Diplomatic channels active, contacts ongoing with Afghanistan: FO

FO spokesperson says Islamabad seeking concrete assurances from Afghan authorities to stop cross-border terrorism

ANSAR M BHATTI

ISLAMABAD: The Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Thursday said that Pakistan's diplomatic channels with Afghanistan remain active with contacts continuing between the two neighbouring countries. Bilateral relations between Islamabad and Kabul have recently come under strain with the issue of cross-border terrorism at the centre of tensions. Pakistan has repeatedly called on the Afghan authorities to take verifiable measures to dismantle terrorist groups in Afghanistan and prevent use of its territory for terrorism. In October 2025, Pakistan closed several major border crossings following one of the deadliest military escalations between the two countries in recent years. Although a ceasefire was declared on October 19, trade across the border has not yet resumed. During a weekly press briefing today, Foreign Office spokesperson Tahir Hussain Andrabi emphasised that Pakistan does not interfere in Afghanistan's internal affairs. While expressing concerns over cross-border terrorism, the FO spokesperson said: "Incidents of terrorism emanating from Afghanistan are a primary concern for Pakistan. Our demand is that Afghan territory should not be used against Pakistan." Highlighting steps required to address these concerns, Andrabi said: "We need written, verifiable, and concrete assurances from Afghan authorities. Without these written commitments, the issue of terrorism cannot be resolved." The spokesperson added that resolving terrorism would pave the way for a significant improvement in bilateral relations. "Pakistan and Afghanistan do not have any other major bilateral disputes," he added. On Afghanistan's broader regional role, the spokesperson said that "Afghanistan has significant potential to become a regional hub". "Written assurances and practical steps to end terrorism will bring improvement in border and bilateral matters. Ensuring an end to terrorism is also in Afghanistan's own interest," the FO spokesperson added. While commenting on Pakistan's stance regarding ongoing protests in Iran, the spokesperson said: "Pakistan does not comment on the internal situation in Iran, nor does it consider intervention appropriate. We strongly oppose any interference in the internal matters of any country, including Iran." Addressing the hostilities with Afghanistan two days ago, the Inter-Services Public Relations (ISPR) Director-General Lieutenant General Ahmed Sharif Chaudhry said that the Afghan Taliban regime had attacked Pakistani border posts, following which, "whatever was needed was done, and a hard message was given". "Afghanistan has become the centre of terrorist operations in the region," he said while explaining the factors behind terrorism. The ISPR chief said that the Afghan Taliban regime has found a "new hero" in the form of Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi. He said that the nexus between Fitna Al-Khawarij, TTP, and India became fully exposed in 2025, posing a serious threat to regional peace and security. He said that if Afghanistan and India wish to confront Pakistan, they are welcome to do so, adding that, "We will fulfil their desire." Reiterating the resolve to curb the menace of terrorism, he said: "We have to win the war against terrorism at all costs". "We have to win this war with strength." "In the last three months, we have closed the borders. There are many signs here for those who see and understand." Noting that Islamabad targeted terrorists at the Afghan border in October 2025, and "dozens of Afghan posts were eliminated within hours". "We targeted the TTP, not TTA," said Lt Gen Chaudhry. Recalling the Doha agreement, the 2020 US-Taliban peace deal, he recalled that the Afghan Taliban had assured that terrorism would be eradicated from

Ministries’ performance reports to improve governance: Dr Tariq

Regarding the Joint Action Committee of Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK), the minister said an agreement has been reached on 38 points, adding that around 90 per cent of the committee’s demands have already been addressed

ISLAMABAD: Minister for Parliamentary Affairs Dr Tariq Fazal Chaudhry on Thursday said the government is committed to improving the governance model in the country by reviewing the performance of all ministries. Addressing a press conference here, the minister said the purpose of these performance reports is to strengthen the system of self-accountability and ensure that ministers remain responsible for their duties. He said Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif is keen to establish an exemplary governance model in the country and has directed all ministries to present their performance before the public. He said improvements are visible in several sectors, including investment, the power sector, maritime affairs, mines and minerals, and foreign affairs. All-out efforts are also being made to cope with climate change challenges, he added. Regarding his own ministry, the minister said the Grievance Wing of the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs is functioning efficiently to address public complaints. The wing received between 20,000 and 30,000 written complaints during 2025, in addition to thousands of complaints through telephone calls, and maintained a complaint disposal rate of 93 per cent. He said the Prime Minister’s Grievance Wing under the ministry receives complaints from across the country and that these are regularly followed up on. People can lodge their complaints on the universal number 111-555-554 for redressal. He said the one-year performance report of the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs is not limited to handling complaints and resolving issues. It also provides effective platforms for political and public representation, which help promote democracy, political stability, and transparency in the country. The minister said the PM has directed all ministers to inform the public about the targets set by their ministries for the next year and the progress achieved over the past year. He said the Ministry of Parliamentary Affairs maintains strong and effective coordination with allied parties, and their suggestions and concerns are conveyed directly to the Prime Minister.

Regarding the Joint Action Committee of Azad Jammu and Kashmir (AJK), the minister said an agreement has been reached on 38 points, adding that around 90 per cent of the committee’s demands have already been addressed. While terming dialogue another name for democracy, the minister said the government is ready to hold talks with the opposition on all matters, but Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) remains divided on the issue of dialogue. He said dialogue is the best way to address national issues, adding that the Prime Minister has repeatedly extended offers of talks to the opposition. Appreciating the efforts of the National Dialogue Committee, he said the committee would need to secure the confidence of PTI to move forward with negotiations with the government. He said PTI has given political authority to Mahmood Khan Achakzai, and the party leadership should formally grant him a clear mandate. He pointed out that there appear to be conflicting views within PTI regarding talks with the government. Dr Tariq Fazal Chaudhry said the opposition could also use the office of the Speaker of the National Assembly to initiate dialogue with the government.—APP

PM laptop scheme brings smiles, opportunity to KP students

PESHAWAR: A sense of pride, confidence and renewed academic ambition is visible on the faces of students at the University of Peshawar as beneficiaries of the Prime Minister’s Youth Laptop Scheme received laptops—an initiative they described as a gateway to knowledge and a symbol of hope for Pakistan’s youth. Among them was Ms. Hira Khan Afridi, a third-semester student of International Relations, who hails from District Khyber, part of the former FATA region where access to educational resources has historically been limited. Receiving her laptop from Federal Minister Engr Amir Muqam during a ceremony at the university, Hira Afridi termed the scheme a “life-changing support” for students from underdeveloped areas like erstwhile Fata. “For students like me, this is not just a device,” she told APP. “It represents access to digital education, research opportunities and academic growth. For many students from erstwhile FATA, pursuing higher education requires extraordinary struggle due to limited resources. Initiatives like this help bridge long-standing educational gaps and bring talented students into the academic mainstream.” She added that investing in students is, in fact, an investment in Pakistan’s future and bringing economic development. “When young people are empowered with such resources and confidence, they are better prepared to serve the nation with knowledge and purpose,” she said, expressing gratitude to Prime Minister Muhammad Shehbaz Sharif. “Thank you, Prime Minister. I am your vision. I am an empowered youth. I am Pakistan.” Another beneficiary, Muhammad Bilal Jawad, also a third-semester student of International Relations from Swabi district at UoP, shared similar sentiments and lauded the scheme. Calling the laptop a source of motivation, he said the scheme has opened new avenues for learning and innovation. “This laptop is not merely a machine,” he remarked. “It is an opportunity to connect with the world, conduct research more efficiently, and contribute positively to society. I am deeply thankful to the Prime Minister of Pakistan for taking such meaningful steps for students of the country.” Bilal urged the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa government to introduce similar initiatives, particularly for students from remote and underdeveloped regions. “Investing in education is investing in the nation’s future,” he emphasized. For Adil Shah, a seventh-semester student of English from Swat, the laptop symbolizes encouragement to excel. “This facility will greatly support my academic activities,” he said. “It will help me access new sources of knowledge, complete assignments more effectively and further improve my learning process.—APP

