Reko Diq project

Balochistan to set up dedicated Frontier Corps

Provincial govt redesigning entire security architecture, says CM Bugti's aide Shahid Rind

BUREAU REPORT

KARACHI: Pakistan has decided to boost its intelligence network and raise a special force to guard the mineral-rich Balochistan province and its borders with Iran and Afghanistan, a provincial government official said. The development, comes days after Canadian giant Barrick Mining Corporation said it planned to "immediately" begin a comprehensive review of all aspects of the multibillion-dollar Reko Diq copper-gold project in Balochistan. Barrick's decision followed coordinated attacks by the Baloch Liberation Army (BLA) terrorist group in several districts across Balochistan last Saturday that killed 36 civilians and 22 security personnel. Authorities said they had killed 216 militants in follow-up operations. "In light of the terrorists events, the provincial government in tandem with security forces is redesigning the entire security architecture," Shahid Rind, an aide to Chief Minister of Balochistan Sarfraz Bugti for media and political affairs, told the Arab News. "This includes raising a dedicated Frontier Corps for the mineral-bearing area, securing both borders, i.e., Iran and Afghanistan," Arab News reached out to Pakistan's information minister, Attaullah Tarar, but he did not respond to questions seeking comment on the matter. The Balochistan government will also beef up its intelligence network and work closely with mining companies in the region. "The Balochistan government is extremely serious about foreign investment in the province and considers Reko Diq as the flag-bearer of foreign investment," Rind said. "The provincial government will do whatever is necessary to maintain that." The recent attacks have apparently alarmed international investors, especially Barrick, which is developing one of the world's largest copper and gold mines in Balochistan. "As we stated in our public documents, Barrick is undertaking a review of all aspects of the Reko Diq project, including with respect to the project's security arrangements, development timetable and capital budget," a Barrick spokesperson said in response to an Arab News email. Barrick's February 5 statement underscores both the progress and the challenges surrounding the Reko Diq copper-gold project in Balochistan. The company confirmed that site works advanced during the fourth quarter, but rising security incidents in the province have prompted management to launch a comprehensive review of all aspects of the project. Barrick owns 50% of Reko Diq, while three Pakistani federal state-owned enterprises hold 25% and the Balochistan government controls the remaining 25%, making it a joint venture that blends foreign expertise with local ownership. Production is expected to begin in 2028, and the project is seen as central to Pakistan's ambitions of boosting mineral exports and attracting foreign investment into its underdeveloped mining sector. Despite heightened threats in Balochistan, development linked to Reko Diq continues elsewhere in the country, with Barrick preparing to invest in port infrastructure to support future exports. This combination of progress, risk management, and strategic investment highlights the project's potential to transform Pakistan's mining industry while also revealing the delicate balance between opportunity and security.

'Dalai Lama never met with Epstein'

AGENCIES

BEIJING: The office of the Dalai Lama said on Sunday that he had never met convicted sex offender Jeffrey Epstein, after Chinese media reported the Tibetan Buddhist leader's name was mentioned in a cache of files released by the US government. The US Justice Department published last month the latest tranche of the Epstein files – more than three million documents, photos and videos related to its investigation into the disgraced financier. An AFP search of the files found the Dalai Lama's name was mentioned more than 150 times, with no mention of him meeting or interacting with Epstein. The mere mention of someone's name in the Epstein files does not in itself imply any wrongdoing by that person.

Iran insists on right to enrichment

NEWS DESK

DUBAI: Recognition of Iran's right to enrich uranium is key for nuclear talks with the US to succeed, Foreign Minister Abbas Araqchi said on Sunday. American and Iranian diplomats held indirect talks in Oman on Friday, aimed at reviving diplomacy amid a US naval buildup near Iran and Tehran's vows of a harsh response if attacked. "Zero enrichment can never be accepted by us. Hence, we need to focus on discussions that accept enrichment inside Iran while building trust that enrichment is and will stay for peaceful purposes," Araqchi said.

Major diplomatic reshuffle

Pakistan envoys to UK, KSA, Uzbekistan, UN, Sweden replaced

Dr Faisal, who previously served as Foreign Office spokesperson and ambassador to Germany, is widely regarded as a frontrunner to succeed Foreign Secretary Amna Baloch upon her anticipated retirement in September

ANSAR MAHMOOD BHATTI

ISLAMABAD: In a major diplomatic overhaul announced today, Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif has approved a comprehensive reshuffle involving 24 senior postings and transfers within Pakistan's Ministry of Foreign Affairs, aimed at revitalizing the country's overseas representations across critical regions including Europe, North America, the Middle East, and neighboring states. Among the most prominent changes, Captain (retd) Usman Tipu has been nominated as Pakistan's new High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, succeeding Dr Faisal in London. The UK mission remains one of Pakistan's most strategically vital postings, given its central role in fostering political ties, providing consular services, and engaging with the large Pakistani diaspora. Dr Faisal, who previously served as Foreign Office spokesperson and ambassador to Germany, is widely regarded as a frontrunner to succeed Foreign Secretary Amna Baloch upon her anticipated retirement in September. In a notable shift from domestic public-facing duties, current Foreign Office spokesperson Tahir Hussain Andrabi has been appointed as Pakistan's Permanent Representative to the United Nations in Geneva, placing him at the helm of multilateral diplomacy on key international issues. Neighboring Afghanistan sees a leadership change with Dr Syed Asad Ali Gillani (also referred to as Syed Asad Ali Gilani) designated as the new Ambassador to Kabul, replacing Ubaidur Rehman Nizamani. Ambassador Nizamani has been reassigned to Stockholm as Pakistan's Ambassador to Sweden. The reshuffle extends to the Gulf with Bilal Ahmad transferred from Pakistan's LAHORE/ISLAMABAD/PESHAWAR/QUETTA: Most of the markets in Lahore and Islamabad were open on Sunday, despite a strike call by opposition alliance Tehreek-i-Tahafuz-i-Ayin-i-Pakistan (TTAP) in protest of alleged discrepancies in the 2024 general elections. A partial shutdown was observed in Peshawar, while a complete shutdown strike was reported in Quetta. In Lahore, all major markets remained closed, primarily due to Sunday and Basant day. The strike ended in Peshawar after 5pm. The PTI – a part of the TTAP – earlier also announced its plan to stage nationwide protests today to mark the second anniversary of the Feb 8, 2024, general elections, which it alleges were marred by rigging.

STAFF REPORT

T20WC: England beat Nepal

SPORTS DESK

MUMBAI: England clung on to beat Nepal by four runs in a last-ball thriller in Mumbai on Sunday and avoid one of the biggest upsets in the history of the T20 World Cup. Chasing an imposing 185 to win, Nepal's Lokesh Bam (39 not out) needed a six off the final delivery of the match bowled by Sam Curran but could only club the ball to deep cover for a single. It was an agonising end to a valiant run chase by the cricketing minnows, who put England's premier bowlers Jofra Archer and Adil Rashid to the sword. Jacob Bethell (55) and Harry Brook (53) scored quick fifties for England but it was a late cameo by Will Jacks that took them to 184-7 in the Group C match, a total that proved just out of reach.

India-sponsored Daesh affiliate behind Islamabad attack, says interior minister

Interior minister says India is funding and giving targets to terrorist groups

FAISAL SHEIKH

ISLAMABAD: Interior Minister Mohsin Naqvi on Saturday confirmed that the mastermind of the Islamabad suicide blast, associated with the banned Daesh, is in the custody of Pakistan along with the attacker's facilitators. Addressing a presser in Islamabad, he said that the mastermind and the facilitators of the deadly attack were arrested in raids conducted in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa's Peshawar and Nowshera immediately after the blast. His comments come in the wake of Friday's deadly attack at an Islamabad imambargah during prayers, which left at least 33 people martyred and dozens injured. The suicide bomber opened fire before detonating himself at the entrance of the imambargah in the federal capital's Tarlai area. "I am telling you again with clarity that their [terrorist outfits] entire funding is being provided by India. All targets being provided to them by India," Naqvi said during his presser. He added that the KP Counter Terrorism Department has

WASHINGTON: Pakistan has been invited to the first proposed meeting of US President Donald Trump's "Board of Peace" (BoP) on Gaza, reported to be held in Washington on Feb 19, and is likely to attend. According to the sources, Islamabad received the invitation as part of the outreach to countries that have already joined the board, which was launched by Trump late last month. The meeting is expected to focus on giving formal shape to the board, including its structure, mandate and secretariat, the sources said. "This will be a key meeting aimed at giving a shape and structure to the board," one diplomatic source said. Asked whether Pakistan could be approached to contribute troops to a proposed international stabilisation force for Gaza, the source said such discussions were premature.

