, computer and information services exports during the first 11 months of fiscal year 2021-2022 surged to 2.381 billion at a growth rate of 25.45 percent in comparison to 1.898 billion during the corresponding period of last fiscal year, according to Pakistan Bureau of Statistics. Prof. Dr. B.S. Chowdhry, Professor Emeritus of Faculty of Electrical, Electronics, & Computer Engineering, and Advisor of Mehran University of Engineering & Technology (MUET), Jamshoro, believes that the disruption caused by the COVID-19 pandemic created a unique opportunity for Pakistan's ICT exports. Government subsidies and Pakistan's overall labor cost advantage attract customers from all over the world. As per Pakistan Economic Survey 2021-2022, investment (FDI & local) in the telecom sector during July to February FY2022 crossed 930.1 million. During July-March FY2022, the telecom sector contributed Rs. 163.3 billion (estimated) to the national exchequer in terms of taxes, regulatory fees, initial and annual license fees, activation tax, and other taxes. Good infrastructure and well-trained workforce are necessary for the development of ICT. Prof. Dr. Waqar explained that Pakistan has 44 million broadband subscribers and more than 100 million mobile users, which obviously shows that ordinary people have access to some ICT services. 25,000 + graduates enter the industry every year and 600,000 + individuals are employed in all aspects of the industry. "In addition to big cities, Pakistan also needs to look for opportunities in other far flung cities where youths can work as freelancers and provide other outsourced services. They can participate in the export of ICT's overall products once they are assisted by the government's cutting-edge services and tool training," Prof. Dr. Waqar further said. Dr. Miftah Ismail, Minister for Finance and Revenue announced in the federal budget 2022-2023 speech that the government has allocated Rs 17 billion for imparting training in IT sector, providing youths with laptops, improving network and promoting IT export. Both experts agreed this encouraging move is in the right direction. In conjunction with the development support provided by CPEC, Pakistan's ICT industry will continue to grow at a steady pace. China and Pakistan have conducted extensive cooperation in various fields, including agriculture, transportation, education and health, and Pakistan's ongoing ICT provides strong support for this. It is significant to enhance all-round cooperation between China and Pakistan in ICT and the digital economy. In 2007, UET became a partner of Southern University of Science and Technology for the program of UNESCO Higher Education Innovation Centre in Pakistan. Many advances have been made within this cooperation framework, including smart classrooms, where online education has played an important role in the COVID-19 era. Prof. Dr. Waqar recommended setting up more digital transformation centers with collaboration between China and Pakistan. There is a need to encourage local IT companies to participate in CPEC for eventual entry into the Chinese market, Advisory Council on Information Technology (IT) and Digital Economy said recently. Prof. Dr. B.S. Chowdhry reaffirmed the necessity to involve Pakistani start-ups in CPEC. He added that venture capital in promising Pakistani tech companies is an important way to support the development of the ICT industry.

Some positivity in China-EU ties

THE ninth round of the China-EU High-Level Trade and Economic Dialogue, held virtually on Tuesday, was pragmatic, candid, efficient and constructive, according to the Chinese Ministry of Commerce. Agreement was reached on trade and investment liberalization and facilitation, mutual openness, fair competition, intellectual property rights protection and business investment optimization, the ministry said in its statement.

This represents a remarkable step forward from the state of affairs at the 23rd China-EU Summit in early April, which EU High Representative Josep Borrell described as a "dialogue of the deaf", when such divisive topics as the conflict in Ukraine and human rights in the Xinjiang Uygur autonomous region prevented the two parties from even producing a joint statement.

The latest dialogue was of far-reaching significance for both China and the EU because it indicated impressive political will to maintain economic and trade engagement despite all the differences between the two sides that have been overly politicized recently and have disrupted the otherwise highly mutually beneficial economic and trade ties that have served both sides well for decades. Since China and the then European Economic Community established diplomatic relations in 1975, both sides have known full well the cultural and political differences between them. And there were no lack of occasions and topics on which they had divergent views. But nothing prevented them from developing generally friendly and profitable economic and trade ties. The fruitful China-EU cooperation, especially in the economic and trade field, has thrived and ballooned to its present-day scale and depth because they have strived to find stable middle ground where economic and trade ties could prosper largely free of political disturbances. Close China-EU economic and trade ties have benefited both parties tremendously.

They are especially important at this time when the global post-pandemic recovery is struggling to gain traction. There has never been a greater pragmatic need for the two sides to work together to overcome the economic challenges they face.

Dirty politics

ONE would've thought that PTI's astonishing win over PML-N in Punjab's by-elections would make Imran Khan soften his tone a little about the Election Commission of Pakistan (ECP) in general and the Chief Election Commissioner (CEC) in particular. Quite to the contrary, however, the PTI chairman has ramped up his assault on all important state institutions, including the ECP, and it is pretty clear that he intends to stay hot on all fronts till he finds his way back to the PM house.

That's a little awkward because the election result itself is the strongest vindication possible of the claim that no institution, CEC or the so-called establishment, overstepped its constitutional limit.

Yet Imran is still blaming them for rigging when his party emerged the clear winner by a very wide margin. It appears, with the benefit of hindsight, that PTI itself was pretty surprised by the final result. For, all the way to the election it made a lot of noise about interference, to the extent that Imran and his associates called the CEC an agent of PML-N. The idea must have been to blame the system, as usual, if the result went against the party. But the fact that it didn't seem also to have left PTI groping for a new narrative, which it did not have so the skipper kept up with the old theme.

Now the perception is that Imran will keep attacking the ECP and the CEC with the same venom till the PTI's foreign funding case reaches a conclusion. It is not expected to go the party's way, so from its point of view, it makes a lot of sense to keep the pot boiling and use it to its advantage whenever the verdict comes. PM Shahbaz Sharif has also urged the ECP to bring the case, which has now lingered for close to a decade, to an end. And if the recent past is any guide, the PTI can be expected to go ballistic against the ECP if the conclusion is not to its liking.