According to a press release issued here on Thursday, the Committee has been constituted in line with provincial commitments under SDG-4 (Quality Education) and aims to ensure that girls’ education remains central to governance, budgeting, and development planning. The Committee is mandated to provide strategic oversight and guidance on girls’ education initiatives in the province, review enrollment, retention, transition, and completion trends at all levels, monitor policy commitments and budgetary allocations, identify implementation gaps related to infrastructure, teachers, safety, and learning outcomes, and strengthen coordination among government departments, civil society organizations, and development partners. Through this mandate, the Committee will function as a critical

Similarly, the Child Rights Movement KP described the Committee as a milestone in integrating child rights and gender equality into education governance. Yumna Aftab, representing Child Rights Movement (CRM) KP, noted, “When girls stay in school, communities thrive. This Committee can address systemic barriers faced by girls, especially

Through this Committee, KPCSW aims to ensure that girls’ education policies are not only formulated but effectively implemented, monitored, and improved through collective effort and accountability. The formation of this provincial advisory committee is a continuation of the Government of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa’s commitment, which has allocated 70 percent of its education development budget towards girls’ education from last 5 years and has undertaken several initiatives to improve gender parity in education,” she stated. — APP

ISLAMABAD: Minister for Parliamentary Affairs Dr. Tariq Fazal Chaudhary, while terming dialogue another name for democracy, said on Thursday that the government is ready to hold talks with the opposition on all matters, but Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) remains divided on the issue of dialogue. Addressing a news conference here, he said dialogue is the best way to address national issues, adding that the Prime Minister has repeatedly extended offers of talks to the opposition. Appreciating the efforts of the National Dialogue Committee, he said the committee would need to secure the confidence of PTI to move forward with negotiations with the government. He said that PTI has given political attorney to Mahmood Khan Achakzai, and the party leadership should formally grant him a clear mandate. He pointed out that there appear to be conflicting views within PTI regarding talks with the government. EOBI pensioners No circular can restrict parliamentary law, rules FCCP

ISLAMABAD :The Federal Constitutional Court of Pakistan has held that no administrative circular can override or limit a law passed by Parliament or any of its schedules. The ruling came in a significant decision concerning the Employees’ Old-Age Benefits Institution (EOBI), marking a major development in pension rights for thousands of workers. A three-member bench headed by Chief Justice Aminuddin Khan, and comprising Justice Syed Hasan Azhar Rizvi and Justice Arshad Hussain Shah, delivered the verdict while dismissing multiple appeals filed by EOBI. The Court upheld earlier judgments of the Lahore High Court. In its decision, the Court ruled that employees who have completed 14 years and 6 months or more of insurable employment are entitled to monthly old-age pension. It held that under the schedule attached to the Employees’ Old-Age Benefits Act, 1976, any period of insurable employment of six months or more must be counted as a full year, and this principle applies to pension eligibility as well as pension calculation. The Court emphasized that EOBI is a welfare institution and welfare laws must be interpreted in favor of employees. Denying a lifelong pension due to a shortfall of a few months, it said, violates justice and constitutional principles. The bench declared the EOBI circular issued in 2022 ineffective, noting that administrative instructions cannot curtail statutory rights. It observed that the 2019 circular – which treated a six-month period as a full year – was lawful and the rights accrued under it could not later be withdrawn. Concluding the judgment, the Federal Constitutional Court ordered EOBI to grant monthly old-age pensions to all affected employees, calling it a vital legal development for workers nationwide.—APP

Lahore-Sialkot-Kharian-Rawalpindi Motorway to cut travel distance

Officials said the complete Lahore-Sialkot-Kharian-Rawalpindi motorway corridor is expected to be operational within two and a half to three years, representing a significant addition to the national motorway network

DNA

ISLAMABAD: The government has pledged timely completion of the Lahore-Sialkot-Kharian-Rawalpindi motorway, a key northbound corridor to ensure faster, safer and more economical connectivity between Punjab's economic hubs and the federal capital. Developed under the Public Private Partnership (PPP) model, the project is planned as a modern, high-speed motorway designed to cut travel time, lower fuel use and reduce vehicle operating costs for commuters. The first segment of the corridor, the Lahore-Sialkot Motorway (M-11), was completed and opened to traffic in March 2020. The 89-kilometre, six-lane controlled access motorway originates near the Kala Shah Kaku Interchange and terminates at Sambrial. Executed on a Build-Operate-Transfer (BOT) basis, the project operates under a 25-year concession agreement signed on February 28, 2017 between the National Highway Authority (NHA) and the concessionaire, according to official documents. Designed for a speed of 120 km/h, M-11 features seven interchanges, two fully equipped service areas—Ravi and Chenab—and a range of modern facilities including mosques, fuel stations, restaurants, trucker hotels, executive washrooms, parking areas and a trauma and rescue centre at Kala Shah Kaku. The second section, Sialkot-Kharian Motorway (M-12), covering 69 kilometres, was awarded in September 2021. Construction commenced in October 2022 but was temporarily stalled in February 2024 after achieving around 15 percent physical progress, due to multiple unforeseen issues. Following deliberations by the Special Investment Facilitation Council (SIFC), the project has now been restructured as a six-lane motorway from the outset to ensure long-term capacity and viability. The revised financing structure has been approved by the P3A Board, while the Central Development Working Party (CDWP) has recommended the updated PC-I to the ECNEC for approval. The motorway will feature eight interchanges and two service areas. Similarly, the Kharian-Rawalpindi Motorway (M-13), with a total length of 117 kilometres, has been restructured in accordance with SIFC directives issued in March 2025 and upgraded from a four-lane to a six-lane controlled access facility. The project features two twin-tube tunnels, extensive service roads, rest and service areas on both sides of the motorway, and eight interchanges linking major urban centres including Sarai Alamgir, Jhelum, Dina, Sohawa and Gujar Khan. The revised PC-I for M-13 has been submitted to the Planning Commission and recommended by CDWP for ECNEC approval. Upon administrative clearance, NHA will initiate the PPP-based procurement process. Officials said the complete Lahore-Sialkot-Kharian-Rawalpindi motorway corridor is expected to be operational within two and a half to three years, representing a significant addition to the national motorway network. Officials further noted that upgrading the Sialkot-Rawalpindi section to a six-lane motorway will reduce the Lahore-Islamabad travel distance by approximately 100 kilometres and shorten travel time from three-and-a-half hours to about two-and-a-half hours, resulting in substantial fuel savings, improved traffic flow and enhanced road safety. The government reiterated that the motorway corridor is being fast-tracked as a priority initiative, describing it as a game-changer for inter-city mobility and national connectivity.