Earlier, he visited patients under treatment at the Pakistan Red Crescent Teaching Hospital, presented them with flowers and expressed best wishes for their speedy recovery

LAHORE: Khyber Pakhtunkhwa (KP) Governor and President Pakistan Red Crescent Society (PRCS) Faisal Karim Kundi on Sunday lauded the outstanding services of the Pakistan Red Crescent Society (Hilale-Ahmar), saying its role during natural disasters, emergencies and population displacement was unforgettable and highly commendable. Addressing a ceremony at the Pakistan Red Crescent Medical and Dental College, Dina Nath, the governor said Hilale-Ahmar had set a remarkable example of humanitarian service by extending timely assistance to affected people in the most challenging circumstances. He said the organization's commitment to humanity reflected the true spirit of selfless service. The ceremony was attended by Chairman PRCS Punjab Mian Muhammad Hanif (Sitara-e-Imtiaz), General Secretary Mehboob Qadir, Suhail Jahangir, Dr Ashraf Nizami, Abid Rehman, Farzand Ali Agha, faculty members, doctors, students and paramedical staff. Governor Faisal Karim Kundi particularly appreciated the services of PRCS Punjab and thanked its management for providing full support to displaced people from Khyber Pakhtunkhwa during natural calamities. He said the Red Crescent had played a vital role ranging from first aid to provision of medical facilities, adding that he was pleased to see the quality of services being provided at the hospital and hostels. Announcing a major development, the Governor said the hospital would soon be upgraded into a modern 500-bed medical facility, which would provide quality healthcare services to thousands of people in the area. He praised the performance of the hospital team, saying excellent work was being carried out and doctors, teachers and paramedical staff were serving the public with dedication and commitment. He suggested that quarterly meetings among provincial Red Crescent organizations should be held to benefit from each other's experiences and ideas. He also urged the central headquarters to extend support to provincial units by providing vehicles and other facilities to further enhance field operations. The governor also pledged continued cooperation with the Pakistan Red Crescent Society and assured full support for strengthening its humanitarian activities. During the ceremony, Faisal Karim Kundi laid the foundation stone of a new 250-bed block for the hospital, which is expected to significantly expand medical services. Earlier, he visited patients under treatment at the Pakistan Red Crescent Teaching Hospital, presented them with flowers and expressed best wishes for their speedy recovery. Later, the Governor distributed ration bags among deserving families under the Ramadan Package initiated by PRCS Punjab, saying that supporting vulnerable segments of society was a shared responsibility of the government and welfare organizations. He also distributed certificates and shields among doctors and students who demonstrated outstanding performance to encourage youth towards hard work and public service. At the conclusion of the ceremony, Chairman PRCS Punjab Mian Muhammad Hanif was presented with a traditional Khyber Pakhtunkhwa shawl and cap. Fateha was also offered for the martyrs of the Islamabad incident, with prayers for the elevation of their ranks.—APP

Wetlands defence against climate breakdown

LAHORE: Federal Tax Ombudsman (FTO) Coordinator Saif Ur Rehman said on Sunday that protecting wetlands in Pakistan is a practical defence against climate breakdown, economic insecurity and ecological collapse. Addressing a seminar held here in connection with World Wetlands Day, he suggested the government to strengthen enforcement against encroachment, ensure environmental impact assessments are credible and transparent, and integrate wetland conservation into provincial land-use planning. Equally vital is restoring environmental flows to the Indus Delta so that mangroves can survive in the long term, he added. The FTO Coordinator said, Pakistan had repeatedly been battered by catastrophic floods, therefore investing in wetland restoration should be central to disaster management planning instead of treating the wetlands as wasteland. Beyond the coast, he mentioned, Pakistan's wetlands are under mounting stress, because urban encroachment, industrial effluent, solid waste dumping and ill-planned infrastructure projects have degraded lakes such as Manchar and Haleji. Reduced river flows, driven by upstream diversions and erratic rainfall patterns, have further altered fragile ecosystems. The result is a steady decline in biodiversity, including migratory bird population that once thrived in these habitats. Saif Ur Rehman said, "Mangroves are not decorative greenery; they are living infrastructure. They buffer coastal communities against cyclones and storm surges, reduce erosion, store vast amounts of carbon and sustain fisheries that support thousands of livelihoods in Sindh." Wetlands are among the most effective natural tools for climate adaptation. They absorb floodwaters, recharge aquifers and filter pollutants.—APP

Women health precautions stressed during Ramazan

SARGODHGA: Weather changes have a significant impact on human health, with women being more vulnerable to related complications, said renowned gynecologist Dr. Humaira Azhar while talking to the Associated Press of Pakistan. She said sudden changes in weather, temperature fluctuations and increasing air pollution adversely affect the hormonal system of women, leading to various health issues, particularly those related to menstruation, pregnancy and reproductive health. Seasonal transitions from cold to hot or hot to cold often result in hormonal imbalance, menstrual irregularities, physical weakness, headaches, mental stress and infections, she added. Dr. Humaira Azhar said an increase in urinary tract and reproductive system infections has been observed during the current season, attributing it mainly to weakened immunity and negligence in maintaining proper hygiene. Talking about the upcoming holy month of Ramadan, she said that although Ramadan is a blessed month, women need to take special care of their health due to limited food and water intake during fasting hours. She advised pregnant women, breastfeeding mothers and those already suffering from gynecological problems to consult their doctors before observing fasts. She emphasized that a balanced diet during Ramadan is essential for women's health. Protein-rich, fiber-based and slow-digesting foods should be taken during Sehri to sustain energy throughout the day, while Iftar should include light, nutritious foods along with adequate fluids. Fruits, vegetables, yogurt and milk products help replenish water and calcium deficiency in the body, she said. Dr. Humaira Azhar warned that seasonal changes during Ramadan may lead to dehydration, low blood pressure, dizziness and severe weakness. She advised women to avoid unnecessary exertion, ensure adequate rest and maintain proper sleep routines.—APP

Murad highlights economic activity at My Karachi Expo

KARACHI: Sindh Chief Minister Syed Murad Ali Shah has said that 'My Karachi Expo' has become an important and permanent feature of the city's calendar, reflecting the city's resilience, diversity and economic vitality despite multiple challenges. Addressing the 21st My Karachi Exhibition, the chief minister congratulated the Karachi Chamber of Commerce and Industry (KCCI) on the successful organisation of the event and termed its continuity a major achievement.

He noted that Sunday marked the final day of the expo, which witnessed participation from millions of citizens over the past few days. The chief minister said that stalls from several friendly countries were set up at the exhibition, where international partners showcased their products and culture. He added that a large number of people visited the expo over the last two days and actively participated in shopping and business activities. Referring to recent tragic incidents, the chief minister said that the nation was still grieving due to the Islamabad tragedy, while the Gul Plaza incident in Karachi had also deeply saddened the people. He said the Sindh government, in collaboration with KCCI, was working to support the affectees of Gul Plaza and to help rehabilitate damaged shops to compensate for losses as much as possible. Despite the challenges, Murad Ali Shah said Sindh remained a vibrant province. He highlighted that Karachi recently hosted major regional and international events, including the 7th South-East Asian Parliamentarians' session, the 17th edition of the Karachi Literature Festival, and the 774th Urs of Hazrat Lal Shahbaz Qalandar. He also recalled that an international cultural festival held a few months ago continued for nearly 39 days. The chief minister expressed gratitude to the people of Sindh, especially Karachi, for actively participating in cultural, sports, business, and literary events. He recalled that even after the devastating floods of 2022, when nearly 70 per cent of the province was submerged, the people of Sindh demonstrated remarkable resilience and recovered collectively. Emphasising democratic values, the CM said that peaceful protest was a constitutional right but must remain within the bounds of law. He said relevant forums existed for registering complaints and grievances, and matters should be resolved through institutional and democratic processes rather than media trials. Talking about public safety, the chief minister said improving the fire brigade system was among the government's top priorities. He revealed that the system was previously divided among multiple authorities and would now be brought under one unified institution. He said China had offered cooperation to help improve the fire brigade system, including training to ensure rapid response to fire incidents. Murad Ali Shah also said that work was underway to improve roads, flyovers, and emergency response mechanisms across Karachi. He stressed the importance of implementing basic safety measures in buildings with high public footfall, including clear exit signage and alarm systems, to prevent major losses. Regarding the K-IV water project, the chief minister said it was initiated nearly 10-11 years ago but faced delays due to flawed planning, power issues, cost objections and funding gaps.—APP

Diplomats discover rich cultural heritage of Pakistan at Orange festival

DNA

ISLAMABAD: Ambassador of Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan to Pakistan Dr. Maen Khreasat taking part in the weight lifting game along with others participants at Orange Festival. WAH CANTT :Diplomats stationed in Islamabad, along with their families, stepped into Pakistan’s living heritage this weekend as they attended the 13 th Orange Festival in Taxila, a historic hub of the ancient Gandhara and Buddhist civilizations. Hosted at the Zaildar House, the cultural gathering offered foreign guests an immersive experience featuring traditional cuisine, black-stone carving artistry, rhythmic horse dance performances, and the indigenous sport of stone lifting. According to state run news agency, the festival also highlighted Khanpuri oranges, a regional specialty that drew particular interest from visiting families and children. The event has been organised for more than a decade by social figures Zaildar Ahsan Shah and Zaildar Zaheer Shah, who have consistently used the platform to introduce diplomats to the cultural depth and historical significance of Taxila. Stalls displaying replicas of Gandhara art, handcrafted jewellery, and marble and stone pottery attracted wide appreciation, while local flavours – including paan and gol gappay – proved popular among international visitors. The 13th edition of the Orange Festival was attended by ambassadors and diplomats from over 50 countries. Punjab Governor Sardar Saleem

ISLAMABAD: Ambassador of Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan to Pakistan Dr. Maen Khreasat taking part in the weight lifting game along with others participants at Orange Festival.

Haider Khan, the chief guest on the occasion, said such cultural initiatives play a vital role in projecting Pakistan’s soft image globally. He noted that the participation of foreign envoys reflected Pakistan’s active diplomatic engagement and helped strengthen bonds with friendly nations. “Cultural heritage is Pakistan’s strength and a bridge between civilizations,” the governor said, adding that events like these foster understanding beyond formal diplomacy. Traditional performances, including the Taxila horse dance, weightlifting contests, and qawwali, were also staged during the festival. Several diplomats expressed interest in revisiting Taxila to explore its archaeological and historical sites in greater detail.