Strengthening democracy

Dr. Abdus Sattar Abbasi

"The PML-N should accept the results of the by-polls with an open heart and concede to the decision of the masses. Winning and losing are part of politics, therefore, the party should now focus on its weaknesses identify them, and then overcome them. God willing, everything will be fine." Another PMLN leader also appeared on TV screen and said

IRRRESPECTIVE of diverse discussions about the dynamics and outcomes of recently held by-elections in Punjab there are some interesting gestures which suggest evolution of our political and democratic traditions. Noticing both winning and losing candidates together in a room in Multan was pleasant. Acceptance of defeat by the vice president Pakistan Muslim League Nawaz (PMLN) was rare in Pakistani politics at least during last three decades, which I remember; none of the losing party has ever conceded defeat in such a sober manner. She said, "The PML-N should accept the results of the by-polls with an open heart and concede to the decision of the masses. Winning and losing are part of politics, therefore, the party should now focus on its weaknesses identify them, and then overcome them. God willing, everything will be fine." Another PMLN leader also appeared on TV screen and said, "I accept that Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) has won and the party wholeheartedly accepts the opinion of the public." One of PMLN leaders tried to contend that results are their success because PMLN didn't win these constituencies in 2018; therefore securing four seats is still a good performance.

On the other hand senior vice president of PTI also acknowledged the statements of PMLN leaders but with some conditions, anyhow it was all satisfying to observe political maturity in staunch rivals. This behavior can certainly reduce existing tensions among political opponents which have been intensified among masses due to extremely harsh stances of leaders about their competitors. It seems if there is a competition among present-day politicians to evolve hostile jargons and bad nicknames for opponents. It is indeed sad to notice roars during political rallies in appreciation of hostile jargons and bad nicknames providing justification to leaders that masses need this type of language.

I think it is weak justification; leaders can set the tone of their followers to any direction from hostility to approval and from hatred to compromise. It is unbecoming of a leader to establish demarcations in the society on the basis of strife and contempt. Historically those who exercised the option of inculcating animosities to serve their purposes have been regarded as pseudo-leaders. Therefore, those who are at the positions of leadership should keep in mind that how they desire to be remembered in the days to come.

Second amazing dimension of by-elections was a massive turnout. Atmosphere was equally hot on the ground in these constituencies and on both mainstream and social media platforms. Supporters of both main parties didn't miss any opportunity to engage any individual for the support of their respective party. I wasn't registered voter in any of the constituencies in this by-election but one of my colleague spent almost an hour to brief me about the dynamics of his constituency and result confirmed that his analysis was correct; it shows the commitment and involvement of masses at the grassroots during recent elections which I think is a good indicator for strengthening democracy in the Country.

According to the FAFEN, "An impressive 49.7 percent turnout in the by-elections for 20 Punjab Assembly constituencies on July 17, 2022 augurs well for an otherwise struggling democracy in Pakistan. Compared to the GE-2018, PTI increased its share of seats (from 8 to 15) and polled votes from 684,820 (32%) to 1,048,632 (47%). PML-N also increased its tally of seats from one to four and votes from 547,599 (25%) to 883,632 (39%) of the polled votes. Compared to GE-2018 both parties added to the number as well as the percentage share of the polled votes at the expense of independent candidates and other parties."

Third important aspect of by-polls is that masses were quick to respond to the decisions of the government. Despite extensive justifications by the PMLN that it was PTI which is responsible for current instant inflation, hike of petroleum prices and devaluation, people retaliated and voted against PMLN. This speaks rising political awareness and the might of conventional and unconventional media. Now voters have several sources of information to verify, compare and analyze given facts.

They are specifically concerned for their prosperity, growth and progress. They listen to every stance and opinion, they consider every opportunity to interact and learn, they explore every option and avenue, and they utilize every method and approach to secure their interest. In future, probably, it will be quite difficult for both political and non-political forces, especially those who operate from behind the curtain, to manipulate public opinion. It has been observed that people are very wisely selective even to the calls for protest and agitation; however, still there are some hot buttons in the society which can trigger instant violence and anarchy which can only be controlled through increased literacy.

Deviation from party policy is an emerging dimension of democratic process in Pakistan which needs detailed deliberations to determine where freedom of a member of the parliament to exercise his opinion vanishes and where party based totalitarianism starts. Anyhow, there are contradictory claims about the election of the chief minister of Punjab on the 22nd of this month. We hope sanity and the spirit of the constitution will prevail to strengthen democracy in the Country.

Why 'Zionist' Biden gave no hope to Palestinians

Asli Nur Duzgun

The United States, which was the first state to recognise the state of Israel in 1948, took over the protectorate of Israel after the British mandate

US President's concern for besieged people rings hollow as fist-bump with Tel Aviv tells where Washington's heart lies. "I did say, and I say again, you need not be a Jew to be a Zionist," US President Joe Biden said during his recent visit to Tel Aviv, driving home the centrality of Israel in American diplomacy in the Middle East. Two days later, at Bethlehem, Biden appeared to be speaking for the long-suffering Palestinians as he made a case for the "two-nation" theory but acknowledged that an independent state was just a dream at this moment. The hopelessness in his speech was unmistakable.

The irony could not have been lost on the Palestinian people. But Biden's statements should not come as a surprise. In fact, he has only extended the same line of thought and action as many of his predecessors. No amount of sugar-coating can hide the fact that as far as the US, Israel, and Palestine go, protecting the interests of the Zionist state will always be a priority for Washington.

Later, when the US President spoke about his first visit to Israel as a Senator just before the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, his aim was to remind the world that the US would stand by Israel even in the event of military aggression by Tel Aviv. The Zionist reference by Catholic Biden, the high point of his speech, also showed how similar is his thinking and policy to his immediate predecessor Donald Trump. This is despite Biden's persistent efforts—and a general perception—to show that he is the opposite of Trump.

Biden might have insinuated that he would not be as harsh as Obama by avoiding any reference to the first Black US President. In his speech, Biden also emphasised the "bone deep" connection between the Jewish and American people, even harking back to Biblical times. By deeply sharing the "chosenness" and "manifest destiny", Israel has always been more than an ally for the US. All these Puritanical myths are now the secular rules of the American state's civil religion, and Israel is an important part of this civil religion. For this reason alone, Israel is sometimes called the "51st state of the US".