Education must adapt as AI outpaces textbooks, says Musadik

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Federal Minister for Climate Change and Environmental Coordination Dr Musadik Malik on Thursday said that traditional textbook-based education is rapidly losing relevance as artificial intelligence, biotechnology and emerging technologies reshape the world at an unprecedented pace. Addressing students as the chief guest at the Prime Minister's Youth Laptop Distribution Ceremony held at COMSATS University Islamabad, the minister urged universities to move beyond rote learning and focus on preparing students for an uncertain and fast-evolving future. "Whatever you are being taught from textbooks has already happened," Dr Malik said, adding that most academic material is five to seven years behind real-world developments. "The speed at which technology is advancing means memorisation alone will not help you survive." Highlighting the rise of artificial intelligence, biotechnology, nanotechnology and cognitive sciences, he said these fields were not futuristic concepts but active forces already redefining life, work and education. He noted that AI tools such as ChatGPT had transformed how knowledge is created and used, forcing universities worldwide to rethink their approach. "Just a few years ago, universities were trying to catch students using ChatGPT. Today, they are teaching prompt engineering," he remarked, calling it evidence of how quickly the rules of learning are changing. Dr Malik said the purpose of initiatives such as the Prime Minister's Youth Laptop Scheme was not merely to distribute devices but to empower students with skills, adaptability and critical thinking. "The goal is not laptops or degrees. The goal is to prepare you for a world where even your teachers may not fully understand what is coming next," he said. He emphasised that universities must cultivate understanding, decision-making ability and the courage to make mistakes, warning that institutions failing to do so risk becoming irrelevant. "If universities cannot teach students how to think and adapt, then education loses its meaning," he added. The minister also stressed the importance of bringing youth towards research, innovation and a knowledge-based economy, describing education and technology as the foundations of national development. Under the Prime Minister's Youth Laptop Scheme, laptops are being distributed to high-performing students across public sector universities to enhance digital access, research capacity and learning opportunities. The ceremony was attended by university officials, faculty members and a large number of students.

He said the waiting halls have been upgraded at major stations, including Karachi, Lahore, Peshawar, and Rawalpindi, while a new multi-story Train Dispatching Building has been completed at Lahore station, where a modern Computer-Based Interlocking system will soon be installed. CDA reclaims 320 kanals of encroached land

ISLAMABAD: In line with the direction of Chairman Capital Development Authority (CDA) and Chief Commissioner Islamabad, Muhammad Ali Randhawa, large-scale anti-encroachment operations have been successfully carried out against the land mafia in the Saidpur area to ensure the protection of Islamabad's important natural heritage, the National Park and to preserve its natural beauty. During these operations, the original boundaries of the National Park were identified through modern satellite geo-mapping and digital maps and illegal encroachments were removed. According to the CDA Enforcement Directorate, the National Park area is of vital importance for maintaining the environmental balance of the Federal Capital, protecting natural water reservoirs, ensuring the survival of wildlife and reducing urban pollution. However, in recent years, illegal settlements and encroachments in this sensitive area not only damaged the ecosystem but also created a situation contrary to national interests. In line with the vision of Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif and Federal Interior Minister Mohsin Naqvi, and following the direction of Chairman CDA, the CDA Enforcement with the support of the Planning Wing, District Administration and Islamabad Police, initiated a phased operation in Saidpur and adjoining areas. On the instructions of the Chairman CDA, in the first phase, the original demarcation of the National Park, estate state land and encroached areas was clearly identified using satellite geo-mapping by the Planning Wing. As a result, 320 kanals of valuable state land were reclaimed from illegal occupation. The reclaimed land will be utilized during the upcoming spring season for large-scale tree plantation and environmental restoration projects, so that the natural beauty and eco-system of the area can be restored. It is noteworthy that this operation is the first major anti-encroachment campaign in the National Park area in the last ten years, clearly reflecting the protection of state land and the practical implementation of the government's environment-friendly policies. Strict procedures were followed during the operation to ensure transparency and accountability. In this regard, a formal inquiry has also been initiated against two CDA officials and one police official on suspicion of facilitating illegal encroachments, so that responsibility can be fixed and such incidents can be prevented in the future. On this occasion, senior officers of the Environment Wing said that these operations conducted through satellite geo-mapping are a model initiative for the protection of the National Park and the sustainable use of natural resources. They added that in the next phases, actions against remaining encroachments within the National Park boundaries and complete environmental restoration of the area will continue in a consistent manner.

Arab world's clear warning from Venezuela

WHAT unfolded in Venezuela over the weekend is not an isolated incident, nor should it be treated as such. It is a clear signal, one that deserves careful reading, not emotional reaction, and is a defining moment that exposes the fragile reality of the international order we inhabit today. On Saturday, the US carried out a direct military operation on Venezuelan soil, resulting in the arrest of President Nicolas Maduro and his transfer to America to face criminal charges. This was not the result of a multilateral decision, nor the conclusion of an international judicial process. It was a unilateral act, executed by force. The message is unmistakable: there are no absolute guarantees and state sovereignty is conditional when it clashes with the interests of powerful states. If the accusations against Maduro were legal in nature, a simple question must be asked: Why was the International Criminal Court not used? Why were formal complaints not submitted, evidence examined and due process followed? By bypassing international legal institutions, the US has effectively taken international justice into its own hands. In doing so, it has not only weakened Venezuela's sovereignty but also undermined the very system it claims to uphold. This sets a dangerous precedent. If one power can ignore international mechanisms without consequence, what prevents others from doing the same? The US is not the only global power. China, Russia, India, Pakistan and others all possess military strength and nuclear capability. If unilateral action becomes an accepted norm, who will restrain the next intervention carried out under the banner of "security" or "justice?" This is why Venezuela matters. Not because of sympathy for a regime or a leader but because the rules themselves are being rewritten. The UN met. Statements were delivered. Concerns were voiced. But beyond words, there was little action. This familiar pattern sends a clear message to the world: power overrides principle and accountability is selective. When international institutions fail to act decisively, they do not preserve stability; they erode it. Even warnings from UN bodies that such actions make the world less safe were met with indifference. This silence is not neutral; it is consequential. President Donald Trump has repeatedly stated that Greenland is vital to US national security. If security interests justify unilateral action, it is reasonable to ask: Should the world expect similar logic to be applied elsewhere? This is not alarmism. It is the logical outcome of a world in which power replaces law. The uncomfortable question we must ask, honestly and without illusion, is this: Who is safe today? Despite this reality, we must be clear about one thing: we are not powerless. The Arab world possesses immense human capital; scientists, innovators, thinkers and leaders, many of whom have contributed significantly to global progress when given the opportunity. Our challenge has never been a lack of talent. There has been a lack of consistent structures that protect, empower and retain that talent. Our most successful Arab economies were not built through dependence. They were built on our land, by our people, through vision, discipline and long-term planning. This is not theory; it is lived experience. True independence does not come from slogans. It comes from knowledge, institutions and the ability to make sovereign decisions without fear. So, what must be done? First, strengthen the Arab League in practice, not form. The Arab League must move beyond symbolism. It must evolve into a credible political, economic and security framework capable of protecting its members and deterring external pressure. A bloc that cannot protect its own sovereignty will not be respected by others. Second, keep Arab capital and strategic assets within the region. Recent global events have once again proven a simple truth: assets held abroad are vulnerable. The freezing and seizure of Russian private assets in Europe stand as a clear reminder that political decisions can freeze, seize or restrict access to foreign-held wealth overnight, regardless of legal ownership or prior assurances. Economic sovereignty begins at home – through regional investment in food security, energy, industry and technology. This is not isolationism; it is prudence. Third, unity, vigilance and trusted leadership circles. Unity is not an emotional concept; it is a strategic necessity. Arab states must coordinate policies, close ranks and reinforce internal cohesion. At the same time, it is imperative to examine carefully those closest to decision-makers, retaining only those whose loyalty to national interests is unquestionable. History teaches us that internal weaknesses are often more destructive than external threats. Venezuela is not an exception. It is a warning. We are entering an era where international guarantees are fragile, institutions are weakened and power speaks louder than principle. Awareness today is not a luxury; it is a requirement for survival. Those who understand the direction of the world and prepare wisely will endure. Those who rely on assumptions that no longer hold may not be given another opportunity.