Minister stresses urgent need for functional infant feeding boards

ISLAMABAD: State Minister for Health, Dr. Mukhtar Bharath, has stated that breastfeeding is not merely a health issue but a strategic investment in Pakistan’s bright future, robust economy, and the survival of the next generation. He emphasized that it is the most effective way to lay the foundation for a healthy society. He expressed these views while addressing a high-level dialogue on “Strengthening the Legislative Framework for Nutrition and Early Childhood Development” at the Pakistan Institute for Parliamentary Services (PIPS). The event, organized in collaboration with the Health Services Academy (HSA) and UNICEF, was attended by members of the National Assembly and Senate, nutritionists, pediatricians, and officials from the Ministry of Health. “Dr. Shahzad Ali Khan, Vice Chancellor of the Health Services Academy”, pointed out that despite the existence of laws, a lack of enforcement and support systems has kept them limited to paper. He stressed the urgent need for functional Infant Feeding Boards and robust accountability mechanisms. Participants were informed of serious gaps in the implementation of breastfeeding laws in Pakistan. Only 20% of newborns receive breast milk within the first hour of birth. The rate of exclusive breastfeeding for the first six months stands at a mere 48%. Due to these factors, the stunting rate among children under five is 38%, and more than 33,000 children die annually due to a lack of timely preventive measures. The dialogue revealed that Pakistan spends over Rs. 110 billion annually on formula milk, even though fewer than 2,000 infants actually require breastmilk substitutes for medical reasons. Sharmela Rasool, UNICEF Deputy Country Representative, stated that providing facilities for mothers at workplaces and countering misinformation is the need of the hour. At the conclusion of the session, parliamentarians and participants endorsed a joint declaration committing to stricter legislation. They agreed to remove obstacles in the enforcement process and emphasized making the Parliament’s constitutional role and oversight more effective for the better development of children.—DNA

RAWALPINDI: Governor Punjab Sardar Saleem Haider Khan on Sunday visited the Imambargah Khadija-tul-Kubra in Trilal Kalan, where a suicide blast took place a couple of days ago, resulting in the martyrdom and injury of several worshippers. Upon arrival at the site, the Governor was briefed in detail about the entire incident by the Imam of the Imambargah, Raja Basharat Hussain Imami, who explained the nature of the blast and the situation following the attack. The Governor offered prayers for the martyrs and inquired about the well-being of the injured. Speaking to the media, Governor Punjab Sardar Saleem Haider Khan said that terrorists carried blasts in mosques have no connection with the religion of Islam. He condemned the blast in the strongest terms and reaffirmed that terrorists would be brought to justice. “Those who target Muslims bowing down to Allah Almighty in places of worship, will be made an example and brought to justice”, he said adding that issuing condemnation statements of a suicide attack on an Imambargah can never be enough. He reminded that country’s valour security forces were already engaged in eradicating the terror network from the country . “The officers and soldiers of the Pakistan armed forces have rendered immortal sacrifices in the war against terrorism”, he said. The governor highlighted that those acting upon Indian sponsorship would be punished hard. “Indian-sponsored terrorists and their facilitators will be taken to their logical end”, said the Punjab governor . He expressed deep sorrow over loss of precious lives in the blast and offered prayers for their high ranks in the world afterwards. “In this hour of grief, we stand fully with the families of the martyrs and the injured”, he added.—APP

Maritime heritage conservation key to blue economy growth: Anwar

ISLAMABAD: Federal Minister for Maritime Affairs Muhammad Junaid Anwar Chaudhry said maritime heritage is a national asset vital to cultural identity, education and sustainable economic growth, emphasizing the need to expand the blue economy while addressing climate risks. Junaid Anwar Chaudhry reiterated this commitment in a meeting with Federal Minister for National Heritage and Culture Aurangzeb Khan Khichi where they reviewed existing initiatives and discussed a framework for sustained inter-ministerial collaboration to promote the maritime heritage. “Talks focused on aligning policy, research and conservation efforts to ensure maritime heritage is documented, protected from degradation and integrated into broader national development strategies,” Junaid Chaudhry added. He noted Pakistan’s coastline over 1,000 kilometres along the Arabian Sea has, for centuries, linked South Asia with the wider Indian Ocean world. Historic ports, navigational routes, shipwrecks, lighthouses and fishing settlements testify to a long maritime tradition that remains under-documented and increasingly vulnerable. “Our maritime heritage is not only a record of our past but a strategic asset for the future,” Junaid Chaudhry said, noting that preservation could support education, tourism and the blue economy while strengthening national identity. “Development and preservation are not mutually exclusive. With careful planning and cooperation, we can protect our heritage while unlocking the economic potential of our seas.” Junaid Chaudhry said our ports and sea routes had been central to regional trade and cultural exchange, leaving behind both tangible assets such as historic ports and underwater archaeological sites and intangible heritage in the form of traditional fishing practices and coastal community knowledge. Protecting these assets, he added, required a “whole-of-government approach”. Coastal erosion, climate change, unregulated development and illegal salvaging pose growing threats to heritage sites, particularly underwater cultural assets, he said. “No single organization can address these challenges alone. Inter-ministerial coordination is essential to ensure that conservation goes hand in hand with sustainable economic activity.”

National Heritage and Culture Minister Aurangzeb Khichi echoed the call for joint action, stressing the role of cultural institutions, museums and research bodies in documenting and interpreting maritime history. He said his ministry would work closely with maritime authorities to map heritage sites along the coast, support archaeological surveys and promote public awareness through exhibitions, curricula and community engagement. “Maritime heritage is an integral part of Pakistan’s cultural mosaic,” Minister Khichi said. “From ancient trade links to living traditions of coastal communities, this heritage must be preserved for future generations. Conservation efforts must be grounded in research, respect local communities and meet international standards.” The two ministers also discussed to explore the establishment of a joint working group to coordinate policies, share data and develop project proposals. Potential areas of cooperation include the protection of historic ports and lighthouses, documentation of traditional boat-building techniques, preservation of underwater archaeological sites and the promotion of responsible maritime tourism. The discussions also highlighted the need to strengthen legal and regulatory frameworks to prevent damage to heritage sites, including stricter controls on coastal development and improved monitoring of underwater assets. Capacity-building for local authorities, as well as collaboration with universities and international partners, was identified as critical to sustaining conservation efforts. “Our objective is to attract people especially youth, scholars and tourists towards maritime affairs,” Junaid Chaudhry said. “By highlighting our maritime heritage, we can inspire careers in marine sciences, shipping, fisheries and port management, while strengthening public understanding of the blue economy.”

The meeting concluded with a shared commitment to translate policy discussions into actionable plans, he said, signalling a more integrated approach to safeguarding Pakistan’s maritime heritage as a shared legacy for future generations.—DNA

Heavy vehicles warned against lane violations

ISLAMABAD: Islamabad Traffic Police (ITP) has launched Phase-II of its lane-violation enforcement plan, issuing a stern warning to heavy vehicle drivers to strictly follow lane discipline or face vehicle impoundment and heavy fines. An ITP official told on Sunday that the new phase focuses specifically on heavy traffic, which has repeatedly been found violating designated lanes, causing congestion and posing serious safety hazards on major arteries of the federal capital. Under the enforcement plan, traffic police teams have been directed to take strict legal action against heavy vehicles travelling outside the extreme left lane. The action includes issuance of challans, heavy fines and seizure of vehicles in case of repeated violations. Chief Traffic Officer (CTO) Islamabad Captain (R) Hamzah Humayun said that lane discipline is essential for smooth traffic flow and the prevention of accidents, particularly on high-speed corridors. He made it clear that heavy vehicles must remain in the leftmost lane at all times and warned that no leniency would be shown to violators. The CTO said the objective of Phase-II is not punishment alone, but awareness and the creation of safer roads for all commuters. “Heavy traffic moving in the wrong lanes endangers lives and disrupts traffic. Strict enforcement will continue until full compliance is achieved,” he added. He urged transporters and drivers to cooperate with traffic police, follow lane markings and traffic rules, and avoid unnecessary inconvenience and legal action. ITP officers will remain deployed at key roads and entry points to monitor compliance. Citizens have also been advised to report traffic violations through the ITP helpline 1915 or emergency helpline Pucar-15.—APP

Analysts say full-scale US-Iran war unlikely, strike possible

ISLAMABAD: The Institute of Regional Studies hosted a roundtable discussion to address the ongoing war-like scenario between the US and Iran Ambassador Jauhar Saleem, President IRS, in his remarks stressed that Iran is a brotherly country and Pakistan prioritizes Iran's stability. He was of the view that strong statements issued by President Trump against Iran were rather a pressuring tactic to compel Iran for negotiations, said a press release issued here on Saturday. Defense Analyst, Rear Admiral (R), Faisal Ali Shah, emphasized that Iran should not be understood solely through the western perspective, as the system was institutionalized even to the very basic level.