Middle East politics: From hyper to hybrid

Marwan Bishara

America's relative decline, amid China's rise and Russia's resurgence, has prompted its allies to pursue hybrid, non-exclusive foreign relations based solely on their national and regime interests. It is as if Israel's chutzpah has finally rubbed off on its neighbours, friends and foes alike. Like Tel Aviv, important Middle Eastern players want American arms and American aid but not America's advice

AS a new type of Cold War came to dominate American-Russian relations after the latter's invasion of Ukraine, major Middle Eastern players are maintaining a distance, refusing to take sides. It is a sign that the hyper-strategic alliances that polarised the region, and the world, during the old Cold War are turning hybrid, fluid, pragmatic and unpredictable. During the old Cold War, the Middle East was characterised by greater foreign intervention and relatively more frequent high-intensity conflicts. The post-Cold War was even worse for the ill-fated Middle East – in the past 20 years, it featured most of the world's deadliest conflicts. But as the wars in Syria, Yemen and Libya wind down; as regional conflicts reach dead ends, and regional and global powers show signs of faintness and fatigue, a new geopolitical environment is now taking shape. This new dynamic was demonstrated clearly during the recent American-Arab summit in Jeddah and the trilateral summit between Russia, Iran and Turkey in Tehran. Last week's summit in Jeddah exposed the divergence and distrust between the US and its partners/clients in the Middle East. President Joe Biden tried to convince them to increase oil production and cease all cooperation with Moscow, to no avail. Despite Washington's pleas and pressures, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Egypt gave no sign that they may stop dealing with Moscow on energy and trade any time soon. This is a far cry from the 1980s, when Saudi Arabia enlisted on Washington's side in the Cold War, helping to dislodge the Soviet forces out of Afghanistan, and pushing down the price of oil under American pressure.

During his first trip to the region as president, Biden, who had only recently railed against the "pariah" regimes that rule in the Middle East, swallowed his tongue and pride at the service of the "national interest". Yet, Riyadh and Cairo rejected US dictates and even questioned its strategic competency and staying power, considering its humiliating withdrawal from Iraq and Afghanistan and its erratic behaviour over the past two decades.

America's relative decline, amid China's rise and Russia's resurgence, has prompted its allies to pursue hybrid, non-exclusive foreign relations based solely on their national and regime interests. It is as if Israel's chutzpah has finally rubbed off on its neighbours, friends and foes alike. Like Tel Aviv, important Middle Eastern players want American arms and American aid but not America's advice.

Despite being Washington's closest regional ally and the first stop on President Biden's Middle East trip, Israel has also refused to acquiesce to US wishes on not only Russia but also Iran and Palestine. In fact, Israel, which has taken the tail-wagging-the-dog dynamic to a whole new level, yet again treated America like no more than a dumb puppy. Like Israel, Saudi Arabia and its regional allies, Turkey, which straddles east and west, geographically and geopolitically, has gone hybrid for some time now. In this week's trilateral summit in Tehran, this major NATO member has reached new agreements with Washington's strategic foes, Iran and Russia; even proposing arms sales to the ayatollahs. After NATO allies refused to sell it air defence systems on acceptable terms, Turkey turned to NATO's foe, Russia, to purchase its sophisticated S-400 system, to Washington's utter dismay. Since then, Saudi Arabia has shown similar defiance, initiating talks with Moscow to purchase the Russian system.

And like Turkey, Israel and Saudi Arabia, Iran is also trying to pursue hybrid relationships, allying itself with China and Russia while remaining open to collaboration with Europe and insisting on negotiating a return to the Nuclear Deal with the United States. And since its invasion of Ukraine, Russia has become more dependent on Iran to counterbalance American and Turkish influences in Syria. Meanwhile, these central Middle Eastern players are pursuing hybrid relations within the region as well as beyond it. Iran and Saudi Arabia may be arch enemies, stuck in a Cold War logic of sort, but they are also involved in direct diplomatic talks aimed at reducing tensions in the Gulf and finding accommodations on regional hotspots, like Yemen, Iraq, Syria and Lebanon, etc.

Similar dynamics emerged between UAE and Iran, as the UAE normalised relations with the Assad regime in Syria and sort of pulled out of the Yemen war, while at the same time establishing diplomatic, security and strategic relations with Iran's arch enemy, Israel.

In short, the new hybrid geopolitical dynamics look nothing like the rigid and hyper bi-polarity that divided and dominated the world for decades. Since the world fights wars as it makes business and as it does politics, using similar tools and methods, this shift will likely prove lasting and global. In other words, and at the risk of oversimplification, expect more governments to pursue hybrid policies in an increasingly hybrid environment characterised by hybrid work, hybrid cars and hybrid warfare.

This will further complicate the global and regional dynamics, producing a dizzyingly changing reality, making it ever harder to predict what might come next; where a new explosion might occur, or whether certain countries might reach accommodation tomorrow. All of this begs the question: Will the shift from hyper to hybrid relations bring stability; or even peace to the Middle East? It might indeed reduce inter and intra-national instability for some time, but unless and until regional actors use that window to address the urgent questions of justice and human rights, expect more of the same instability and violence.

Pakistan urges the Indian government to refrain from victimizing the true representatives of the Kashmiri people by way of inhuman detentions and implication in baseless cases. India must release all political prisoners detained on trumped-up charges, stop human rights violations in IOJK, and lift the brutal military siege. Pakistan also calls on the international community to take cognizance of India's inhuman and illegal detention and treatment of Yasin Malik and ensure that the Kashmiris are given the opportunity to exercise their right to self-determination as espoused under the relevant UN Security Council resolutions and as per their own wishes.

PTI MPAs can either use their right to vote [for Hamza] or they might refrain from casting their votes altogether, the interior minister claimed while addressing a press conference. Sanaullah said "politically aware" lawmakers, who might understand PTI Chairman Imran Khan's "wrongdoing", will not support their party's nominated candidate - Pervez Elahi - for Punjab's top office. The interior minister claimed that "Elahi does not deserve to become the chief minister" and demanded he voluntarily withdraws from the race. He added that honourable lawmakers should "not waste" their votes by the PML-Q leader, who Khan had earlier termed a "dacoit". "We will use all our political options to the fullest," the interior minister vowed as he said that the PML-N was in contact with the opposition lawmakers. "The ones in PTI, who still have a conscience, will not vote for Elahi," the interior minister said - just a day after he stated, "PML-N will not let the Elahi become the provincial chief executive easily."

"In fact, Russia is using the great power we gave it to blackmail Europe and Germany," Habeck of the ecologist Green party told reporters. Enduring German reliance on Russian gas coupled with alarming signals from Moscow have turned up the pressure on Europe's top economy. A total shutdown of imports or a sharp reduction in the flow from east to west could have a catastrophic effect, shutting factories and forcing households to turn down the heat. Even the resumption of 40 percent of supplies would be insufficient to ward off energy shortages in Europe this winter, experts warned.