How Russia Is Recasting Its Foreign Policy

Dr. Muhammad Akram Zaheer

This engagement must be understood within a broader strategic framework. Russia's outreach to Latin America, Africa, and parts of Asia reflects a deliberate effort to deepen ties with countries often described collectively as the Global South. While these states differ widely in political systems and economic structures, many share a scepticism towards Western dominance in international institutions. Russia has sought to position itself as a counterweight, emphasising sovereignty...

AS the war in Ukraine grinds on with no clear resolution in sight, it has become tempting to view Russia's foreign policy almost exclusively through the prism of conflict. Yet focusing solely on the battlefield risks obscuring a quieter, more calculated process underway beyond Europe. In late 2025, Russia has continued to adjust its international posture through selective diplomacy and economic coordination, particularly in the Global South and the energy sector. These moves reveal not a state paralysed by war, but one seeking to preserve leverage, relevance, and room for manoeuvre in a changing global order. One notable development has been Moscow's swift response to political shifts in Venezuela. Russia was among the first countries to articulate a formal position, reaffirming its engagement with Caracas at a moment of uncertainty. The speed and clarity of the response were significant. In a crowded diplomatic landscape where many states hesitated or adopted cautious language, Russia's stance signalled continuity rather than ambiguity. Venezuela has long occupied a special place in Russia's external relations. Over the past two decades, the relationship has encompassed energy cooperation, arms sales, financial assistance, and political backing during periods of intense international pressure. By responding decisively to developments in Caracas, Moscow reinforced its image as a consistent partner, particularly to governments that see Western diplomacy as unpredictable or conditional. This engagement must be understood within a broader strategic framework. Russia's outreach to Latin America, Africa, and parts of Asia reflects a deliberate effort to deepen ties with countries often described collectively as the Global South. While these states differ widely in political systems and economic structures, many share a scepticism towards Western dominance in international institutions. Russia has sought to position itself as a counterweight, emphasising sovereignty, non-interference, and political pluralism in global affairs. The Venezuelan case also highlights how diplomatic recognition and political signalling have become tools of influence. At a time when Russia's relations with Europe remain deeply strained, visible engagement elsewhere serves to counter perceptions of isolation. It allows Moscow to demonstrate that it still commands attention and retains partners willing to engage on their own terms. Yet this strategy is not without limits. Russia's economic capacity to sustain extensive overseas commitments has been constrained by sanctions and the demands of war. As a result, its diplomacy has become more selective, prioritising countries and regions where political alignment and strategic returns are judged to be highest. Latin America, where historical grievances against Western intervention persist, fits neatly into this calculus. Alongside diplomacy, energy policy remains a central pillar of Russia's external strategy. Discussions among Russian officials about increasing oil production in line with OPEC+ quotas underscore the continued importance of hydrocarbons to Moscow's economic and geopolitical positioning. Despite efforts by Western states to reduce reliance on Russian energy, the country remains one of the world's leading producers, with significant influence over global supply dynamics. Aligning production decisions with OPEC+ partners reflects a pragmatic approach to a volatile market. Global energy prices have been shaped by conflict, supply disruptions, shifting demand patterns, and political uncertainty. For Russia, managing output within an agreed framework offers a degree of stability at a time when budgetary pressures remain acute. Energy revenues continue to play a crucial role in financing the state, particularly as defence spending stays elevated. Beyond economics, cooperation within OPEC+ carries important diplomatic weight. The grouping has emerged as one of the few international platforms where Russia maintains regular, structured engagement with major powers outside the Western alliance system. Relations with key Middle Eastern producers, especially Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates, have taken on greater significance as Moscow seeks to diversify its diplomatic and economic partnerships. These relationships are not built on ideology, but on shared interests. Market stability, predictable pricing, and coordinated production serve the needs of both Russia and its OPEC+ partners. In this sense, energy cooperation functions as a form of quiet diplomacy, sustaining dialogue even as geopolitical tensions elsewhere intensify. Russia's approach to energy also illustrates a broader shift in its foreign policy thinking. Rather than seeking dominance, Moscow appears increasingly focused on resilience. Maintaining a seat at the table, preserving channels of influence, and avoiding exclusion from key decision-making forums have become central objectives. This is particularly evident in areas such as energy governance, where Russia can still exert influence despite political isolation in other domains. Taken together, Russia's actions in Venezuela and within OPEC+ point to a foreign policy that is adapting to constraint rather than retreating in defeat. The war in Ukraine has narrowed Moscow's options in Europe, but it has also accelerated a pivot towards regions where Western pressure is less decisive and political alignments more fluid. This shift does not amount to a wholesale abandonment of Europe as a long-term strategic concern. Instead, it reflects a recalibration of priorities driven by necessity. For countries in the Global South, Russia presents itself as a partner advocating a more decentralised international system. Whether this message translates into lasting influence remains an open question. China's economic weight and growing diplomatic reach pose a clear challenge, and Russia's capacity to compete on investment and development remains limited. Nevertheless, Moscow's willingness to engage actively in political transitions and energy coordination suggests an enduring ambition to shape outcomes rather than merely react to them. Critics argue that Russia's strategy is ultimately defensive, designed to mask strategic setbacks rather than achieve new breakthroughs. There is some truth in this assessment. The resources available to Moscow are finite, and sustained confrontation with the West carries long-term costs. Yet it would be a mistake to dismiss these moves as purely symbolic. In a fragmented international system, influence is often exercised incrementally, through presence, consistency, and selective engagement. As 2025 draws to a close, it is increasingly clear that Russia's foreign policy cannot be understood solely through the lens of war. Beyond Ukraine, Moscow is investing diplomatic capital in regions and sectors it believes will shape the next phase of global politics. Energy markets, South-South relations, and alternative diplomatic networks are becoming key pillars of this approach. The question is not whether Russia will re-emerge as a dominant global power, but whether it can sustain relevance in a world where power is increasingly dispersed. For now, Moscow appears determined to try. In doing so, it is reminding observers that even amid conflict, foreign policy is rarely fought on a single front.