He said the protests were largely directed against specific policies rather than demanding the complete overthrow of the system. He further argued that external shocks did not trigger a full-scale uprising as seen during the 12-day war because many citizens prioritized stability and security over foreign intervention. Muhammad Hussain Baqeri, Chairman Iqbal Forum, opined that Iranian society is in a transitional phase shaped by the evolving political and social dynamics. Therefore, without having comprehensive security policies, he argued, the long-term stability in the social sphere was unlikely. Alireza Nader from Washington, D.C., described that the Iranian diaspora put pressure on the US to undertake a decisive action against the Iranian government. He, nevertheless, admitted that any U.S. military action carried a high risk of escalation, potentially expanding into a broader regional conflict. He acknowledged that there remained a limited possibility of diplomacy between the US and Iran, but significant concessions were unlikely to be made. Jawed Rana, Editor of The Counter Narrative, told the audience that Iran's institutional and governmental structures remained strong and resilient despite economic hardships. He argued that the Iranian institutions are powerful, which were able to contain the economic unrest. He suggested that the U.S. and Israel might anticipate internal instability as a strategic opportunity, but a large-scale war is unlikely. Nonetheless, if negotiations fail, a limited strike remains a possibility, he concluded.—DNA

A stark reminder of Pakistan's security lapses

On a tragic evening in Islamabad on February 6, 2026, a devastating suicide bombing ripped through an imambargah, claiming the lives of more than 35 innocent worshippers. The incident, described by eyewitnesses as one of the most horrifying attacks in recent memory, has left the nation in shock and mourning. Families were shattered, communities traumatized, and once again, Pakistan's fragile security apparatus was exposed for its glaring weaknesses. Initial reports suggested that the suicide bomber may have originated from Khyber Pakhtunkhwa (KP), with possible Afghan links. However, these claims remain unverified. Security agencies recovered an identity card from the scene, raising serious questions. Typically, suicide bombers do not carry identification, and even if they did, the sheer force of such an explosion would obliterate personal belongings. How then did an intact ID card survive when the bomber's body was mutilated beyond recognition? The timing of the attack could not have been more embarrassing for Pakistan. The blast occurred while the President of Uzbekistan was still in the country on an official visit. Such a high-profile guest should have warranted maximum security measures, yet the attack unfolded in the heart of the capital. The symbolism is damning: if Islamabad itself cannot be secured during a state visit, what hope is there for smaller towns and vulnerable communities across the nation? This tragedy underscores a recurring theme in Pakistan's governance—systemic failure of security institutions. Despite decades of counterterrorism operations, loopholes remain wide open. The absence of effective intelligence gathering, poor coordination among agencies, and lack of accountability have created an environment where militants can strike at will. The imambargah blast is not just an isolated incident; it is part of a larger pattern of negligence. At the heart of these failures lies a deeper malaise: corruption and nepotism. Key appointments in Pakistan's security and administrative structures are often made not on merit but on personal whims, political loyalty, or family connections. When individuals are placed in critical positions without the necessary competence or dedication, the entire system collapses. A person who owes his position to favoritism rather than merit has little incentive to perform effectively. He lacks both the skill and the motivation to safeguard national interests. This culture of nepotism is not confined to Islamabad—it permeates every level of governance across Pakistan. From local police stations to federal ministries, appointments are routinely influenced by connections rather than qualifications. The result is a bureaucracy riddled with inefficiency, indifference, and incompetence. The victims of this blast were ordinary citizens who had gathered for worship. Their lives were cut short not only by the bomber's brutality but also by the state's failure to protect them. Each casualty represents a family plunged into grief, children left orphaned, and communities scarred forever. The human cost of corruption and negligence is measured not in statistics but in shattered lives. The discovery of the ID card raises troubling questions. Was it planted to mislead investigators? Was it a sign of sloppy planning by the attacker? Or does it point to deeper conspiracies within the system? Until these questions are answered transparently, public confidence in the authorities will remain eroded. Unfortunately, Pakistan's history suggests that such mysteries often fade into obscurity, leaving citizens with more doubts than clarity. If Pakistan is to prevent such tragedies in the future, it must confront the root causes head-on. Cosmetic measures—temporary security cordons, knee-jerk arrests, or hollow condemnations will not suffice. What is needed is a complete overhaul of the system: Security agencies must be led by competent professionals chosen for their expertise, not their connections. Officials who fail in their duties must face consequences, regardless of their political affiliations. Investment in modern intelligence tools and training is essential to preempt attacks. Citizens must be empowered to report suspicious activities without fear of reprisal. Above all, leaders must demonstrate genuine commitment to reform, rather than using tragedies as opportunities for rhetoric. The gruesome blast in Islamabad's imambargah is more than a terrorist attack it is a mirror reflecting Pakistan's systemic failures. Until corruption and nepotism are uprooted and meritocracy is established, such tragedies will continue to haunt the nation. The blood of the victims is a stark reminder that governance is not a game of personal favors; it is a sacred responsibility. Pakistan must choose whether to continue down the path of negligence or finally embrace reform. The choice will determine whether future generations inherit a safer homeland or a perpetual cycle of grief.

US–Iran Talks: Peace or a Path to War?

Qamar Bashir

Iran's Foreign Minister Abbas Araqchi came out of the talks calling them a “good start,” and — crucially — confirming that the process will continue after consultations in both capitals. Oman's foreign minister, Badr al-Busaidi, described the discussions as “very serious” and stressed that outcomes would be weighed carefully in Tehran and Washington before the next steps are set. That language matters. It signals that neither side wanted a theatrical meeting designed to fail; both treated it as a controlled opening whose survival depends on disciplined messaging and political authorization at home

FEBRUARY 6, 2026 has the feel of a turning point — not because the United States and Iran suddenly became friends, but because two sworn rivals chose diplomacy at the very moment when the logic of escalation was gaining speed. In Muscat, Oman, with anxiety rising across capitals from Tel Aviv to Beijing, the world watched an extraordinary scene: U.S. and Iranian delegations meeting under Omani mediation to test whether a negotiated path still exists before the region is pushed into another cycle of strikes, retaliation, and economic shock. Iran's Foreign Minister Abbas Araqchi came out of the talks calling them a “good start,” and — crucially — confirming that the process will continue after consultations in both capitals. Oman's foreign minister, Badr al-Busaidi, described the discussions as “very serious” and stressed that outcomes would be weighed carefully in Tehran and Washington before the next steps are set. That language matters. It signals that neither side wanted a theatrical meeting designed to fail; both treated it as a controlled opening whose survival depends on disciplined messaging and political authorization at home. Araqchi's public framing was unusually calm for this relationship. He insisted that “any dialogue requires refraining from threats and pressure” and drew a sharp boundary around the agenda: Iran will discuss its nuclear issue — and nothing else — with the United States. That insistence is not a negotiating flourish; it is Iran's strategic doctrine in diplomatic form. Tehran wants a narrow, technical bargain that can translate into sanctions relief, without turning the table into a referendum on Iran's missiles, its regional posture, or its internal politics. Washington, by contrast, has signaled a broader ambition. Publicly, U.S. officials have voiced interest in a framework that reaches beyond the nuclear file to Iran's ballistic missiles, support for armed groups in the region, and internal governance and human-rights issues. But the early reporting around Muscat suggests the first round did not become a missile negotiation. A diplomat briefed on Iran's account of the talks said Tehran insisted on its “right to enrich uranium,” and that missile capabilities were not raised during the discussions themselves — a telling sign that the meeting's primary purpose was to prevent collapse at the starting line. This is where the real contest lies: enrichment versus zero-enrichment. For Washington, domestic enrichment is treated as a red line because enrichment can be a pathway — depending on level, stockpile, and monitoring — toward weapons capability. For Tehran, enrichment is framed as sovereign entitlement under international norms, coupled with repeated claims that it does not seek a bomb. The Muscat channel appears to be searching for a formula that neither humiliates Iran nor leaves the United States politically exposed: limits on enrichment “level and purity,” more intrusive oversight, or even alternative arrangements such as a regional consortium were discussed as possibilities in the reporting. In exchange, Iran's demands were described as immediate and effective sanctions relief — especially in banking and oil — and a reduction in U.S. military pressure near Iran. Yet, even as delegates spoke in Muscat, pressure politics continued in Washington. President Donald Trump signed an order tied to tariffs on countries that trade with Iran — described in reporting as a mechanism that could raise import costs by as much as 25% for countries purchasing Iranian goods, aimed at discouraging third-country trade ties with Iran in energy, metals, and petrochemicals. Some coverage emphasized that the order sets a process and authority rather than flipping an immediate universal switch — but either way, the message was unmistakable: diplomacy is being run alongside economic coercion, not instead of it. The same dual-track approach showed up in sanctions. Reporting described new U.S. measures targeting Iranian petroleum-related networks, including entities and vessels linked to oil and petrochemical trade. That timing is not accidental; it is intended to signal negotiating leverage. But it also carries risk: Tehran can interpret such actions as proof that Washington negotiates with one hand while tightening the noose with the other — precisely the behavior Araqchi warned against when he demanded talks without “threats and pressure.” Against this backdrop, the strategic psychology is as important as the technical details. Both sides now appear to recognize that war is not a clean option. The United States holds greater conventional military power and unmatched financial leverage. Iran, however, has built a layered deterrent: missile capability, regional influence, and the ability to impose costs in a conflict that would not remain limited or predictable. The development leading up to the talks underscored the scale and seriousness of Iran's missile capability, tested during the June 2025 conflict, and the broader atmosphere of tension as talks were set. Then there is the world's most sensitive nerve: the

Strait of Hormuz. Any confrontation that threatens energy shipping through that chokepoint would ricochet immediately through global markets. It would not be “a regional war”; it would become a global inflation event. China's energy security, South Asia's import bill, Europe's fragile price stability — all become collateral. This is why even states that distrust Tehran fear a breakdown. The Muscat talks were not just about uranium; they were about preventing a chain reaction in trade, energy, and geopolitics. The symbolism around the meeting also tells you how close the temperature is to boiling. Hours before talks, Iranian state media highlighted deployment of the Khorramshahr-4 ballistic missile at an underground Revolutionary Guard “missile city” — a calculated signal of readiness and deterrence, designed to shape the psychology of negotiation: talk if you want, but do not assume coercion will be cost-free. This is why the “good start” language matters more than it seems. U.S.–Iran diplomacy often collapses not because the issues are unsolvable in principle, but because the political ecosystem around the talks punishes concession and rewards confrontation. In that environment, secrecy and restraint are not suspicious — they are essential. Oman's emphasis that results must be considered carefully in both capitals is, in effect, an admission that the next phase will be decided not only by diplomats but by the domestic politics of power on both sides. Your central argument stands: the implications radiate outward — to Israel's security calculations, to Gulf state stability, to Pakistan and Afghanistan's strategic environment, and to China's energy-risk horizon. The Muscat channel is a narrow door. If it widens, a framework could emerge that limits nuclear escalation risk and reduces market fear, even if it leaves missiles and regional alliances unresolved. If it slams shut, the region returns to the most dangerous pattern: sanctions, deployments, threats, miscalculation — and the constant possibility that one strike produces an uncontrollable reply. For now, the most important fact is simple: the talks did not collapse on day one. In a relationship where collapse is often the default expectation, that alone is the first measurable achievement — and possibly the only thing standing between the region and a new inferno.