ISTANBUL: The second Trilateral Meeting of the Chairs of the parliaments of Azerbaijan, Pakistan and Turkey has taken place in Istanbul on 21 July. In his opening notes, Chairman of the Grand National Assembly of Turkey Mustafa Şentop underlined the fact that the relations amongst our countries were unlike ties between other countries. "Nurtured and strengthened by the common history, culture and religion, our fraternity has evolved to set the standards that are within the reach of but few nations and countries. Turkey, Azerbaijan and Pakistan are coming to the fore as three of the biggest Muslim World democracies. The unique relations amongst our nations have manifested themselves in the mutual support given at the most difficult times," Mr Şentop was saying. He referred to the justice restored in the Garabagh Area of Azerbaijan and said that the eventual opening of the Zangazur Corridor would increase the region's economic prosperity. Chair of the Milli Majlis Sahiba Gafarova greeted the participants on behalf of the Azerbaijani parliament and expressed her gratitude to the leader of the GNAT Professor Mustafa Şentop for having made this meeting possible and for the cordial hospitality alike. Mrs Gafarova said she trusted that forthcoming discussions to be held and decisions to be made at the session were certain to make the triple co-operation stronger yet in the name of the interests and successes of our countries and nations. The speaker of the Azerbaijani legislature mentioned the sixth Democracy and National Unity Day celebrated in the brotherly Turkey on the 15th of July. On that day six years ago, the Turkish people had demonstrated national unity and solidarity. The Turks had rallied to their leader, President Recep Tayyip Erdogan, to save the independence and sovereignty of their Motherland and to stand up for their statehood and democracy.

It was with deep veneration that Sahiba Gafarova commemorated the shahids who had given their lives while the coup attempt had been discouraged. She said that the people and state of Azerbaijan had condemned that treacherous putsch encroachment in no uncertain terms from its very first instances - and had shown that they stood by Turkey as ever. Parliaments are not merely the bodies passing laws today. Rather, their roles have been enlarged considerably in the modern epoch; already parliamentary diplomacy has evolved into a substantial international collaboration medium and provides additional channels of inter-state co-operation and dialogue whilst also contributing to the handling of national concerns. Together with the national governments, parliamentary diplomacy is working on protecting national interests. Speaker of the National Assembly of the Islamic Republic of Pakistan Raja Pervaiz Ashraf, too, told Chairman of the GNAT Mustafa Şentop of his appreciation of the meeting and the brotherly efforts made. He recalled the meeting held in Baku and thanked also the Azerbaijani side for the high organisational level attained at it. According to Mr Ashraf, such triple assemblies are very importance in terms of continuing our advancement. Pakistan's invariable support to Azerbaijan and Turkey will continue being evident and present upon all the platforms, Mr Ashraf remarked before mentioning Azerbaijan's having freed her lands and stressing the necessity of attaining constant peace and security in region.

West's sanctions cannot force
Moscow to change course

AGENCIES

MOSCOW: Moscow says sanctions by the West against Russia over Ukraine war cannot force the Kremlin to change course, five months into a military operation in the ex-Soviet country. On February 24, Russian President Vladimir Putin ordered a "special military operation" in Ukraine to demilitarize and "de-Nazify" the ex-Soviet country and to "liberate" Donbas, composed of two breakaway regions of Donetsk and Luhansk. Two days prior to the war, Moscow had officially recognized the two regions as independent republics. Luhansk has already fallen under the full control of Russian forces. Since the onset of the operation, the United States and its European allies have supplied billions of dollars' worth of weaponry to Ukraine and imposed waves of unprecedented sanctions on Moscow, despite Russia's repeated warning that such Western flood of weapons will only prolong the war.

In a virtual press conference on Thursday, Kremlin spokesperson Dmitry Peskov stressed that such tough sanctions would not force Moscow to change its course in Ukraine. "Even the harshest sanctions have never made countries change their position," Peskov emphasized. The Kremlin has time and again stressed that the Western flood of weapons and arrays of anti-Russia sanctions will not force Moscow to end the operation before achieving its objectives in the former Soviet republic. Elsewhere in his remarks, Peskov said Europe's gas delivery problems are due to what he called "technical difficulties" created by Western economic sanctions, as the Nord Stream1 pipeline reopened following maintenance but with a decreased flow. "Any technical difficulties linked to this are caused by those restrictions that European countries introduced themselves," Peskov said at the presser. Moscow has already significantly curtailed its gas supply to Europe - through the Nord Stream 1 pipeline that transports gas from Russia to Germany - by 40 percent, which has helped to push up European and British gas prices, prompting such gas-dependent countries to desperately find alternative suppliers and ways to tackle the shortage months ahead of the winter. Peskov, however, stressed that accusations that Moscow was using gas deliveries as political blackmail were "completely unfounded." Putin warned on May 12 that the West's sanctions would eventually backfire, stressing that "the continuation of the obsession with sanctions will inevitably lead to the most difficult consequences for the European Union." Data by the International Energy Agency (IEA) shows Russian natural gas flows to the EU have fallen below 100 million cubic meters a day in July compared with flows of almost 400 million cubic meters roughly this time last year. Europe was on edge during the 10-day Nord Stream 1 repair works, fearing that Russia would not reopen the taps in retaliation for the sanctions. Peskov said Russian state energy giant Gazprom is ready to "fulfill its responsibilities in full" but that Western sanctions "do not allow the repair of equipment" critical for its work. He said the technical reasons are associated "with the impossibility of proper technological maintenance." The Kremlin spokesperson further emphasized that the sanctions do not allow the proper "repair of equipment", including the "turbines at compressor stations." Earlier this month, Yasmin Fahimi, the head of the German Federation of Trade Unions (DGB), warned that top German industries were on the verge of collapse due to cuts in Russian gas supplies. Putin assured this week that Gazprom would meet all its delivery obligations. "Gazprom has fulfilled, is fulfilling and will fulfill its obligations in full," he told reporters in Tehran after holding talks with the leaders of Iran and Turkey.