The Elegance We Are Forgetting

Muhammad Mohsin Iqbal

Unfortunately, our condition stands in stark contrast. We live in a society where Urdu is effortlessly understood and comfortably spoken, yet many among us take pride not in fluency of thought but in fluency of English. A strange standard of superiority has taken root—where speaking English is seen as a marker of intellect and status, while speaking Urdu is sometimes treated as a sign of deficiency

GR EAT nations take pride in their civilization, history, and language, and they never detach these elements from their personal existence or collective identity. These attributes are not merely cultural ornaments; they are the spiritual foundations upon which a nation's character rests. Around the world, especially in diplomatic circles, English has undoubtedly become a convenient medium of communication. It allows people of different regions to converse on equal footing. Yet, even within such environments, there are leaders, officials, and dignitaries who, despite having full command over English, choose to speak in their national languages. They do so without hesitation, without embarrassment, and often with visible dignity. Their confidence springs from a deep respect for their own heritage. Unfortunately, our condition stands in stark contrast. We live in a society where Urdu is effortlessly understood and comfortably spoken, yet many among us take pride not in fluency of thought but in fluency of English. A strange standard of superiority has taken root—where speaking English is seen as a marker of intellect and status, while speaking Urdu is sometimes treated as a sign of deficiency. In gatherings, in workplaces, and particularly in elite social circles, one notices that even those who think naturally in Urdu consciously switch to English to appear distinguished. This behavior has given rise to an awkward hybrid known popularly as "Gulabi Urdu," in which English words are sprinkled unnecessarily, as if plain Urdu were inadequate for dignified expression. During my years in journalism, I was fortunate to work with teachers and senior colleagues who helped purify my language and refine my expression. Their guidance became a treasure that still accompanies me in every sentence I write. I vividly recall an early lesson from my Chief Editor

Mujeeb-ur-Rehman Shami, who once reviewed a piece of mine containing the word "Mizbah Khana" (Slaughterhouse). He looked at it attentively and said, "You have added 'Khana' unnecessarily. The word is complete even without it." It was a small correction, yet its impact was lasting. It taught me that precision in language is not achieved through excess but through clarity. That one moment remains etched in my memory. On another occasion, I witnessed a gentle but profound lesson from most respected teacher Irfan Siddiqui. Someone at an event used the term "Body language" while speaking in Urdu. Mr. Siddiqui smiled and said that he could not understand why we insert English terms when perfectly expressive Urdu equivalents exist. A journalist present asked him what Urdu word could be used instead. With his characteristic grace, he replied, "You may use the term 'Bad'an Boli' for that." From that day onward, I began employing "Bad'an Boli" whenever needed, and it felt as though I had reconnected with a forgotten part of the language. There were many others in my journalistic journey—Qudratullah Chaudhry, Abdullah Tariq Suhail, Athar Masud, Tauseef Ahmed Khan, Tahir Majeed, Naveed Chaudhry, Imran Mir, Naeem Iqbal, Chaudhry Khadim Hussain, Esar Rana, Naeem Mustafa, Najam Wali Khan, Zahid Rafique, Akhtar Hayat, Allama Saeed Azhar, and several more—whose companionship enriched my Urdu. They corrected my expressions, refined my usage, and strengthened my connection with the language. Over ten years, I learned from them not only words but attitudes, not only grammar but respect for the elegance and depth of Urdu. Today, however, the culture of learning and teaching is gradually fading. Senior writers and journalists who nurtured newcomers with patience and affection are diminishing in number.

The new generation, equipped with screens, shortcuts, and the influence of globalized media, tends to rely more on English expressions even while thinking in Urdu. The assault of foreign words is slowly diluting the originality of our language. The erosion is subtle but real, and if not addressed, it may eventually alter the very character of our linguistic identity. Yet all is not lost. Languages survive not through force but through love, usage, and conscious preservation. Urdu has within it a beauty, rhythm, and expressive power that needs no foreign ornament to stand tall. It is a language that carries centuries of poetry, scholarship, and cultural elegance. It is a language that binds our collective memory. But for it to endure in its true essence, we must revive the habits of careful expression, of learning from elders, and of resisting unnecessary linguistic invasions. We must not be apologetic when speaking Urdu. We must let it flow with the same confidence with which other nations speak their own languages. The world respects those who respect themselves. When we carry Urdu with dignity, it enhances our stature rather than limiting it. Let us remember that languages are not mere tools of communication—they are vessels of identity. If we allow Urdu to weaken, we weaken a part of ourselves. The responsibility lies with each of us to nurture the language that has nurtured us. Let us speak it with pride, write it with care, and guard it from being overshadowed by borrowed expressions. Preservation begins with small choices—choosing Urdu where it belongs, refining its purity, and valuing the legacy carried in every word. In protecting our language, we are not protecting a relic; we are protecting a living spirit that shapes our national soul.

Australia get over the line in Sydney for 4-1 Ashes triumph

Australia seal Ashes 4-1 with gritty five wicket win at Sydney as Carey and Green finish chase, Starc shines, England fight bravely on final day despite injuries and nervous moments

SBYDNEY: Australia had a few nervous moments but safely chased down their 160-run victory target before tea on the final day of the fifth Ashes Test on Thursday for a five-wicket victory and a 4-1 series triumph. Seamer Josh Tongue led England's battling rearguard with 3-42 but Alex Carey got Australia across the line with a four through the covers in mid-afternoon in the company of Cameron Green.

"It's nice to finish on a high note," said stand-in Australia captain Steve Smith.

"We know the importance of every Test match with the World Test Championship, so to get the result here and finish the series on a high was incredibly pleasing."

England will take credit for making a game of it and not being ground into the Sydney dirt as previous tourists have in end-of-series dead rubbers at the famous old ground. Without the bowling of injured captain Ben Stokes, however, defending 160 was always going to be an uphill challenge on a good wicket which allowed the second day-five action of the series. Australia's openers managed to get the target under 100 runs before Man of the Match Travis Head, whose third century of the series underpinned his team's first-innings 567, ballooned a shot to midwicket off Tongue for 29.

Jake Weatherald followed for 34, again caught off Tongue's bowling, to bring up lunch with Australia 89 runs from their goal. It was 15 years and a day since England won the final Test of the 2010-11 series at the same ground by an innings and 83 runs – the last time they won an Ashes series Down Under. Khawaja made his debut in that match and got his chance for one final innings before retirement when Smith was bowled through the gate by the spin of Will Jacks for 12 soon after lunch.

The England players formed a cordon to welcome Khawaja to the crease but Tongue's bowling was less friendly and the lefthander played on for six after facing seven balls. "I was trying to act cool, but the whole test match I found it really hard to control my emotions," the 39-year-old admitted. Labuschagne had been dropped on 20 off Tongue when Bethell failed to hold onto the ball despite an acrobatic leap at backward point. He was unable to make the most of his reprieve, however, running himself out for 37 with 39 runs still required for victory. Carey, who made 16 not out, and Green, who finished unbeaten on 22, nearly surprised Labuschagne's exit with a classic mix-up after an overthrow but eventually made their ground to secure the victory.

"It was a great game to be involved in with the test match going to the fifth day and have a bit of drama in the end," said Stokes, who exhorted his players from the slips on Thursday. "It's a tough one to take knowing that we can play better than that. But I've got to give full credit to (Australia). They've been just incredible for five test matches." England had resumed on 302-8 but Mitchell Starc struck a major blow to their hopes of setting Australia a testing target when he had Bethell caught behind for 154.