Kites of Hope Amid Shadows of Sorrow

Muhammad Mohsin Iqbal

The juxtaposition of Lahore's revival with national grief is stark. While kites soar in the skies of the Punjab, coffins are lowered in Quetta and Peshawar. Yet, even in the face of these horrors, Pakistan refuses to let fear dictate its culture or its celebrations. The revival of Basant after twenty-five years becomes an act of courage, asserting that life, colour, and hope will persist...

AFTER nearly a quarter of a century, Basant has returned to Lahore, not merely as a festival but as a long-suppressed emotion rediscovering its voice. For twenty-five years, the city carried the memory of spring like a faded photograph—cherished, yet distant. Past tragedies, when careless celebrations claimed innocent lives, had silenced rooftops and hushed laughter. This year, when kites once again rose above the Walled City, and families cautiously gathered on terraces, Lahore seemed to breathe differently. The revival was neither loud nor reckless; it was measured, regulated, and reflective, shaped by time, loss, and hard-earned lessons. Basant's return symbolised not forgetfulness of past pain, but the nation's capacity to reclaim joy without surrendering prudence. In Lahore, the festival fills the air with a tenderness that only spring can offer. The mustard fields bloom in golden swathes, blending with the vibrancy of kite-filled skies. Children dart across rooftops with thread and spool, while parents watch with pride, apprehension, and hope. The city, long deprived of this cultural heartbeat, now dances cautiously with its heritage. Alongside the kites and laughter, the air carries the scent of traditional Basant delicacies; steaming platters of samosas, pakoras, jalebis, gajralla and phirni, alongside sweetmeats, roasted peanuts, and hot puri halwa sold from roadside stalls, evoking nostalgia for generations and adding a flavor to the celebration that is uniquely Lahori. Basant is not simply an event of colour and sound; it is a living memory of resilience, reminding Pakistanis that joy, even after decades of sorrow, remains possible. Yet the celebration in Lahore exists alongside a national grief that cannot be ignored. In Balochistan, decades-long unrest has been inflamed by external forces, with India's covert interference designed to destabilise Pakistan internally. The evidence is substantial: from the apprehension and confession of Commander Kulbhushan Jadhav to documented support for militant networks, the objective is clear—to weaken Pakistan by fostering fear, division, and disorder. Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, already scarred by years of conflict and displacement, remains vulnerable, as sporadic attacks continue to claim lives and devastate communities. Even places of worship, traditionally sanctuaries of peace, have not been spared. Mosques have been targeted with chilling precision, and worshippers—men, women, and children—have been martyred mid-prayer. Such acts are not merely attacks on human life; they are assaults on society's moral and spiritual foundation. They seek to replace devotion with fear and communal harmony with suspicion, yet Pakistan endures, demonstrating an unbroken will to defend both its people and its values. The juxtaposition of Lahore's revival with national grief is stark. While kites soar in the skies of the Punjab, coffins are lowered in Quetta and Peshawar. Yet, even in the face of these horrors, Pakistan refuses to let fear dictate its culture or its celebrations. The revival of Basant after twenty-five years becomes an act of courage, asserting that life, colour, and hope will persist despite adversity. Regulation, public awareness, and collective responsibility now shape the festival, ensuring that celebration does not repeat past tragedies. The coexistence of joy and sorrow is not contradiction; it is the essence of resilience. Pakistan has learned to smile through tears, to celebrate while standing guard, and to hope even when circumstances conspire against hope. The laughter on Lahore's rooftops does not mock the grief of Quetta or Peshawar; it affirms that terror will not monopolise the nation's spirit. Basant, in this context, is not only a reclaiming of cultural heritage but a moral statement: that Pakistan will protect its traditions while defending its people. The state's responsibility is immense. Security measures must be intelligent, sustained, and rooted in justice rather than mere force. Counterterrorism is not only about weapons or checkpoints; it is also about governance, inclusion, and narrative. Citizens must remain vigilant while celebrating. A society at war cannot afford indifference, yet it must resist being defined solely by conflict. Protecting life while preserving cultural identity is the delicate balance Pakistan strives to maintain. History teaches that nations endure not only through military might but through moral clarity and cultural continuity. External actors, seeking to fracture Pakistan's social, political, and spiritual fabric, understand this well. Basant's revival is a testament to the nation's resilience—a celebration that asserts life and joy even amid shadows of violence. As kites colour Lahore's spring once more, they carry prayers for those who cannot celebrate, for those whose springs were stolen by terror. The scent of different delicacies of traditional foods related to Basant mingles with the spring breeze, reminding the nation that life's simple pleasures—shared food, laughter, and colour—are also acts of resistance against despair. Pakistan's challenge is to guard both joy and grief with equal seriousness—to ensure that neither recklessness nor fear defines the nation. In holding sorrow and celebration together, in mourning martyrs while reclaiming cultural traditions, Pakistan affirms its endurance. The nation rises with dignity, proving that hope can soar as high as the kites above Lahore, even when shadows linger across the land.

"That would come later. First, we have to give shape to the board, form a structure, set up a secretariat and define its direction," he added. Pakistan is among the 14 countries that signed the charter of the Board of Peace on January 22 on the sidelines of the World Economic Forum in Davos, becoming a founding member of the body. The board was initially proposed in September 2025 and formally established last month. Under its charter, the US government serves as its official depository. President Trump has designated the Donald J. Trump Institute of Peace in Washington as the board's headquarters. The White House has proposed holding the first BoP meeting at the US Institute of Peace in Washington, according to an Axios report citing a US official and diplomats from four participating countries. The plans, which include a fundraising component for Gaza's reconstruction, remain at an early stage and could still change.

occupation [...] something nations take pride in," said Meshal, who previously headed the group. On Sunday, Meshal urged the Board of Peace to adopt what he called a "balanced approach" that would allow for Gaza's reconstruction and the flow of aid to its roughly 2.2 million residents, while warning that Hamas would "not accept foreign rule" over Palestinian territory. "We adhere to our national principles and reject the logic of guardianship, external intervention, or the return of a mandate in any form," Meshal said. "Palestinians are to govern Palestinians. Gaza belongs to the people of Gaza and to Palestine. We will not accept foreign rule," he added.

arrested all individuals linked to the attack, adding that the CTD and other agencies worked together as a team during the operations. During the raids, he said that a KP policeman was martyred and a few others were injured. "We have evidence of how the attacker was trained and how he was brought here. The planning and training were carried out in Afghanistan," the interior minister said. Naqvi said that India was funding terrorist networks, including Daesh, adding that payments to each militant have increased from $500 to $1,500. "India has tripled its terror budget after facing a defeat in May," he said.

Both leaders also exchanged views on bilateral relations, matters of mutual interest, and key regional and international developments. Meanwhile, China also condemned an attack on a mosque in Islamabad, pledging support for the government's efforts to "maintain national security and stability". "China is deeply shocked by the deadly explosion in Islamabad and the heavy casualties it has inflicted. China mourns for the lives lost, and our hearts go out to the injured and those who lost their loved ones," the foreign ministry said in a statement. "China strongly condemns the attack, opposes any form of terrorism and firmly supports the Pakistani government in safeguarding national security and stability and protecting the safety of the people," it added. The condemnation comes in the wake of the deadly attack at Imambargah and Mosque Khadijat-ul-Kubra in Islamabad's Tarlai area during Friday prayers, which left at least 33 people martyred and dozens injured.

ICC deputy chief lands in Lahore, says PCB

BCB president also arrives in Pakistan, set to attend ICC emergency meeting on India match boycott, say sources

DNA

LAHORE: International Cricket Council (ICC) deputy chairman Imran Khwaja reached Lahore on Sunday for talks with the Pakistan Cricket Board (PCB) chief, after Pakistan announced it would boycott its T20 World Cup 2026 match against India. In a post on X, PCB spokesperson Amir Mir said that the ICC deputy chairman is scheduled to meet PCB chairman Mohsin Naqvi today. Earlier, Bangladesh Cricket Board (BCB) President Aminul Islam arrived in the country. During his stay in Pakistan, the BCB chief, sources added, will attend the ICC's emergency meeting later today, with other board members also expected to participate. Islam will also meet the PCB chairman before departing for Dhaka, the sources said.