Yoon calls for relationship of trust with Japan

FOREIGN DESK

SEOUL: President Yoon Sukyeol has a strong commitment to improving ties between South Korea and Japan and believes the two countries should build a relationship of trust based on common interests, his top diplomat said Thursday. Foreign Minister Park Jin made the remark after giving a policy briefing to Yoon following a visit to Tokyo earlier this week. "He has a strong commitment to improving South Korea-Japan relations and believes that South Korea and Japan should build a relationship of trust going forward in line with our common interests," Park told reporters. "That is why we are working to find reasonable solutions from that point of view," he said. Relations between South Korea and Japan have been badly frayed in recent years due to disputes stemming from Tokyo's 1910-45 colonial rule of the Korean Peninsula, including the issues of compensation for victims of forced labor and wartime sexual slavery. Park's visit to Tokyo was the first by a South Korean foreign minister in four years and seven months, demonstrating Yoon's commitment to mending the bilateral relationship. The two sides discussed the issue of compensation for South Korean forced labor victims, which has taken on new urgency ahead of the Supreme Court's verdict on whether to liquidate the assets of two Japanese companies to enforce a 2018 ruling ordering their payment of compensation to the victims. "We need to quickly find solutions considering Japan's concerns about liquidation and the advancing age of the victims," Park said. "I explained our position during my visit to Japan and relayed the message that it is important that Japan take sincere steps in response." Japan has maintained that all issues of compensation were fully covered under a 1965 agreement that normalized bilateral ties.

Djokovic unlikely to play US Open

SPORTS DESK

KARACHI: Serbian tennis star Novak Djokovic is unlikely to participate in the tournament as the US Open organisers said they would "respect" American government regulations regarding the travel of unvaccinated athletes. Non-citizens must have a COVID-19 vaccination to enter the US. Djokovic missed the Australian Open earlier this year because he is not immunized. In July, the 35-year-old Serb who won Wimbledon said he would "hopefully wait for some good news." The tournament in New York takes place from 29 August to 11 September. Three-time US Open champion Djokovic has been named on the entry list for the final Grand Slam of the year, but that is routine, rather than an indication that he will be allowed to play. "Per the Grand Slam Rule Book, all eligible players are automatically entered into the men's and women's singles main draw fields based on ranking 42 days before the first Monday of the event. "The US Open does not have a vaccination mandate in place for players, but it will respect the US government's position regarding travel into the country for unvaccinated non-US citizens," a US Open statement read. With his victory at Wimbledon, Djokovic now has 21 Grand Slam trophies, one fewer than Rafael Nadal, who has 22.

Indonesia, Australia committed to strengthening bilateral relations

JAKARTA: Indonesia's government is committed to intensifying bilateral relations with Australia in social, cultural, economic, trade, and food security approaches following Australian Prime Minister (PM) Anthony Albanese's recent visit to Indonesia, Presidential Staff (KSP) Chief Moeldoko stated. "Indonesia lauded PM Albanese's visit to Indonesia some time ago. We hoped the relations between the two countries would continue to improve," he noted after receiving a visit from Australian Ambassador to Indonesia, Penny Williams, at the Bina Graha Building, Jakarta, on Thursday. He later affirmed that bilateral relations between Indonesia and Australia would continue to improve, both through business and cultural activities. "Political dynamics in both countries are normal, leadership changes, and so on, but the axis must not change. The two countries must improve bilateral relations, especially through strengthening people-to-people relations both through business and culture," Moeldoko stated. Earlier, PM Albanese visited Indonesia and met with President Joko Widodo on June 5-7 to discuss bilateral relations between the two countries. Albanese's arrival to Indonesia marked his first bilateral visit since being sworn in as prime minister of Australia on May 23, 2022, as well as signaled the importance of Indonesia's position for Australia. Australia is an important partner for Indonesia in various fields, including in health and food security. Australia is committed to working with Indonesia to tackle the foot and mouth disease (FMD) epidemic that has hit livestock, such as cattle, buffalo, and goats, in Indonesia. Meanwhile, in terms of the food security issue, Moeldoko invited Australia to cooperate in developing the sorghum crop industry.

Turkiye denies claims it attacked civilians in Iraq

Iraq summoned Ankara's ambassador to Baghdad over the attack and its state agency said the government will call back its charge d'affaires in Ankara. Iraqi Prime Minister Mustafa al-Kadhimi also declared Thursday a national day of mourning

NEWS DESK

ANKARA: The Turkish Foreign Minister has denied reports that Turkey carried out attacks targeting civilians in Iraq's Duhok province, where a strike killed eight and wounded 23 on Wednesday. Mevlut Cavusoglu said on Thursday that Iraqi authorities should not fall for what he labelled a "trap". Turkey has previously on Wednesday rejected claims by Iraqi officials and state media that it had carried out an attack on a mountain resort in the northern Duhok province. At least four missiles hit the resort area of Barakh in the Zakho district of the semi-autonomous Kurdish-run region of northern Iraq, district mayor Mushir Mohammed said on Wednesday. All the casualties were Iraqi citizens. Iraq summoned Ankara's ambassador to Baghdad over the attack and its state agency said the government will call back its charge d'affaires in Ankara. Iraqi Prime Minister Mustafa al-Kadhimi also declared Thursday a national day of mourning.

He dispatched a delegation to the area led by Foreign Minister Fuad Hussein and ordered an investigation into the incident. Those killed included three men, three women and two children, Zakho health official Amir Ali told reporters. Cavusoglu told state broadcaster TRT Haber that Turkish military operations in Iraq have always been against the outlawed Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK), saying the attack on Duhok was also carried out by what he called "terrorists". Turkey regularly carries out air attacks in northern Iraq and has sent commandos to support its offensives as part of a long-running campaign in Iraq and Syria against Kurdish PKK and Kurdish Syrian YPG fighters. Ankara regards both as terrorist groups. Cavusoglu said reports blaming Turkey for the attack were attempts by the PKK to hinder Ankara's counter-terrorism operations. "The whole world knows we would never carry out an attack on civilians," Cavusoglu said, adding the Turkish military had told his ministry that no such attack was carried out by Turkey. "Following this attack, which we believe the [PKK] terrorist organisation carried out, we are ready to hold talks with Iraqi officials. We can cooperate for the curtain of fog to be lifted. Until that is lifted, it is not right to blame Turkey," he said. In April, Turkey launched a new offensive in parts of northern Iraq, called Operation Claw-Lock - part of a series of cross-border operations started in 2019 to combat the PKK, which is based in the mountainous regions of northern Iraq. The PKK took up arms against the Turkish state in 1984. More than 40,000 people have been killed in the conflict, which in the past was mainly focused in southeast Turkey, where the PKK sought to create an ethnic homeland. Dozens of Iraqis gathered on Wednesday outside the Turkish embassy in Baghdad to protest against the attack. The top United Nations envoy to Iraq also condemned it and called for an investigation. Cavusoglu said while there were protests outside the embassy and other Turkish offices, there were no reports of damage or injuries.