Bethell's superb maiden Test century offered plenty of promise for the future and was essentially the difference between an innings defeat for England and Australia batting again. Starc (3-72) returned to remove Tongue for six to end the innings on 342, the left-arm quick later awarded Player of the Series honours for his tally of 31 wickets over the five Tests. "The body is still holding together and this is a great goal to be a part of," the 35-year-old said. "I am a little tired but got the job done." – Agencies

NBA: Deni Avdija leads Blazers to victory over Rockets

PORTLAND: Deni Avdija delivered a stellar performance, leading the Portland Trail Blazers to a 103-102 victory over the Houston Rockets here at Moda Center on Wednesday. Avdija scored a career-high 41 points, showcasing his scoring prowess and playing a pivotal role in securing Portland's fourth consecutive win. His performance came in a dramatic finish, as the Rockets' Tari Eason's potential game-winning tip-in was ruled to have come after the buzzer during a review, giving Portland the win. Avdija's efforts were complemented by Shaedon Sharpe's 20 points, as the Trail Blazers withstood a strong performance from Kevin Durant, who matched his season-high of 37 points. The Rockets also received contributions from Amen Thompson, who recorded a double-double with 24 points, 12 rebounds, and six assists. Despite a dominating 57-38 rebounding advantage, including 24 offensive boards, Houston could not secure the victory. Portland held a slim lead for most of the game, with Avdija scoring 18 of his points in the first half, which ended with Portland leading 57-47. With 48.9 seconds remaining, Avdija made a key inside basket to extend the lead to 103-99. However, Durant made two free throws after being fouled, bringing Houston within one. A tense final sequence saw Eason intercept a pass but ultimately miss the game-winner, and Portland secured the victory. – APP

Barcelona blitz Athletic Bilbao 5-0 to book place in Super Cup final

Barcelona broke the deadlock in the 22nd minute. A sweeping move from side to side ended with Raphinha finding Bardghji on the right, whose cutback was met by Lopez before being laid off for Ferran Torres to finish calmly for 1-0

JEDDAH: It did not look like the easiest opening 20 minutes for Barcelona in Jeddah during their encounter with Athletic Bilbao. Yet in a breathtaking 16-minute spell, the Catalans turned uncertainty into complete control, racing into a four-goal lead before the interval. More than 50,000 fans packed the Al-Nmra Stadium in Jeddah to witness the spectacle, although the likes of Marcus Rashford and Lamine Yamal were rested, allowing opportunities for youngsters like Roony Bardghji and Fermin Lopez.

Lopez would emerge as one of the standout performers of the night. While his threat inside the box was evident, it was his creativity that truly shone in front of the Jeddawi crowd. Barcelona broke the deadlock in the 22nd minute. A sweeping move from side to side ended with Raphinha finding Bardghji on the right, whose cutback was met by Lopez before being laid off for Ferran Torres to finish calmly for 1-0. Just eight minutes later, an exquisite backheel from Pedri released Raphinha down the left flank once again, with his low cross this time finding Lopez to double Barcelona's advantage. Lopez contributed to his third goal of the night minutes later, this time slipping Bardghji down the right. The Kuwaiti-born winger skipped past Adama Boiro before striking at goal, with Unai Simon mishandling the ball as it trickled over the line. The Blaugrana showed no signs of slowing down. Raphina finally got on the score-sheet in emphatic fashion with a belter into the top corner in the 38th minute.

To the surprise of many, neither side made any changes at the break. That decision quickly proved costly for Bilbao, as Raphinha struck again early in the second half, once more exploiting space down the flanks to extend the lead to 5-0.

With the contest beyond reach, Athletic head coach Ernesto Valverde rang the changes, making five substitutions to give minutes to his squad. Barcelona, meanwhile, eased off to conserve energy ahead of Sunday's final. To the delight of the crowd, both Rashford and Yamal were introduced, with Yamal receiving a warm standing ovation upon his entrance in the 72nd minute. The emphatic victory marks Barcelona's second consecutive five-goal display in the Spanish Super Cup, following last year's 5-2 triumph over Real Madrid in the final. The second semi-final takes place on Thursday, as Real Madrid face Atlético Madrid, with the winner set to meet Barcelona in Sunday's final. – DNA

Man City title bid damaged by Brighton draw despite Haaland's 150th goal

The Norway striker's 26th goal in all competitions this term ended his three-game drought but it was hardly his best performances as several chances were squandered

MANCHESTER: Manchester City's Premier League title challenge suffered a potentially fatal blow as Brighton hit back to earn a 1-1 draw on Wednesday. Erling Haaland put City ahead with a first half penalty at the Etihad Stadium, but the striker's 150th goal for the club wasn't enough to earn a vital victory. Hampered by mounting injury problems, City were well below their best and Kaoru Mitoma made them pay with a second half equaliser. Pep Guardiola's second-placed side are five points behind leaders Arsenal, who host champions Liverpool in their game in hand on Thursday. A victory for the Gunners would open up a massive eight-point lead in the title race. City have come back from similar deficits to take the title in the Guardiola era, but on current form they look destined to finish behind Arsenal. After damaging draws against Sunderland and Chelsea, City have gone three games without a victory while Arsenal are on a three-match winning streak. Even Haaland's 150th goal in 173 matches in all competitions since joining from Borussia Dortmund in 2022 wasn't enough to inspire sloppy City.

The Norway striker's 26th goal in all competitions this term ended his three-game drought but it was hardly his best performances as several chances were squandered. City have a lengthy list of absentees, with Josko Gvardiol and Ruben

Dias joining John Stones on the sidelines after suffering injuries at the weekend. Omar Marmoush, Rayan Ait-Nouri, Savinho, Oscar Bobb and Mateo Kovacic are also missing through fitness problems and international duty. City are reportedly close to signing Bournemouth winger Antoine Semenyo and have also been linked with Crystal Palace defender Marc Guehi. But before new recruits can arrive to help ease his woes, Guardiola was forced to hand a debut to teenage centre-back Max Alleyne. Alleyne, 20, partnered Abdou Diallo, Oscar Bobb and Mateo Kovacic are also missing through fitness problems and international duty. City are reportedly close to signing Bournemouth winger Antoine Semenyo and have also been linked with Crystal Palace defender Marc Guehi. Moments later, Donnarumma made a fine save to keep out Pascal Gross's header before Ferdi Kadioglu shot straight at the Italian after racing through on goal. City were labouring, yet they still took the lead in the 41st minute. Jeremy Doku's penalty appeal was initially rejected after his run was halted by Diego Gomez's clear trip, but VAR overturned the decision and Haaland fired home for his latest landmark goal.

City midfielder Tijjani Reijnders had a shot cleared off the line by Gomez on the stroke of half-time. Bernardo Silva hit the outside of the post from a golden opportunity to double City's advantage soon after the interval. But Guardiola's men lost the lead in sloppy fashion after 60 minutes. Mitoma took possession 20 yards from goal and advanced unhindered by City midfielder Nico Gonzalez, giving him time and space to lash a superb low strike past Donnarumma. Guardiola responded by sending on Rodri for the chastened Gonzalez, but Gomez should have put Brighton ahead when he contrived to miscue Mitoma's pass from virtually on the goal-line.

Not only were City creaky at the back, they were profligate in attack as well. Haaland's header was cleared off the line by Kadioglu before the City star failed to beat Bart Verbruggen from 12 yards. As if that wasn't bad enough for Guardiola, Rayan Cherki wasted two chances to save the day with a pair of woeful misses in the closing moments. – Agencies

Iran unrest persists, top judge warns protesters

DUBAI: Iran's top judge warned protesters on there would be "no leniency for those who help the enemy against the Islamic Republic," while accusing Israel and the US of pursuing hybrid methods to disrupt the country. The current protests, the biggest wave of dissent in three years, began last month in Tehran's Grand Bazaar by shopkeepers condemning the currency's free fall. Unrest has since spread nationwide amid deepening distress over economic hardships, including rocketing inflation driven by mismanagement and Western sanctions, and curbs on political and social freedoms. "Following announcements by Israel and the US president, there is no excuse for those coming to the streets for riots and unrest, chief justice Gholamhossein Mohseni Ejei, the head of Iran's judiciary, was quoted as saying by state media. "From now on, there will be no leniency for whoever helps the enemy against the Islamic Republic and the calm of the people," Ejei said Iranian authorities have not given a death toll for protesters, but have said at least two members of the security services have died and more than a dozen have been injured. Iran's western provinces have witnessed the most violent protests.—APP