Meanwhile, an ICC delegation led by its deputy chairman is also due to reach Pakistan at 4:30pm, to discuss the situation arising after Pakistan's boycott of India match. The development comes against the backdrop of Pakistan's decision to boycott its World Cup match against India, scheduled for February 15, amid what the PCB has described as the ICC's biased approach, with Bangladesh playing a central role in the dispute. Tensions flared between the cricket boards of Bangladesh and India after Bangladesh's star pacer Mustafizur Rahman was dropped from the Indian Premier League (IPL) on the directions of the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI), sparking outrage in Dhaka. Later, the BCB requested the ICC to shift its matches outside India, but the international cricket body rejected the plea. Following the BCB's firm stance, the ICC replaced Bangladesh with Scotland in the tournament, saying it was not feasible to change the schedule so close to the February 7 start of the event. Furthermore, the PCB has dismissed reports by Indian media claiming that it had offered dialogue to the ICC to resolve the issue surrounding its decision to boycott the India match. PCB spokesperson Amir Mir issued the rebuttal after Indian journalist Vikrant Gupta claimed that the PCB had reached out to the ICC for dialogue on the India-Pakistan World Cup game. Any clash between arch-rivals India and Pakistan is one of the most lucrative fixtures in cricket, worth millions of dollars in broadcast, sponsorship and advertising revenue. In commercial terms, the overall value of a single India-Pakistan T20 match is estimated at around $500 million, or approximately INR45,000 crore, when broadcast rights, advertising premiums, sponsorship activations, ticket sales and downstream commercial activity are taken into account. According to a report, advertising slots during an India-Pakistan T20 match command between INR25 lakh and INR40 lakh for a 10-second spot, significantly higher than even knockout matches involving India against other top teams. The most immediate financial impact would be felt by the official broadcast rights holder, as advertising revenue from the India-Pakistan match alone is estimated at around INR300 crore, the Indian publication cited industry projections as suggesting. The BCB chief's reported arrival in Pakistan is also being viewed in the context of earlier Indian media reports claiming that the ICC was seeking back-channel talks with the PCB and had tasked its deputy chairman Imran Khwaja, to engage with the Pakistani board on the issue.

Seifert, Phillips shine as New Zealand beat Afghanistan by 5 wickets

TIM Seifert's fifty and Glenn Phillips's 42 off 25 balls propelled New Zealand to a five-wicket win over Afghanistan in the fourth match of the ICC Men's T20 World Cup 2026 at MA Chidambaram Stadium on Sunday. Set to chase a daunting 183-run target, the Blackcaps struck the winning runs for the loss of five wickets and 13 balls to spare, courtesy of the third-wicket partnership between Seifert and Glenn Phillips. New Zealand had a contrasting start to the pursuit as Mujeeb Ur Rahman dismissed Finn Allen (one) and Rachin Ravindra (zero) on successive deliveries in the second over. With the scoreboard reading 14/2 in 1.4 overs, Phillips joined Seifert in the middle, and the duo raised an emphatic recovery by putting together 74 runs for the third wicket at a brisk pace. Afghanistan captain Rashid Khan eventually broke the threatening partnership in the 10th over by dismissing Phillips, who made 42 off 25 deliveries with the help of seven fours and a six. Seifert was then involved in a 36-run partnership for the fourth wicket with Mark Chapman until eventually walking back after top-scoring with a 42-ball 65, studded with 10 boundaries, including three sixes. New Zealand then suffered another setback in the 16th over, with 28 runs still required, as Chapman perished after scoring a 17-ball 28, featuring two fours and a six. But Daryl Mitchell and captain Mitchell Santner ensured there were no further hiccups in New Zealand's pursuit and steered them over the line with an unbeaten 33-run partnership off 13 deliveries. Mitchell made an unbeaten 25 off 14 deliveries, while Santner remained not out with an eight-ball 17. – Agencies

UN mission in Geneva to serve as Ambassador to Saudi Arabia, taking over from Ahmed Farooq, who is set to return to headquarters in Islamabad after completing his tenure. Other significant moves include Mudassar Tipu (or Mudassir Tipu) relocating from Iran to become Ambassador to Uzbekistan, while Salman (previously based at the Prime Minister's House) has been named Ambassador to Germany. Sania Afzal Qazi takes up the role of Ambassador to Thailand, bolstering ties in Southeast Asia. Additional appointments cover Asim Ali Khan as Ambassador to Norway, Asad Shahzad as Ambassador to Uganda, Siraj Ahmad Khan as Consul General in Los Angeles, and Muhammad Faisal Abroo as Consul General in Montreal. The broad scope of these transfers underscores Islamabad's ongoing efforts to adapt its diplomatic cadre to evolving regional priorities and prepare for leadership transitions within the Foreign Office. Pakistan Ambassadors in China and Greece are likely to continue despite expiry of their tenures. Reports suggest they have been granted an extension in service.

"Some recent media reports and social media posts concerning the 'Epstein files' are attempting to link His Holiness the Dalai Lama with Jeffrey Epstein," the leader's office said in a statement posted on X. "We can unequivocally confirm that His Holiness has never met Jeffrey Epstein or authorised any meeting or interaction with him by anyone on His Holiness's behalf," it added. On Thursday, state-run broadcaster CGTN reported that "Dalai Lama" appeared at least 169 times in the Epstein files and mentioned an email in which an unknown sender told Epstein he was considering going to an event the Dalai Lama was set to attend. The 90-year-old Nobel Peace Prize winner fled the Tibetan capital Lhasa at the age of 23 after Chinese troops crushed an uprising in 1959. He now lives in exile in the northern Indian town of Dharamsala and leads a push for greater autonomy for Tibetans that China has condemned, calling the spiritual leader a rebel and a separatist. A search into the Epstein files, released by the US DOJ and accessed by AFP produced 154 results about the Dalai Lama.

Iran and the US held five rounds of nuclear talks last year, which stalled mainly due to disagreements over uranium enrichment inside Iran. In June, the US attacked Iranian nuclear facilities at the end of a 12-day Israeli bombing campaign. Tehran has since said it has halted enrichment activity, which the US views as a possible pathway to nuclear bombs. Iran says its nuclear programme is solely for peaceful purposes. A diplomat in the region briefed by Iran told Reuters on Friday that Tehran was open to discussing the "level and purity" of enrichment as well as other arrangements, as long as it was allowed to enrich uranium on its soil and would be granted sanctions relief in addition to military de-escalation. "Iran's insistence on enrichment is not merely technical or economic (...), it is rooted in a desire for independence and dignity," Araqchi said. "No one has the right to tell the Iranian nation what it should or should not have." The minister also said that Iran's missile programme, which the US would like to include in negotiations, had never been part of the agenda. President Masoud Pezeshkian said in a post on Sunday that talks with the US were a "step forward" and that Tehran wanted its rights under the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty to be respected. The date and venue of the next round of talks will be determined in consultation with Oman and might not be Muscat, Araqchi said.

Top Hamas leader rejects disarmament or 'foreign rule'

DOHA: A senior Hamas leader said Sunday that the Palestinian Islamist movement would not surrender its weapons nor accept foreign intervention in Gaza, pushing back against US and Israeli demands. "Criminalizing the resistance, its weapons, and those who carried it out is something we should not accept," Khaled Meshal said at a conference in Doha. "As long as there is occupation, there is resistance. Resistance is a right of peoples under occupation ... something nations take pride in," said Meshal, who previously headed the group. Hamas, an Islamist movement, has waged an armed struggle against what it sees as Israel's occupation of Palestinian territories. It launched a deadly cross-border raid into Israel from Gaza on October 7, 2023, which triggered the latest war. A US-brokered ceasefire in Gaza is in its second phase, which foresees that demilitarization of the territory — including the disarmament of Hamas — along with a gradual withdrawal of Israeli forces. Hamas has repeatedly said that disarmament is a red line, although it has indicated it could consider handing over its weapons to a future Palestinian governing authority.—APP

Syrian authorities bust smuggling ring, tighten border controls

DAMASCUS: Syrian Coast Guard forces have arrested members of a people-smuggling network operating in the western town of Tartus, the Syrian Arab News Agency reported on Saturday. Authorities pounced on the smugglers as they were about to illegally take passengers from the Tartus coast to Cyprus, SANA said, citing a statement from the General Authority of Ports and Customs "The operation resulted in the arrest of all those involved, including the organizers of the trip," the report said, adding that the smugglers' boat tried to escape as Coast Guard vessels surrounded it, but collided with rocks. No details were available on how many suspects were arrested and how many passengers were rescued. Criminal charges are being prepared against the arrested suspects, SANA said. In a separate move to regulate trade and border security, the ports and customs authority issued a new policy restricting truck access at land crossings and seaports. Commercial trucks will now be permitted entry for loading or unloading only upon presentation of an original receipt from the ministry of transport's freight office. The transfer of cargo between Syrian and non-Syrian vehicles must now take place strictly within designated customs yards at border crossings. Trucks passing through Syria in transit are allowed, provided they are under a mandatory customs escort between entry and exit points.—APP

Over 2,200 Daesh detainees transferred to Iraq from Syria

BAGHDAD: Iraq has so far received 2,225 Daesh group detainees, whom the US military began transferring from Syria last month, an Iraqi official told AFP on Saturday. They are among up to 7,000 Daesh detainees whose transfer from Syria to Iraq the US Central Command (CENTCOM) announced last month, in a move it said was aimed at "ensuring that the terrorists remain in secure detention facilities." Previously, they had been held in prisons and camps administered by the Kurdish-led Syrian Democratic Forces (SDF) in northeast Syria. The announcement of the transfer plan last month came after US envoy to Syria Tom Barrack declared that the SDF's role in confronting Daesh had come to an end.—APP

ing a more focused approach, introducing clear performance trackers, and ensuring more robust and effective implementation mechanisms to translate commitments into tangible outcomes.