Sikandar Sultan Raja of being biased, the PTI chairman said that he has never seen a "dishonest" election commissioner like him before. Khan, highlighting the alleged wrongdoings of the CEC, said: "We [PTI] continued lodging complaints about rigging but the ECP did not pay heed." "We do not want to contest the general elections under the leadership of the incumbent chief election commissioner," he said, adding that if the biggest political party of Pakistan [PTI] doesn't trust the CEC, then "he should resign." He further added that the PTI, during its tenure, emphasised the adaptation of the electronic voting machine (EVM); however, all those who are now in the government opposed the suggestion because "they knew that with the help of EVMs, nearly 130 methods of rigging could be eliminated." Khan reiterated that those who conducted the by-elections in Punjab should be punished as they used all tactics to defeat the PTI. "If people's mandate is stolen in the Punjab Assembly tomorrow during the chief minister election, then I am warning that the country would head towards a condition like Sri Lanka and after that, whatever happens, it would not be my responsibility," he said. Khan further warned that if things are not done in a democratic manner, then people's reaction would not be in his control as the nation is now aware and enlightened and "they will not sit silently." The PTI chairman said that if the mandate of the people is respected in tomorrow's, election then tomorrow "we will thank Allah and celebrate." He added that when PTI's government will come into power after the chief minister's election tomorrow, then all those who broke the laws and Constitution and wronged PTI workers, supporters, and leaders will be punished. Khan highlighted that the ECP postponed the local body elections in Sindh due to a rain forecast, however, similar requests for deferring the LG polls in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa were turned down. "this CEC has taken all steps that go against the PTI." He further the CEC of being biased during the Daska by-elections last year, saying that he had ordered re-polling on the seat to ensure the PTI's defeat.

Punjab just three months back. But Elahi later crossed over to Imran Khan camp in a move that surprised many. Zardari has conveyed his 'ferocious' message to Elahi through his elder brother PML-Q Chief Chaudhry Shujaat Hussain after his efforts to coax him to vote for Hamza yielded nothing in a meeting on Wednesday. Zardari said that he persuaded the PML-N chief to nominate Elahi as the chief minister when PTI's Usman Buzdar had stepped down ahead of the no-confidence motion against then-prime minister Imran Khan. He had even conveyed a congratulatory message to Elahi on the development. But this was short-lived as Zardari learned the very next morning that Elahi threw his weight behind Imran Khan and emerged as the joint candidate of the PTI-PML-Q coalition for the Punjab chief minister. Now, furious by Elahi's decision; the PPP leader is of the view that it was his moral responsibility to block Elahi's way which translates to 'personal war' instead of a political one.

Central Asian Leaders pledge further cooperation

NEWS DESK

BISHKEK: Leaders from five Central Asian nations have ended a summit in the Kyrgyz resort town of Cholpon-Ata with a pledge to increase cooperation to strengthen the region as Russia – the main strategic and trade partner of the region – is being weakened by its war in Ukraine. The meeting ended on July 21 with the signing of the Agreement on Friendship, Neighborliness, and Cooperation for Development of Central Asia in the 21st Century by the leaders of Kyrgyzstan, Uzbekistan, and Kazakhstan. Tajik and Turkmen leaders did not sign the document, citing domestic proceedings. The summit was the first gathering of heads of state in the region since Russia – which was not a participant in the meeting – launched its invasion of Ukraine five months ago. Despite Moscow's waning influence in the region, none of the five presidents in attendance mentioned the war in Ukraine. The meeting came just weeks after several dozens of people were killed in Tajikistan and Uzbekistan after security forces brutally clamped down on anti-government protests in their respective autonomous regions, Gorno-Badakhshan and Karakalpakstan. Meanwhile, more than 200 people were killed in unrest in Kazakhstan in January, prompting Nur-Sultan to invite Russian-led security forces to swoop in and help restore order. This year's summit was held as Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, and Uzbekistan have seen social unrest in the past two years while the cost of living has been on the rise in the region, with the situation exacerbated by the coronavirus pandemic, severe droughts, supply issues, and the war in Ukraine. "There is a necessity to prevent security crises created by those who use social, economic, inter-ethnic, religious issues as excuses and I call for joint efforts for that," Kyrgyz President SadyrJaparov said. Another focus of the meeting was the situation in Afghanistan, where Taliban militants are nearing the first anniversary of their takeover of the country following the withdrawal of international forces in August 2021. Tajik President Rahmon said the five nations should keep the developments in the war-torn nation under "permanent focus" as they may affect geopolitical situation in Eurasia in general. "According to our prognosis, the situation in Afghanistan may go from bad to worse. Since taking over the country, Taliban leaders have failed to provide assurances to the international community, Afghan citizens with security, or solve social and economic challenges," Rahmon said. Talking about disputed border issues in the region, especially border-related problems between Tajikistan and Kyrgyzstan that have caused deadly shootouts in recent years, Kazakh President Qasym-ZhomartToqayev offered to assist the Tajik and Kyrgyz governments in finding a peaceful solution to ward off further violent clashes. Toqayev's offer appeared to be an attempt to sideline Russia from its usual role of ironing out differences between former Soviet republics.

Italian PM Mario Draghi resigns

AGENCIES

ROME: A year-and-a-half after he was appointed as Italy's unelected head of a unity government, Mario Draghi has resigned as prime minister. He told President Sergio Mattarella he was standing down after three parties in his government refused to back him in a confidence vote the night before. The president asked him to remain as caretaker leader and early elections are expected this autumn. Far-right leader GiorgiaMeloni is already being tipped to win. MrDraghi, 74, was a popular choice as prime minister, dubbed Super Mario for his handling of the eurozone crisis as head of the Central Bank. In February last year, he took over the task of guiding the Covid pandemic and economic recovery, bolstered by a big conditional reform package.

Before head-presidential Quirinale, was given a round of applause in the lower house of parliament. "Even central bankers have their hearts touched sometimes. Thank you for all the work done in this period," he told MPs. He first tendered his resignation a week ago when a populist party in his broad-based government refused to back an economic package for businesses and families. President Mattarella had asked him to stay in the post and, after days of silence, MrDraghi told the upper house of parliament he would continue - if the political parties were prepared to back a strong, cohesive government: "Are the parties and you parliamentarians ready to rebuild this pact?" For several hours, Italians waited with bated breath for the answer, before three of the parties decided they would not back him in a vote of confidence.