UN warns Israel of intensifying racial discrimination against Palestinians

The report concludes there are reasonable grounds to believe that the Israeli policies of separation, segregation and subordination are designed to maintain the oppression and domination of Palestinians, and intended to be permanent

NEW YORK CITY: A report by the UN Human Rights Office published on Wednesday details the "asphyxiating impact" of Israeli laws, policies and practices on nearly every aspect of Palestinian life in the occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem. It warns that Israel is violating obligations under international law that require states to prohibit and eradicate racial segregation and apartheid. The report describes systemic discrimination against Palestinians in the territory as a "long-standing concern," but notes that the conditions have sharply deteriorated since at least December 2022. It presents extensive examples showing how the daily lives of Palestinians have become increasingly constrained and insecure. "Israeli authorities treat Israeli settlers and Palestinians residing in the West Bank under two distinct bodies of law and policies, resulting in unequal treatment on a range of critical issues, including movement and access to resources such as land and water," it states. "Palestinians continue to be subjected to large-scale confiscation of land and deprivation of access to resources. This has had the effect of dispossessing them of their lands and homes, alongside other forms of systemic discrimination, including criminal prosecution in military courts during which their due process and fair trial rights are systematically violated." The report concludes there are reasonable grounds to believe that the Israeli policies of separation, segregation and subordination are designed to maintain the oppression and domination of Palestinians, and intended to be permanent. "Acts committed with the intention to maintain such a policy amount to a violation of Article 3 of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, which prohibits racial segregation and apartheid," it warns. "Since Oct. 7, 2023, the government of Israel further expanded the use of unlawful force, arbitrary detention and torture, repression of civil society and undue restrictions on media freedoms, severe movement restrictions, settlement expansion and related violations in the occupied West Bank, which has marked an unprecedented deterioration of the human rights situation there." The report adds that this deterioration is compounded by the continuation and escalation of settler violence, which is often carried out with the "acquiescence, support and participation" of Israeli security forces. The system of military justice applied to Palestinians provides little or no human rights protections, in stark contrast to Israeli civil law, which affords far greater protections to settlers. "The military legal system is a significant tool in controlling Palestinians in the occupied West Bank," according to the report. It documents patterns of "unlawful killings" and other forms of "state and settler violence," citing numerous cases in which lethal force was deliberately used when unwarranted, in a discriminatory manner and with apparent intent to kill. On Jan. 28, 2025, security forces shot 10-year-old Saddam Hussein Rajab in the abdomen. He died from his injuries on Feb. 7. Video footage showed the boy standing empty-handed at the entrance of a building in Tulkarem when he was shot. Israeli forces initially claimed the boy "was messing with the ground" in a suspicious manner, before announcing an investigation On Feb. 9, 2025, security forces killed 23-year-old Sondos Shalabi, who was eight months pregnant. They said she had been shot because she was "looking suspiciously at the ground" but acknowledged she was unarmed and no explosive devices were found nearby. The UN report adds that "discriminatory movement restrictions" severely undermine the human rights of Palestinians by infringing on the right to work, blocking access to land, and causing widespread financial hardship. It also notes that roads built exclusively for Israeli settlers, connecting settlements, have resulted in the fragmentation of Palestinian communities. In addition, thousands of Palestinians have been evicted from their homes across the West Bank. The report said this might amount to unlawful transfer, which is a war crime. Palestinians are further deprived of their natural resources. The report describes how Israeli authorities confiscate and demolish Palestinian water infrastructure while diverting flows to settlements. This forces the Palestinian Authority to purchase large quantities of water from an Israeli government company that extracts water from the occupied West Bank. "There is a systematic asphyxiation of the rights of Palestinians in the West Bank," said the UN's human rights chief, Volker Turk. "Whether accessing water, school, rushing to hospital, visiting family or friends, or harvesting olives, every aspect of life for Palestinians in the West Bank is controlled and curtailed by Israel's discriminatory laws, policies and practices. "This is a particularly severe form of racial discrimination and segregation that resembles the kind of apartheid system we have seen before. "Every negative trend documented in the report has not only continued but accelerated. And every day this is allowed to continue, the consequences worsen for Palestinians." Impunity for violations remains widespread, the report found, including violence committed by Israeli security forces and settlers. Of more than 1,500 killings of Palestinians recorded between Jan. 1, 2017, and Sep. 30, 2025, Israeli authorities opened just 112 investigations, resulting in only one conviction. Meanwhile thousands of Palestinians remain arbitrarily detained by Israeli authorities, most of them under "administrative detention" without charge or trial. Illegal settlement expansions continue unabated; Israeli authorities and settlers have appropriated tens of thousands of hectares of Palestinian land, largely for settlements and outposts that are deemed illegal under international law. The report cites the recent approval by Israel's Security Cabinet of 19 new settlements, a move that Israeli officials have said is intended to block the possibility of establishing a Palestinian state. "The Israeli authorities must repeal all laws, policies and practices that perpetuate systemic discrimination against Palestinians based on race, religion or ethnic origin," Turk said. He called on Israel to end its unlawful presence in occupied Palestinian territory, dismantle all settlements, evacuate settlers, and respect the right of the Palestinian people to self-determination.—Agencies

Millions of Indian girls out of school as efforts to keep them enrolled falter

NEW DELHI: Priyanka Sau was sure that after completing secondary school she would enroll in a computer course in her hometown in Uttar Pradesh. But neither the course nor her graduation could materialize as two years ago her father lost his job at a brick kiln and the family moved to Delhi in search of work. The 15-year-old now works as a cleaner in a housing complex, supplementing her parents' income and helping support her three younger sisters. Her marriage arrangement has been finalized, too. "Very soon it will be formalized," she told. "For me, there was no option but to follow my parents to Delhi and start earning to make a living ... I miss my school and dream to enroll in a computer course to get modern skills." Priyanka is one of the 6.57 million Indian children who dropped out from school between 2019 and 2025, according to data presented in parliament in December by Women and Child Development Minister Savitri Thakur. Nearly 3 million of the whole dropout group were adolescent girls, with the highest rates recorded in the most populous states. In Uttar Pradesh, girls accounted for more than half of nearly 100,000 school dropouts in the 2025-26 academic year alone. Dr. Kriti Bharati, founder of Saarthi Trust, which works for child rights and rescues victims of child marriage, said the government data was "alarming" and required immediate intervention. "The education department should go deep into it. They should find out where these thousands of girls who dropped out have gone ... The schoolteachers, when they come to know that some girls or kids have dropped, they should find out why they are dropping out. This is their social responsibility," she said. "A developed society is called developed not because it has better roads or it can send missions to the moon. It has to ensure education for its people, it has to ensure proper care for its poor citizens." The government data showed that social protection systems were failing to adapt to local realities, as dropout rates rise due to pressures such as domestic responsibilities, work, early marriage and poverty. According to Dr. Bharati, the main reasons forcing girls to leave school were child marriage and labor migration, which has increased since the COVID pandemic. "Poor people move from one place to another. After COVID, many things have changed as far as jobs are concerned. People are moving for jobs outside their villages," she said. "The third reason is child labor — these girls become a source of income for their family. They supplement the income." For Dr. Purujit Praharaj, director of India Child Protection, the main reasons enabling the increase in dropout rates, especially among girls, were systemic: inadequate infrastructure and legal guarantees. The Right to Education Act makes free and compulsory education a fundamental right only for children aged 6 to 14, while access-wise, secondary schools in rural areas are often far, especially in India's poorer, eastern states. "All girls below 18 should be given free and compulsory education and proper infrastructure. If the schools are not located nearby, then hostel facilities should be provided," Dr. Praharaj said. "There is a safety issue and concern among the parents to send their girls to a different location to school ... Residential schools need to be built for these girls so that they can go there. If you can ensure continuous education for them, girls will not get married before 18.—Agencies