Japan's Takaichi set for big election win, exit poll shows

TOKYO: Japanese Prime Minister Sanae Takaichi's party is set to secure a big majority in Japan's lower house in an election on Sunday, public broadcaster NHK forecast, based on exit polls. Takaichi's Liberal Democratic Party is set to win 274 to 328 of the 465 seats in the chamber, well above the 233 needed for a majority, according to NHK. Together with coalition partner the Japan Innovation Party, known as Ishin, she could control up to 366 of the seats. Japan's first female prime minister, 64, called the rare winter snap election to capitalize on her buoyant personal approval ratings since she was elevated to lead the ruling LDP late last year. Voters have been drawn to her straight-talking, hardworking image, but her nationalistic leanings and emphasis on security have strained ties with powerful neighbor China, while her promises of tax cuts have rattled financial markets. Residents trudged through snow to cast their ballots with record snowfall in parts of the country snarling traffic and requiring some polling stations to close early. It is only the third postwar election held in February, with elections typically called during milder months. Outside a polling station in the town of Unuma in the mountainous Niigata prefecture, teacher Kazushige Cho, 54, braved below-freezing temperatures and deep snow to cast his vote for Takaichi's Liberal Democratic Party. "It feels like she's creating a sense of direction — like the whole country pulling together and moving forward. That really resonates with me," he said. But Takaichi's election promise to suspend the 8 percent sales tax on food to help households cope with rising prices has spooked investors concerned about how the nation with the heaviest debt burden among advanced economies will fund the plan. "If Takaichi wins big, she will have more political room to follow through on key commitments, including on consumption-tax cuts," said Seiji Inada, managing director at FGS Global, a consultancy. "Markets could react in the following days, and the yen could come under renewed pressure." Niigata resident Mineko Mori, 74, padding through the snow with her dog, said she worried that Takaichi's tax cuts could saddle future generations with an even bigger burden. But younger voters are among the most supportive of Takaichi, with one recent poll finding more than 90 percent of those under 30 favored her. The prime minister has sparked an unlikely youth-led craze called "sanakatsu," roughly translated as "San-ae-mania," with the products she uses, such as her handbag and the pink pen she scribbles notes with in parliament, in high demand. On Thursday, Takaichi received the "total endorsement" of US President Donald Trump. China will also be keeping a close eye on the results. Weeks after taking office, Takaichi touched off the biggest dispute with China in over a decade by publicly outlining how Tokyo might respond to a Chinese attack on Taiwan.—APP

Palestinians attempt to use Gaza's Rafah Border crossing amidst delays

CAIRO: Palestinians on both sides of the crossing between Gaza and Egypt, which opened last week for the first time since 2024, were making their way to the border on Sunday in hopes of crossing, one of the main requirements for the US-backed ceasefire. The opening comes as Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu is expected to travel to Washington this week, though the major subject of discussion will be Iran, his office said. The Rafah Crossing opened to a few Palestinians in each direction last week, after Israel retrieved the body of the last hostage held in Gaza and several American officials visited Israel to press for the opening. Over the first four days of the crossing's opening, just 36 Palestinians requiring medical care were allowed to leave for Egypt, plus 62 companions, according to United Nations data. Palestinian officials say nearly 20,000 people in Gaza are seeking to leave for medical care that they say is not available in the war-shattered territory. The few who have succeeded in crossing described delays and allegations of mistreatment by Israeli forces and other groups involved in the crossing, including and an Israeli-backed Palestinian armed group, Abu Shabab. A group of Palestinian patients and wounded gathered Sunday morning in the courtyard of a Red Crescent hospital in Gaza's southern city of Khan Younis, before making their way to the Rafah crossing with Egypt for treatment abroad, family members told The Associated Press. Amjad Abu Jedian, who was injured in the war, was scheduled to leave Gaza for medical treatment on the first day of the crossing's reopening, but only five patients were allowed to travel that day, his mother, Raja Abu Jedian, said. Abu Jedian was shot by an Israeli sniper while he was building traditional bathrooms in the central Bureij refugee camp in July 2024, she said. On Saturday, his family received a call from the World Health Organization notifying them that he is included in the group that will travel on Sunday, she said. "We want them to take care of the patients (during their evacuation)," she said. "We want the Israeli military not to burden them." The Israeli defense branch that oversees the operation of the crossing did not immediately confirm the opening. A group of Palestinians also arrived Sunday morning at the Egyptian side of the Rafah crossing border to return to the Gaza Strip, Egypt's state-run Al-Qahera News satellite television reported. Palestinians who returned to Gaza in the first few days of the crossing's operation described hours of delays and invasive searches by Israeli authorities and an Israeli-backed Palestinian armed group, Abu Shabab. A European Union mission and Palestinian officials run the border crossing, and Israel has its screening facility some distance away. The crossing was reopened on Feb. 2 as part of a fragile ceasefire deal that stopped the war between Israel and Hamas. Amid confusion around the reopening, the Rafah crossing was closed Friday and Saturday. The Rafah crossing, an essential lifeline for Palestinians in Gaza, was the only crossing not controlled by Israel prior to the war. Israel seized the Palestinian side of Rafah in May 2024, though traffic through the crossing was heavily restricted even before that. Restrictions negotiated by Israeli, Egyptian, Palestinian and international officials meant that only 50 people would be allowed to return to Gaza each day and 50 medical patients — along with two companions for each — would be allowed to leave, but far fewer people than expected have crossed in both directions.—APP

Trade focus diplomacy essential to support exporters: Tahir

ISLAMABAD: President Islamabad Chamber of Commerce and Industry (ICCI), Sardar Tahir Mehmood, has stressed the need to further strengthen Pakistan's diplomatic missions to play a proactive and results-oriented role in supporting Pakistani exporters in international markets. In a statement issued here on Saturday, he said that in today's competitive global environment, embassies and consulates must go beyond traditional diplomatic functions and actively facilitate trade promotion, market access, and business matchmaking for Pakistani products and services, said a release issued here on the other day. "Pakistani exporters face intense competition abroad. Our diplomatic missions can serve as effective bridges between local businesses and foreign markets by providing timely market intelligence, facilitating B2B connections, and addressing trade-related challenges," Sardar Tahir Mehmood stated. The ICCI President emphasized that commercial sections of embassies should be adequately staffed, professionally trained, and closely coordinated with chambers of commerce and trade bodies to ensure that exporters receive practical and targeted support. He noted that enhanced engagement between diplomatic missions and the private sector would help diversify export destinations, promote value-added products, and strengthen Pakistan's trade footprint globally. Sardar Tahir Mehmood further said that sustained coordination between the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Ministry of Commerce, and the business community is essential to translate diplomatic presence into tangible trade outcomes. Reaffirming ICCI's commitment, he said that the Chamber stands ready to collaborate with relevant government institutions to provide business input, exporter feedback, and market insights to Pakistan's missions abroad. He expressed confidence that a more trade-focused diplomatic approach would contribute significantly to export-led growth, job creation, and overall economic stability.—DNA

Pakistan, Uzbekistan embrace renewed bilateral coop commitments

Among the major outcomes was a protocol expanding the list of goods under the Preferential Trade Agreement, along with the establishment of a Pakistan-Uzbekistan Inter-Regional Forum to promote business-to-business cooperation. The two sides also signed an MoU between their foreign ministries and an action plan for defence cooperation

ISLAMABAD :Uzbekistan President Shavkat Mirziyoyev's state visit to Pakistan marked a major breakthrough in bilateral relations, and a renewed cooperation commitment with the two countries signing 28 agreements and memoranda of understanding across multiple sectors and setting a target to raise annual trade to $2 billion. The visit, held amid shifting global trade routes and growing concerns over energy and food security, underscored the shared resolve of Islamabad and Tashkent to deepen economic cooperation and enhance regional connectivity between Central and South Asia. Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif and President Mirziyoyev signed a joint declaration reaffirming their commitment to a stronger strategic partnership. They also concluded a key agreement aimed at expanding bilateral trade to $2 billion over the next five years. The signed documents covered cooperation in foreign affairs, preferential trade, defence, climate change, agriculture, food security, information technology, science, education, culture, maritime affairs, pharmaceuticals, textiles, mining, geosciences, small and medium enterprises, sports and counter-narcotics. Among the major outcomes was a protocol expanding the list of goods under the Preferential Trade Agreement, along with the establishment of a Pakistan-Uzbekistan Inter-Regional Forum to promote business-to-business cooperation. The two sides also signed an MoU between their foreign ministries and an action plan for defence cooperation. To boost trade facilitation, both countries signed an MoU on maritime cooperation, including preferential port arrangements at Karachi, Gwadar and Port Qasim, giving Uzbekistan improved access to sea routes. Agreements were also concluded in industrial cooperation, pharmaceuticals, textiles and support for small and medium enterprises. In the energy and environmental sectors, the two sides signed agreements on ecology, climate change adaptation and disaster risk reduction, reflecting their shared focus on sustainable development and non-traditional security challenges. The countries also signed MoUs on agricultural research, plant protection, food security, information technology, science and education, cultural heritage preservation and sports cooperation. An agreement was reached on combating illicit trafficking in narcotics and another on the exchange of convicted prisoners. The visit highlighted the strategic importance of regional connectivity, particularly through proposed trans-Afghan transport corridors, which both sides view as essential for reducing logistics costs, shortening delivery times and unlocking trade potential between Central Asia and the Arabian Sea. Beyond economic and political agreements, the visit also featured symbolic and academic recognition of the Uzbek president. The National University of Sciences and Technology conferred an honorary Doctor of Philosophy degree and the title of professorship on President Mirziyoyev at a special convocation held at the Prime Minister's House. Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif and NUST Rector Dr Muhammad Zahid Latif presented the honours in recognition of the Uzbek leader's contributions to strengthening bilateral ties and promoting peace, development, education and innovation in the region. The citation noted President Mirziyoyev's role in steering Uzbekistan through political, economic and social reforms, expanding investments in higher education, research and digital transformation, and fostering collaboration between government, academia and industry. President Mirziyoyev described Pakistan as a close friend and reliable partner, while Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif said the agreements reflected the political will of both sides to build a stable, interconnected and prosperous region. The signing of the 28 accords, the ambitious trade target and the symbolic honours together signalled a new phase in Pakistan-Uzbekistan relations, anchored in connectivity, economic cooperation and shared development goals.—DNA