The Milan stock market fell for the second day in a row. Another key indicator closely watched in Italy, called the spread, soared 9%: that is the gap between Italian and German 10-year bonds. President Mattarella said his government would remain in office to handle current affairs, but did not say exactly what would happen next. Elections were due to take place in the first half of 2023, but will most likely be brought forward to late September or early October once parliament is dissolved. The parties set to benefit most from the political crisis include the far-right League and centre-right Forza Italia and both snubbed MrDraghi in Wednesday night's crunch vote. However, it is the far-right Brothers of Italy (Fdi) party that is topping the opinion polls, and leader GiorgiaMeloni is viewed as a possible prime minister. She was not part of the unity government and has repeatedly called for snap elections over the past week.

"I have my own ideas on how this nation should be governed, what should be done, what its industrial strategy should be," she said. Italy's political turmoil has also divided leading figures in some of the parties. Two ministers from Forza Italia, Renato Brunetta and MariastellaGelmini, have quit the party in protest at the decision to snub MrDraghi. The populist Five Star movement which triggered the crisis last week also saw a defection. Soave Alemanno said she no longer recognised her party and the instability now facing Italy jeopardised EU funding and abandoned reforms.

Australia battles fresh Omicron outbreak

MONITORING DESK

SYDNEY: Australia reported one of its highest daily death tolls from the novel coronavirus on Thursday while hospital admissions hovered near record levels, as authorities struggle to get ahead of highly contagious Omicron variants. The BA.4/5 variants are good at evading immune protection from vaccination or prior infection and have been driving a surge of new infections globally. Australia is reporting the highest daily numbers since the first Omicron wave earlier this year, with 89 deaths from the coronavirus on Thursday and 90 on Wednesday. Just over 55,600 new cases were recorded on Thursday, the highest since May 18. Prime Minister Anthony Albanese said state leaders and federal health officials have not recommended making masks mandatory in indoor venues, despite calls by some doctors to do so. Australia avoided the high death tolls seen in other countries during the first waves of the pandemic thanks largely to high levels of public compliance with tough social distancing restrictions. But there is little public appetite for a return to such measures to defeat the latest surge in infections and Albanese has resisted pressure from some health experts to impose mask mandates. "It's no good having a mandate unless it's enforced," Albanese told ABC Radio. He said health officials also had to take into account the effects of tough restrictions on mental health.

No contact with US on peace talks: Russia

NEWS DESK

MOSCOW: Russian Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Maria Zakharova said on Thursday there had been no contact with the United States over peace talks with Ukraine. "The American administration forbids its wards in Kyiv to even think about talks with us, and evidently forces them to fight to the last Ukrainian," Zakharova told reporters. Peace talks between Russia and Ukraine have been frozen since early April, when ceasefire talks brokered by Turkey in Istanbul collapsed. Ukrainian President VolodymyrZelenskyy has played down the prospect of peace talks while Russian troops still occupy Ukrainian territory. On Wednesday, Russian Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov said that peace talks with Ukraine made "no sense". Russian President Vladimir Putin said on July 7 that his country had not "started anything yet in earnest" in Ukraine, and dared the West to try to defeat it on the battlefield.

'Time is running out' to meet climate targets

WEB DESK

NEW YORK: Despite some positive developments towards reducing carbon emissions, global efforts need to be accelerated, as progress has been too limited and slow, according to the president of the 2021 United Nations Climate Change Conference, better known as COP26. In an email interview with Anadolu Agency, Alok Sharma stressed that time is running out to take more concrete steps towards stemming climate change and reducing carbon emissions, as the world faces more and more extreme weather events. Sharma, a British Cabinet minister, also spoke about the ongoing energy crisis, Europe's search for alternate energy sources, as well as the future of green transformation targets. Anadolu Agency: According to the Paris Agreement, net emissions will be reduced by 50% by 2030 and will be 0 by 2050. How close is the world to this goal? Sharma: The (2021) Glasgow Climate Pact, forged amongst nearly 200 countries, was historic. Based on the commitments made in that pact, and indeed outside the negotiating rooms, I believe that we were able to say with credibility that we kept alive the prospect of limiting global warming to 1.5 degrees above pre-industrial levels, and that we had supported the most vulnerable. I am pleased that we have seen some progress since November. We've got 16 new, revised NDCs (nationally determined contributions). We've got a handful of new long-term strategies. Over 2.5 billion people are now covered by adaptation plans. And extensive work to scale up and improve access to finance is continuing. But, collectively, the progress has been too limited, and just too slow. All while the evidence tells us that time is running out, from the science of the IPCC (Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change) reports, to the wildfires, droughts, and floods to which the world is sadly too often witness. So, across all the commitments we made in Glasgow, we simply must quicken the pace. If we don't, next year's Global Stocktake will make clear that we are not delivering on the Paris goals, that 1.5 degrees is moving further, and frankly irreversibly, out of reach, and that we risk going beyond our limits to adapt. The consequences of that would be grave, for every sector, and for every country. This is about the immediate impact on the lives and livelihoods of many millions around the world. So, I will continue to urge countries and companies to redouble their efforts, to ensure that their emissions targets represent the highest possible ambition, and to implement the commitments that they have made. Q: Russia is the biggest energy supplier to Europe. The tension between the parties led Europe to seek other energy sources such as nuclear and fossil fuels like coal. How do you evaluate Europe's search for those energy sources? How will nuclear and fossil fuel usage affect green transformation targets? Sharma: A lot has changed in the months since COP26. We are facing multiple global crises, much precipitated by the Putin regime's illegal, brutal, and unprovoked invasion of Ukraine. Many now recognize that climate and environmental security are completely interlinked with energy and national security. And whilst countries must deal with their immediate energy needs, many have understood that our shared long-term energy futures do not lie in fossil fuels. Governments around the world are responding, and accelerating the move to clean power. The European Commission, for example, announced that the European Union will increase renewables deployment to help reduce dependency on Russian hydrocarbons. And here in the UK, we have recently published our Energy Security Strategy, to turbocharge our deployment of wind, of solar, of nuclear, and of hydrogen. This includes five times as much offshore wind, five times as much solar, and a significant uplift in nuclear hydrogen, with the aim that 95% of our electricity will come from low carbon sources by 2030. And we're aiming to increase this to 100% by 2035.