Russia slams Western peacekeeping plan for Ukraine

In addition to the unrelenting pummelling of Dnipropetrovsk, Russia pressed on with its ground assault on the region, claiming to have taken another village there

MOSCOW: Russia on Thursday slammed a plan for European peacekeepers to be deployed to Ukraine as "dangerous" and dubbed Kyiv and its allies an "axis of war," dousing hopes the plan could be a step toward ending the almost four-year-war. US President Donald Trump has been pushing the warring sides to strike a deal to halt the conflict, running shuttle diplomacy between Ukraine's Volodymyr Zelensky and Russia's Vladimir Putin in a bid to get an agreement across the line. An initial 28-point plan which largely adhered to Moscow's demands was criticized by Kyiv and Europe, and now Russia has slammed the attempts to beef-up protections for Ukraine should an elusive deal be reached. Ukraine's allies said they had agreed key security guarantees for Kyiv at a summit in Paris earlier this week, including a peacekeeping force. But in its first comments since the summit, Moscow said the statements were far away from anything the Kremlin could accept to end its assault. "The new militarist declarations of the so-called Coalition of the Willing and the Kyiv regime together form a genuine 'axis of war'," Russia's foreign ministry spokeswoman Maria Zakharova said in a statement. She called the plans drafted by Kyiv's allies "dangerous" and "destructive. The remarks come as Russian strikes plunged hundreds of thousands in Ukraine into darkness, leaving families without heat in below-freezing temperatures — attacks that Zelensky said showed Russia was still set on war. European leaders and US envoys announced earlier this week that post-war guarantees for Ukraine would include a US-led monitoring mechanism and a European multinational force to be deployed when the fighting stops But Moscow has repeatedly warned that it would not accept any NATO members sending peacekeeping troops to Ukraine. "All such units and facilities will be considered legitimate military targets for the Russian Armed Forces," Zakharova said Thursday, repeating a threat previously uttered by Putin. Zelensky also said Thursday that a bilateral agreement between Kyiv and Washington for US security guarantees was "essentially ready for finalization at the highest level with the President of the United States" following talks between envoys in Paris this week. Kyiv says legally-binding assurances that its allies would come to its defense are essential to convince Russia not to re-attack if a ceasefire is reached. But specific details on the guarantees, the European force, and how it would engage have not been made public. Zelensky said earlier this week he was yet to receive an "unequivocal" answer of what they would do if

Russia does attack again after a deal. Zelensky has also said that the most difficult questions in any settlement — territorial control of the eastern Donbas region and the fate of the Russian-occupied Zaporizhzhia nuclear power plant — were still unresolved. Ukraine was meanwhile scrambling to restore heating and water to hundreds of thousands of households after a new barrage targeted energy facilities in its Dnipropetrovsk and Zaporizhzhia regions. "This is truly a national level emergency," Borys Filatov, mayor of Dnipropetrovsk's capital Dnipro, said on Telegram. He announced power was "gradually returning to the hospitals" after the blackouts forced them to run on generators. The city authorities also extended school holidays for children. About 600,000 households in the region remained cut off from power in Dnipropetrovsk, Ukrainian energy company DTEK said. In a post on social media, Zelensky said the attacks "clearly don't indicate that Moscow is reconsidering its priorities." In addition to the unrelenting pummelling of Dnipropetrovsk, Russia pressed on with its ground assault on the region, claiming to have taken another village there. It is not one of the five Ukrainian regions that Moscow claims to have annexed.—DNA

Italian firm bullish on China's winter sports mark

HARBIN: For Shen Yumei, her first trip to Harbin, capital of northeast China's Heilongjiang Province, for an exhibition was a pleasant surprise, revealing the vibrancy of the local winter sports market Shen serves as Marketing Director for China of Italy-based winter sports equipment manufacturer TechnoAlpin. The company commands over 60 percent of the global market share in snowmakers and ice resurfacers, and its products are widely used in major international events, including the 2022 Beijing Winter Olympic Games, and the upcoming 2026 tournament in Milan-Cortina. The three-day 2026 Harbin International Ice and Snow Economy Expo opened here on Monday, attracting hundreds of ice-snow equipment enterprises from across the globe. The expo floor featured an array of products, from industrial-grade unmanned snowplows and snowmobiles to carbon fiber skis and outdoor winter apparel. "We hope to expand our market in Heilongjiang through this expo," said Shen. TechnoAlpin entered the Chinese market in 2000 and established its presence in Zhangjiakou City, Hebei Province, in 2018. The Zhangjiakou branch, covering 18,000 square meters, integrates R&D, assembly, logistics and warehousing, and commenced operations in 2020. Shen attributed the company's bullish outlook on China to the vigorous development of winter sports in the country. "Recent international events like Beijing 2022 have fueled an ice-snow boom in China, leading to the construction of more ski slopes and ice rinks in many regions. We will continue to focus our efforts here," she added. Shen explained that the company remains committed to the post-Olympic Chinese market, with plans to establish its fourth global equipment center in China. "In the future, large-scale professional ski resorts and ice rinks in China will require professional equipment and consulting services. The demand for experiencing ice-snow sports through technology like snowmakers and ski simulators continues to grow. These are the market opportunities we aim to tap, potentially using the Chinese market as a base to reach Southeast Asia, Japan and South Korea," she explained.—APP

US says to dictate Venezuela decisions, oil sales

WASHINGTON: US President Donald Trump's administration said Wednesday it will dictate decisions to Venezuela's interim leaders and control the country's oil sales "indefinitely" after toppling Nicolas Maduro. The United States could effectively run Venezuela and tap into its oil reserves for years, Trump later told the New York Times. The American leader's assertion of US dominance over the oil-rich South American country comes despite its interim leader Delcy Rodriguez saying there is no foreign power governing Caracas. "There is a stain on our relations such as had never occurred in our history," Rodriguez said about the US attack to depose her predecessor. US special forces snatched president Maduro and his wife on Saturday in a lightning raid and whisked them to New York to face trial on drug and weapons charges, underscoring what Trump has called the "Donroe Doctrine" of US dominance over its backyard. "We obviously have maximum leverage over the interim authorities in Venezuela right now" following the capture operation, White House Press Secretary Karoline Leavitt told a briefing. — APP

Govt to fully 'deregulate' sugar sector by June 2026

MEHTAB PIRZADA

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan has pledged to the International Monetary Fund that it will completely liberalise its sugar industry by the end of June 2026, bringing an end to long-standing state oversight of pricing, output, and trade.

The move aims to hand the entire sugar economy, from farms to mills and markets, over to market forces, similar to recent steps taken in the wheat sector. Under the plan, the government will abolish price controls on sugar and sugarcane, remove restrictions on setting up new sugar mills and lift limits on imports and exports.

A long-standing ban on issuing licences for new sugar mills will also be withdrawn, opening the sector to fresh investment. Officials said zoning restrictions on sugarcane cultivation will be removed, giving farmers complete freedom to grow cane wherever they choose. The government will also end controls on how sugarcane is used or sold. Farmers will be free to sell their crop to any mill of their choice or use it for making jaggery (Gur).

"If you are arrested or violate any laws, your visa may be revoked, you may be deported, and you could be ineligible for future US visas. Follow the rules and don't jeopardise your travel.