Czech PM in favor of social media ban for under-15s

PRAGUE: Czech Prime Minister Andrej Babis said on Sunday he was in favor of banning the use of social media by children under 15, as a growing number of European countries consider similar restrictions. Countries including Spain, Greece, Britain and France are weighing tougher stances on social media use due to concern over the perceived negative effects on children, after Australia in December became the first nation to prohibit access to such platforms for the under-16s. "I am in favor because the experts I know say that it is terribly harmful to children. We must protect our children," Babis said in a regular video message posted on several of his social media accounts on Sunday, without giving further details. Later in the day, the government's first deputy prime minister, Karel Havlicek, told a television chat show on private broadcaster CNN Prima News that the cabinet was seriously considering proposing a ban. If it decides to go ahead, Havlicek said legislation would be proposed this year. Spain and Greece proposed bans on social media use by teenagers last week, as attitudes hardened in Europe against technology some say is designed to be addictive. The measures announced by Spanish Prime Minister Pedro Sanchez drew fury from Elon Musk, the billionaire owner of the X platform, formerly Twitter. Britain is considering an Australia-style ban, while France is working through legislation to ban children aged under 15 from social media use.—APP

Bangladesh seeks UN help to probe killing of uprising leader

DHAKA: Bangladesh has requested assistance from the United Nations human rights office for an investigation into the killing of Sharif Osman Hadi, a popular leader in the country's 2024 youth-led uprising, the government said Sunday. The Bangladeshi mission in Geneva had sent a diplomatic note requesting the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) to support a "fair, impartial and expeditious" probe into the killing, the interim government's press wing said. "The note requests technical and institutional assistance from the UN human rights office to support the investigation," it added. Hadi, 32, was shot by masked assailants in Dhaka last December and later died of his injuries at a hospital in Singapore. His death set off a wave of violent protests. Hadi had planned to run as an independent candidate in polls taking place on Thursday to determine the country's first elected government since the overthrow of former prime minister Sheikh Hasina. The interim government, which is led by Nobel laureate Muhammad Yunus, also reiterated its commitment to ensuring "the highest standards of transparency and accountability" in the case and pledged to identify and prosecute those responsible.

Iranian and US officials held indirect nuclear talks in the Omani capital Muscat on Friday. Both sides said more talks were expected soon.

A regional diplomat briefed by Tehran on the talks told Reuters Iran insisted on its "right to enrich uranium" during the negotiations with the US, and that Tehran's missile capabilities were not raised in the discussions. Iranian officials have ruled out putting Iran's missiles - one of the largest such arsenals in the Middle East - up for discussion, and have said Tehran wants recognition of its right to enrich uranium. "The Prime Minister believes any negotiations must include limitations on ballistic missiles and a halting of the support for the Iranian axis," Netanyahu's office said in a statement.

Gohar demands apology over Tarar's claim linking PTI to terrorism

Controversy erupted after information minister said, "Abb yeh jo dehshatgardi waapis ayi hai, iss kay peechay PTI hai"

STAFF REPORT

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan Tehreek-e-Insaf (PTI) Chairman Barrister Gohar Ali on Saturday decried Information Minister Atta Tarar's accusation that Khyber Pakhtunkhwa's ruling party was the reason behind the ongoing wave of terrorism, calling it reckless and divisive at a time of national mourning. The minister gave the remarks at a press conference in Lahore alongside religious scholars, aiming to express solidarity and national unity after Friday's suicide attack at an Islamabad imambargah. Referring indirectly to ex-premier Imran Khan's plan to settle fighters from the outlawed Tehreek-e-Taliban Pakistan (TTP) in civilian areas, Tarar said the same thinking was behind the current surge in violence. Tarar also remarked, with a smile, that "Abb yeh jo dehshatgardi waapis ayi hai, iss kay peechay PTI hai (the PTI is behind this resurgence of terrorism)." In his condemnatory reaction, Gohar called the minister's statement "irresponsible" and said he should apologise immediately. "People are grieving, funerals are being held, and nation needs unity at this time."

Indian refiners avoid Russian oil in push for US trade deal

Indian refiners may change their plan and place orders for Russian oil only if advised by govt, say sources

NEWS DESK

NEW DELHI: Indian refiners are avoiding Russian oil purchases for delivery in April and are expected to stay away from such trades for longer, refining and trade sources said, a move that could help New Delhi seal a trade pact with Washington. The US and India moved closer to a trade pact on Friday, announcing a framework for a deal they hope to conclude by March that would lower tariffs and deepen economic cooperation. Indian Oil, Bharat Petroleum and Reliance Industries are not accepting offers from traders for Russian oil loading in March and April, said a trader who approached the refiners. These refiners, however, had already scheduled some deliveries of Russian oil in March, refining sources said. Most other refiners have stopped buying Russian crude. The three refiners and the oil ministry did not respond to requests for comment. The trade minister on Saturday referred questions about Russian oil to the foreign ministry. A foreign ministry spokesperson said: "Diversifying our energy sourcing in keeping with objective market conditions and evolving international dynamics is at the core of our strategy" to ensure energy security for the world's most-populous nation. Although a US-India statement on the trade framework did not mention Russian oil, President Donald Trump rescinded his 25% tariffs on Indian goods, imposed over Russian oil purchases, because, he said, New Delhi had "committed to stop directly or indirectly" importing Russian oil. New Delhi has not announced plans to halt Russian oil imports. India became the top buyer of discounted Russian seaborne crude after Russia invaded Ukraine in 2022, spurring a backlash from Western nations that had targeted Russia's energy sector with sanctions aimed at curtailing Moscow's revenue and making it harder to fund the war. One regular Indian buyer is Russia-backed private refiner Nayara, which relies solely on Russian oil for its 400,000-barrel-per-day refinery. Sources said Nayara may be allowed to keep buying Russian oil because other crude sellers pulled back after the European Union sanctioned the refiner in July. Nayara also does not plan to import Russian crude in April due to a month-long refinery maintenance shutdown, a source familiar with its operations said. Nayara did not respond to an email seeking comment. Indian refiners may change their plan and place orders for Russian oil only if advised by the government, sources said. Trump's order said US officials would monitor and recommend reinstating the tariffs if India resumed oil procurement from Russia. Sources said last month that India was preparing to cut Russian oil imports below 1 million bpd by March, with volumes eventually falling to 500,000-600,000 bpd, compared with an average 1.7 million bpd last year. India's Russian oil imports topped two million bpd in mid-2025. The intake of Russian oil by India, the world's third-biggest oil consumer and importer, declined to its lowest level in two years in December, data from trade and industry sources show.

Pre-Ramazan
spike pinching consumers

NAZIR SIYAL

KARACHI: The prices of tomatoes, onions, potatoes, and other vegetables have started creeping up ahead of the start of Ramazan, after hitting rare seasonal lows, thanks to a winter production glut, while prices of flour varieties and fruits have risen. As the holy month will get underway from the third week of this month, fruit vendors have already started charging higher rates for the most sought-after items like banana, apple and guava. In the flour industry, retailers blame millers for raising rates, while flour millers flatly reject the claim.

As the new Sindh wheat crop will arrive in March, a random market survey ahead of the holy month reveals a price hike in a 20 kg bag of wheat flour to Rs2,500-2,700 from Rs2,400-2,600 two weeks back, followed by a Rs141 per kg increase in fine flour, up from Rs133 per kg. The Sensitive Price Index ending Feb 4 revealed a slight jump in the price of a 10kg bag of wheat to Rs1,100 from Rs1,050 two weeks back. Vegetable, fruit and flour prices rise ahead of holy month Roti makers also complained about a price hike of Rs450 per 50 kg in the fine flour bag, from Rs6,000 to Rs6,450, which may result in a price jump in Roti varieties if the fine flour bag crosses Rs7,000 per 50 kg.

Afghan Taliban have created a worst situation: Zardari

SAIFULLAH ANSAR

ISLAMABAD: President Asif Ali Zardari on Sunday issued renewed warnings about the threats to global peace due to "terrorist organisations operating in Afghanistan", and criticised the Taliban regime's policies, which he said created conditions "similar to or worse than pre-9/11". He made the remarks in a statement thanking world leaders for showing solidarity with Pakistan over the recent attack on an imambargah in Islamabad, which killed 36 people and injured more than 160. The militant group Islamic State (IS) had claimed responsibility for the attack. In a statement issued by the President's Secretariat, Zardari reiterated the Pakistani nation's resolve to combat terrorism and violent ideology. "Pakistan has long maintained that terrorism cannot be confronted by a single country in isolation," he was quoted as saying. Citing Pakistan's experience, he said in the statement that whenever "terrorist groups are allowed space, facilitation or impunity beyond national borders, the consequences are borne by innocent civilians all over the world."

Under such a context, he continued, certain neighbouring countries had become partners in crime by allowing terrorist elements to operate against Pakistan from their soil, while some not only finance them directly but also provide them with technical and military means. "This is a reality that has shaped the regional developments in recent years. Pakistan takes strong exception to the situation in Afghanistan, where the Taliban regime has created conditions similar to or worse than pre-9/11, when terror organisations posed threats to global peace, ending in the 9/11 tragedy," the statement quoted him as saying. The Sept 11, 2001, attacks, also known as 9/11, refer to a series of coordinated plane hijackings by the armed Al Qaeda group, which claimed almost 3,000 lives. Zardari also accused India of "assisting the Taliban regime and threatening not only Pakistan but also the regional and global peace." Following Friday's mosque attack in Islamabad, government officials, including the Defence Minister Khawaja Asif and Interior Minister Mohsin Naqvi, had also blamed "Indian-backed proxies" for carrying out the attack. President Zardari appreciated the international community for expressing solidarity with Pakistan in its fight against terrorism.