SC seeks more evidence against Rana Sana

DNA

ISLAMABAD: The Supreme Court (SC) on Thursday asked the Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) to share with it more proofs in support of its contempt of court allegation against Interior Minister Rana Sanaullah. A two-member bench of the apex court, headed by Justice Ijaz Ahsan, heard the PTI's petition against Rana Sana. Justice Ijaz, on the occasion, while referring to the interior minister's statement in which he had said that five members of the Punjab Assembly (MPAs) could disappear prior to the election for the Punjab chief minister on July 22, 2022, remarked that if these MPAs were whisked away by the state, it would be a 'criminal offence', and only then this could be declared 'contempt of court', and not before.

"Please tell us as to how we could call it 'contempt of court'," he said, adding the court could not order any action merely on the basis of assumptions. "How can we accept that Rana Sana had made threatening calls to the PTI MPAs and also offered them money?" Justice Ijaz asked, and in the same breath made it clear that the SC had an eye on any breach of law.

ADB says Pakistan's growth 'recovering slightly' in FY23

MONITORING DESK

MANDALUYONG: The Asian Development Bank (ADB) has projected that Pakistan's economic growth will "recover slightly" in fiscal year 2022-23 (FY23) on the back of structural reforms. In a supplement report of the Asian Development Outlook released on Thursday, the ADB stated that Pakistan's GDP growth was expected to be moderate in FY22, which ended in June, on fiscal tightening measures to manage growing demand pressures and contain external and fiscal imbalances. The ADB stated that it marginally revised inflation figures for FY22 and "substantially" for FY23, citing effects of rising food and energy prices internationally as well as the government's hike in energy tariffs and removal of subsidies in the oil and power sectors in line with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) agreement. The report noted that headline inflation is at double-digit levels in most of the Caucasus and Central Asia, in Mongolia in East Asia, Pakistan and Sri Lanka in South Asia, and Lao People's Democratic Republic and Myanmar in Southeast Asia. In addition, inflation in India was at seven per cent, higher than its central bank's target of 2-6pc, the report added. It stated, however, that "inflation in the rest of developing Asia's large economies remain manageable. So for the region as a whole, inflation remains moderate on average and much lower than elsewhere in the world." It revised South Asia's inflation forecast to 7.8pc from 6.5pc in 2022 and 6.6pc from 5.5pc in 2023 on the back of increased prices of fuel, food and other commodities in the international market and domestic factors in some countries. The supplement report revised the growth forecast for developing Asia from 5.2pc to 4.6pc for 2022 and from 5.3pc to 5.2pc for 2023, reflecting "worsened economic prospects because of Russia's continued invasion of Ukraine, more aggressive monetary tightening in advanced economies and Covid-19 lockdowns" in China. "Even though the impact of Covid-19 has declined across most of developing Asia, the economic fallout from Russia's invasion of Ukraine on the region has increased. War-induced supply disruptions and escalating sanctions imposed on the Russian Federation have led to global commodity prices spiking and remaining higher than 2021's already elevated levels. Because of this, inflationary pressures have increased in many regional economies." The report stated that risks to developing Asia's economic outlook remained elevated and mainly associated with external factors. These risks included a substantial slowdown in global growth, aggressive monetary tightening by central banks, fallout from the war in Ukraine leading to price hikes, and rising food prices and shortages.

CEC should formally join PML-N: Fawad

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Reaction over the Election Commission of Pakistan's (ECP) decision pertaining to the results of the by-elections in PP-7, Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) Central Vice President Fawad Chaudhry advised the Chief Election Commissioner (CEC) Sikandar Sultan Raja to formally announce his joining of Pakistan Muslim League-N (PML-N). In a statement here on Thursday, Fawad stated that the ECP's decision was certainly disappointing, but not surprising due to the past record of the commission. He said that if the issues were dealt with sans taking into account the constitution and laws and rules and regulations, such kind of decisions were made. "There is a long list of ECP's decisions which have been overturned by the High Courts," Fawad added. He stated that the commission completely disregarded the instructions of the High Court in this matter as well. He advised that the CEC should better to free himself from all kinds of difficulties and troubles and announce his joining the PML-N.

Lukashenko says Belarus is 'authoritarian'

MINSK: Belarus President Alexander Lukashenko admitted on Thursday that he ran an authoritarian state but claimed there were no political prisoners in his isolated country. "Yes, our system of power is tougher. I even do not rule out the word 'authoritarian'," Lukashenko told AFP in an exclusive interview in the capital Minsk. Belarus rights group Viasna says the country currently has 1,259 political prisoners. But Lukashenko dismissed "talk of hundreds" of imprisoned people and claimed that "no one from the opposition" was currently being held in prison. Referring to people who took part in historic protests against Lukashenko's controversial re-election in 2020, he said: "These people spoke out against the state. Not against the authorities - against the state and their own nation."

The 67-year-old leader crushed the demonstrations with the help of Russian ally President Vladimir Putin. Key protest leaders are now either imprisoned or in exile. "I am no dictator," Lukashenko insisted, while admitting that Belarus had "elements of authoritarianism." "I do not even remember if those prominent bandits, who fomented this mutiny, if they are in prison," he said. "Perhaps one or two have been convicted," he added. Among those who fled Belarus in 2020 is Svetlana Tikhanovskaya, a political novice who ran against Lukashenko in the August 2020 polls in place of her jailed husband. - APP

Sri Lanka sees new president sworn into office

WEB DESK

COLOMBO: Sri Lanka's Ranil Wickremesinghe has been sworn in as president, amid hopes that he will pull the country out of its economic suffering. The 73-year-old took his oath at the tightly-guarded parliament complex on Thursday. Mr Wickremesinghe - the former prime minister - is seen as deeply unpopular with the public, but some protesters have said they will give him a chance. Sri Lanka has seen months of mass unrest over an economic crisis. Many blame the Rajapaksa administration for mishandling the nation's finances, and see Mr Wickremesinghe as part of the problem. But there were few demonstrations on the streets the day after Mr Wickremesinghe won the parliament vote. "He is here - and we will see what his actions are. If we don't get any food, any medicine, we'll be on the streets," one woman who had joined protests last week told the BBC. Mr Wickremesinghe - who won a majority among lawmakers with the backing of Rajapaksa's ruling party, the Sri Lanka's People's Front (SLFP) - took pains to distance himself from the old leaders.
